A breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyey influences.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 9.

There's some ill planet reigns:
I must be patient till the heavens look
With an aspect more favourable.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 105.
13
But who can count the stars of heaven?
Who sing their influence on this lower world?
THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 528.

V—Stars: Morning and Evening

14
Star that bringest home the bee,

And sett'st the weary labourer free!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song to the Evening Star.

<sup>1</sup> The morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 7.

<sup>2</sup> There is no light in earth or heaven
But the cold light of stars;
And the first watch of night is given
To the red planet Mars.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 2.

<sup>3</sup> The star that bids the shepherd fold,
Now the top of Heav'n doth hold.

MILTON, Comus, l. 93.

Oft till the star that rose, at ev'ning bright, Toward Heav'n's descent had slop'd his westering wheel.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 30.

So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 168.

Th' evening star, Love's harbinger.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 584.

Fairest of stars, last in the train of night,
If better thou belong not to the dawn,
Sure pledge of day.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 166.

<sup>4</sup> Hither, as to their fountain, other stars
Repairing, in their golden urns draw light,
And hence the morning planet gilds his horns.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 364.

<sup>5</sup> And the daystar arise in your hearts.

New Testament: II Peter, i, 19.

<sup>6</sup> Hesperus bringing together
All that the morning star scattered.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 219.

<sup>8</sup> That full star that ushers in the even.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxxii.

<sup>9</sup> Many a night from yonder ivied casement, ere I went to rest,
Did I look on great Orion sloping slowly to
the west.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 7.

Many a night I saw the Pleiads, rising thro'
the mellow shade,
Glitter like a swarm of fireflies tangled in a silver braid.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 9.

VI—Stars: "My Star"

<sup>10</sup> What matter to me if their star is a world?
Mine has opened its soul to me; therefore I love it.

ROBERT BROWNING, My Star.

My star, God's glow-worm!

ROBERT BROWNING, Popularity.

CARLO-ALBERTO, King of Sardinia. Adopted as the motto of his house, the House of Savoy. When Victor Emmanuel opened the first parliament in Rome, Nov., 1871, the common people peered all day into an unclouded sky searching for the Star of Savoy.

<sup>12</sup> "If thou," he answered, "follow but thy star, Thou canst not miss at last a glorious haven."
(Ed egli a me: "Se tu segui tua stella,
Non puoi fallire al glorioso porto.")

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xv, l. 55. (Cary, tr.)

Courage, brother! do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble,
Trust in God and do the Right.

NORMAN MACLEOD, Trust in God.

<sup>13</sup> A man must stoop sometimes to his star, but he must never lie down to it.

<sup>14</sup> My good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abysm of hell.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 13, l. 145.

<sup>15</sup> What different lots our stars accord!
This babe to be hail'd and woo'd as a Lord!
And that to be shunned like a leper!

One, to the world's wine, honey, and corn,
Another, like Colchester native, born
To its vinegar, only, and pepper.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 105.

I find my zenith doth depend upon
A most auspicious star, whose influence
If now I court not but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop.

<sup>17</sup> Grapples with his evil star.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. lxiv.

VII—Stars and Love

<sup>18</sup> Surely the stars are images of love.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Garden and Bower by the Sea.

<sup>19</sup> When stars are in the quiet skies,
Then most I pine for thee;
Bend on me then thy tender eyes,
As stars look on the sea.

BULWER-LYTTON, When Stars Are in the Quiet Skies.

The stars of the night
Will lend thee their light,
Like tapers clear without number.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece to Julia.

When sunset flows into golden glows,
And the breath of the night is new,
Love finds afar eve's eager star—
That is my thought of you.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, Star Song.

Stars of the summer night!
Far in yon azure deeps
Hide, hide your golden light!
She sleeps! My lady sleeps!
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student: Serenade.
Act i, sc. 3.

When twilight dews are falling soft
Upon the rosy sea, love,
I watch the star, whose beam so oft
Has lighted me to thee, love.
THOMAS MOORE, When Twilight Dews.

Thou lookest on the stars, my Star? Would I were heaven, to look on thee with many eyes!
(Ἀστέρης εἰσαβρεῖς ἀστὴρ ἑμός, εἶθε γενοίμην
Οὐρανός, ὡς πολλοῖς ὁμασιν εἰς σέ βλέπω.)
PLATO, (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 669.)

Or soar aloft to be the Spangled Skies
And gaze upon her with a thousand eyes!
S. T. COLERIDGE, Lines: On an Autumnal
Evening, l. 69.

O that my spirit were yon heaven of night,
Which gazes on thee with its thousand eyes.
SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto ix, st. 36.

Her blue eyes sought the west afar,
For lovers love the western star.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto
iii, st. 24.

VIII—Stars and Science

The starry Galileo, with his woes.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 54.

8
Oh never star
Was lost here but it rose afar.
ROBERT BROWNING, Waring. Pt. ii.
No star is ever lost we once have seen,
We always may be what we might have been.
ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Legend of Provence.
And like a fiery planet mount and burn.
N. P. WILLIS, Parrhasius.

Like the lost pleiad seen no more below.
BYRON, Beppo. St. 14.
Why, who shall talk of thrones, of sceptres riven?
Bowed be our hearts to think of what we are,
When from its height afar
A world sinks thus—and yon majestic heaven

Shines not the less for that one vanished star!
FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Lost Pleiad.
The line from Byron quoted above is used as a motto for this poem.

All for Love, or the Lost Pleiad.
STIRLING COYNE. Title of play, produced in London, 16 Jan., 1838.

A wise man,
Watching the stars pass across the sky,
Remarked:
In the upper air the fireflies move more slowly.

AMY LOWELL, Meditation.

11
Around the ancient track marched, rank on rank,
The army of unalterable law.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Lucifer in Starlight.

The stars of heaven are free because
In amplitude of liberty
Their joy is to obey the laws.
WILLIAM WATSON, The Things That Are
More Excellent. St. 4.

12
Observe how system into system runs,
What other planets circle other suns,
What varied being peoples every star.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 25.

13
At night astronomers agree.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Phyllis's Age. St. 3.
Devotion! Daughter of astronomy!
An undevout astronomer is mad.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 770.

These earthly godfathers of heaven's lights
That give a name to every fixed star
Have no more profit of their shining nights
Than those that walk and know not what they are.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 88.

STATE

See also Government, Nation

Not stones, nor timber, nor the art of building constitute a state; but wherever men are who know how to defend themselves, there is a city and a fortress.

ALCÆUS, Ode. Fragment. (ARISTIDES, Orations.
Vol. ii.) Only a single line remains of the ode, of which Aristides gives this summary:
Fighting men are the city's walls.

What constitutes a State?
Not high-crown'd battlement or labour'd mound,
Thick wall or moated gate;
Not cities proud with spires and turrets
crown'd; . . .
No:—men, high-minded men, . . .
Men who their duties know,
But know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain . . .

These constitute a State.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, An Ode in Imitation of Alcæus.

The noble spirit of the metropolis is the life-blood of the state, collected at the heart.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 37. 19 Mar., 1770.

1 States, as great engines, move slowly.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

2 A thousand years scarce serve to form a state;

An hour may lay it in the dust.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 84.

3 Ah me! what mighty perils wait

The man who meddles with a State.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Duellist. Bk. iii, st. 1.

4 Better one suffer, than a nation grieve.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 416.

But what's one woman's fortune more or less
Beside the schemes of kings!

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Part ii, vi, 3.

It was only one life. What is one life in the affairs of a state?

BENITO MUSSOLINI. (GENERAL SMEDLEY E. BUTLER, Address, before the Contemporary Club, Phila., 19 Jan., 1931.) The Navy Department ordered General Butler court-martialed for making this speech, in which he accused Mussolini of not stopping when his automobile ran down a child, but the order was afterwards countermanded. Mussolini denied that such an incident had ever occurred.)

5 To educate the wise man, the State exists; and with the appearance of the wise man, the State expires.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

6 The men are ripe of Saxon kind

To build an equal state—

To take the statute from the mind,
And make of duty fate.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Ode.

7 A State is never greater than when all its superfluous hands are employed in the service of the public.

DAVID HUME, Essays: Of Commerce.

8 The incredible cunning of the monstrous plan
Whereby the spider State has set its web for Man.

R. U. JOHNSON, The Crowned Republic.

9 States, like men, have their growth, their manhood, their decrepitude, their decay.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Pollio and Calvus.

All empires die of indigestion.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

10 Choosing each stone, and poising every weight,

Trying the measures of the breadth and Height,

Here pulling down, and there erecting new,
Founding a firm state by proportions true.

ANDREW MARVELL, The First Anniversary.

States are not made, nor patched; they grow,
Grow slow through centuries of pain,
And grow correctly in the main,
But only grow by certain laws
Of certain bits in certain jaws.

MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 60.

11 The worth of a State in the long run is the worth of the individuals composing it.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 5.

12 The state is the association of men, and not men themselves; the citizen may perish, and the man remain.

MONTESQUIEU, Spirit of the Laws. Bk. x, ch. 3.

13 The State and the family are for ever at war.

GEORGE MOORE, The Bending of the Bough. Act i.

14 State, but a golden prison, to live in,
And torture free-born minds.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A Farewell to the Vanities of the World.

15 Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 90.

16 Cares of state.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 51.

17 The state has nothing whatever to do with theological errors which do not violate the common rules of morality.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.

18 For as, of all the ways of life, but one—

The path of duty—leads to happiness;

So in their duty States must find at length
Their welfare, and their safety, and their strength.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Carmen Nuptiale. St. 65.

19 Chiefs are mortal, the commonwealth is eternal. (Principes mortales, rempublicam æternam.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 6.

Individuals pass like shadows; but the commonwealth is fixed and eternal.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 11 Feb., 1780.

STATESMAN

See also Government, Politics

20 A constitutional statesman is in general a man of common opinions and uncommon abilities.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 2.

1 It is strange so great a statesman should
Be so sublime a poet.

BULWER-LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 2.

2 A disposition to preserve, and an ability to improve, taken together, would be my standard of a statesman.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

The three ends which a statesman ought to propose to himself in the government of a nation, are—1. Security to possessors; 2. Facility to acquirers; and 3. Hope to all.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 25 June, 1831.

3 Who's in or out, who moves this grand machine,

Nor stirs my curiosity nor spleen:
Secrets of state no more I wish to know
Than secret movements of a puppet-show:
Let but the puppets move, I've my desire,
Unseen the hand which guides the master-wire.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 257.

4 Most statesmen have long noses, which is very lucky because most of them cannot see further than the length of them.

Attributed to PAUL CLAUDEL in the Golden Book, July, 1930, but disclaimed by him in a letter to the compiler.

5 The disencumber'd Atlas of the state.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 394.

6 Statesmen are always sick of one disease,
And a good pension gives them present ease:
That's the specific makes them all content
With any king and any government.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman: Introduction.

7 The world is wearied of statesmen whom democracy has degraded into politicians.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair. Ch. 17.

A statesman makes the occasion, but the occasion makes the politician.

G. S. HILLARD, Life and Services of Daniel Webster.

A statesman is a successful politician who is dead.

THOMAS B. REED. (ROBINSON, Life.) Senator
Henry Cabot Lodge, in a magazine article, told the story of the editor who thereupon telegraphed Reed, "Why don't you die and become a statesman?" To which Reed wired back, "No; fame is the last infirmity of a noble mind."

8 His life has been one great Appropriation Clause. He is a burglar of others' intellects.

... There is no statesman who has committed political petty larceny on so great a scale.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 15 May, 1846, referring to Sir Robert Peel.

9 Art thou a statesman,
And canst not be a hypocrite? Impossible!
Do not distrust thy virtues.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act ii, sc. 1.

10 It is the duty of a minister to stand like a wall of adamant between the people and the sovereign.

GLADSTONE, Speech, at Garston, 14 Nov., 1868.

11 There is one statesman of the present day of whom I always say that he would have escaped making the blunders that he has made if he had only ridden more in omnibuses.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Ser.
ii, ch. 17.

12 D'ye think that statesmen's kindnesses proceed

From any principles but their own need?

SIR ROBERT HOWARD, The Vestal Virgin.

A ginooine statesman should be on his guard,
Ef he must hev beliefs, not to b'lieve 'em tu hard.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 5.

13 In them is plainest taught, and easiest learnt,
What makes a Nation happy, and keeps it so,
What ruins Kingdoms, and lays Cities flat.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 361.
Referring to the great statesmen of England.

14 The minds of some of our statesmen, like the pupil of the human eye, contract themselves the more, the stronger light is shed upon them.

THOMAS MOORE, Corruption and Intolerance: Preface.

15 You can always get the truth from an American statesman after he has turned seventy, or given up all hope of the Presidency.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, 7 Nov., 1860.

16 Statesmen are not only liable to give an account of what they say or do in public, but there is a busy inquiry made into their very meals, beds, marriages, and every other sportive or serious action.

PLUTARCH, Political Precepts.

17 Who would not praise Patricio's high desert,
His hand unstain'd, his uncorrupted heart,
His comprehensive head? all int'rests weigh'd,
All Europe saved, yet Britain not betray'd!

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. iv, l. 94.

<sup>2</sup> The mode of flattery which, being at once safe and efficacious, is the best adapted to the purposes of a statesman, is the flattery of listening.

SIR HENRY TAYLOR, The Statesman, 238.

<sup>3</sup> And statesmen at her council met
Who knew the seasons when to take Occasion by the hand, and make
The bounds of freedom wider yet.

TENNYSON, To the Queen.

Such straws of speech show how blows the wind.
CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 56.

12 I did not care one straw. (Ego non flocci pendere.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 411. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

STRAWBERRY

13 Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did.

DR. WILLIAM BUTLER, referring to the strawberry. (Thomas Fuller, Worthies of England: Suffolk, calls Butler the "Æsculapius of our age." Quoted in Walton's Compleat Angler, 2nd edition, pt. i, ch. 5.)

One of the chiefest doctors of England was wont to say that God could have made, but God never did make, a better berry.

ROGER WILLIAMS, Key Into the Language of America, p. 98. (1643)

14 Strawberries lose their flavor in garden beds.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

15 The strawberry grows underneath the nettle
And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best Neighbour'd by fruit of baser quality.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1, l. 60.

Roses and violets are ever the sweeter and more odoriferous that grow near unto garlic and onions.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

STRENGTH

16 Strengthen me by sympathizing with my strength not my weakness.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table-Talk: Sympathy.

17 Such strength as a man has he should use.
(Quod est, eo decet uti.)

CICERO, De Senectute, Ch. 9, sec. 27.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.
- 4 Success to the strongest, who are always, at last, the wisest and best.
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.
- Not two strong men th' enormous weight could raise,
Such men as live in these degen'rate days.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. v, l. 371; bk. xii, l. 539. (Pope, tr.)
- 5 It is not strength, but art, obtains the prize, And to be swift is less than to be wise.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiii, l. 383. (Pope, tr.)
- Brute strength bereft of reason falls by its own weight. (Vis consili expers mole ruit sua.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 65.
- 'Tis slight, not strength, that gives the greatest lift.
MIDDLETON, Michaelmas Term. Act iv, sc. 1.
- What is strength without a double share Of wisdom? vast, unwieldy, burdensome, Proudly secure, yet liable to fall By weakest subtleties, not made to rule, But to subserve where wisdom bears command.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 53.
- 6 Their strength is to sit still.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 7.
- 7 They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 31.
- 8 Only be thou strong and very courageous.
Old Testament: Joshua, i, 7.
- 9 But noble souls, through dust and heat, Rise from disaster and defeat
The stronger.
LONGFELLOW, The Sifting of Peter. St. 7.
- 10 And weaponless himself, Made arms ridiculous.

II—Study: The Smell of the Lamp

10 Thy words smell of the apron.

ANTIGONUS I, to Aristodemus, supposed to be a cook's son, when the latter advised him to moderate his gifts and expenses. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

11 Knowledge . . . will smell of the lamp.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Preface. (1820)

12 This little volume of mine smelleth of the oil and candle.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis. N 1. (1577)

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON. (Nugæ Antiquæ. Vol. ii, p. 190.) 1608.

Your last letter, . . . I found it smelt of the lamp.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, No.
21. (1647)

13 A work not smelling of the lamp.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News: Prologue.

14 They smell of the lamp. (Ἐλλυχνίων ὀρεν.)

PYTHEAS, referring to the orations of Demosthenes, and alluding to the underground cave which the philosopher used as a study,
and which was lighted only by a lamp.
Demosthenes retorted, "Yes, but your lamp and mine, my friend, do not witness the same labors." (PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes: Sec. 8.) In his Life of Timoleon, Plutarch applies the expression to over-finished paintings, as well as to labored writing. The Latin proverb is, "Lucernam olet."

The saying of Pytheas is common and much spoken of, that the orations of Demosthenes smelled all of the candle, for that the same did in the night season write and record such things as he had to say to the people in the day time.

ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 379.) 1542.

15 A man who thinks much of his words as he writes them will generally leave behind him work that smells of oil.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Autobiography. Ch. 10.

III—Study: Its Virtues

16 Studies serve for delight, for ornament, and for ability.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Histories make men wise; poets, witty; the mathematics, subtle; natural philosophy, deep; moral, grave; logic and rhetoric, able to contend.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

The faithful study of the liberal arts humanizes character. (Ingenuas deducisse fideliter artes Emollit mores.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 9, l. 47.

17 Hiving wisdom with each studious year.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 107.

18 We spent them not in toys, in lusts, or wine,
But search of deep philosophy,
Wit, eloquence, and poetry;
Arts which I lov'd, for they, my friend, were thine.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, *On the Death of Mr.
William Harvey*.

19 Beholding the bright countenance of truth in the quiet and still air of delightful studies.

MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Introduction. Bk. ii.

1 Common studies, pursued in the same spirit, in all civilized countries, form, beyond the restrictions of diverse and often hostile nationalities, a great country which no war profanes, no conqueror menaces.

GASTON PARIS, Address, Collège de France, 1870.

2 For sure no minutes bring us more content, Than those in pleasing, useful studies spent.

JOHN POMFRET, The Choice, l. 31.

3 What is the end of study? let me know. Why, that to know, which else we should not know.

Things hid and barr'd, you mean, from common sense?

Ay, that is study's god-like recompense.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 55.

Balk logic with acquaintance that you have, And practise rhetoric in your common talk; Music and poesy use to quicken you; The mathematics and the metaphysics Fall to them as you find your stomach serves you;

No profit grows where is no pleasure ta'en; In brief, sir, study what you most affect.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 34.

4 One of the best methods of rendering study agreeable is to live with able men, and to suffer all those pangs of inferiority which the want of knowledge always inflicts.

SYDNEY SMITH, On the Conduct of the Understanding. Lecture 2.

5 With unwearied fingers drawing out The lines of life, from living knowledge hid.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto ii, st. 48.

IV—Study: Its Faults

6 To spend too much time in studies is sloth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

7 Who studies ancient laws and rites, Tongues, arts and arms, and history, Must drudge, like Selden, days and nights, And in the endless labour die.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Who Strives to Mount Parnassus' Hill.

8 Much study had made him very lean, And pale, and leaden-eyed.

HOOD, The Dream of Eugene Aram, l. 29.

9 We learn our lessons not for life, but for the lecture-room. (Non vitæ sed scholæ decimus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cvi, 12. The studious class are their own victims; they are thin and pale, their feet are cold, their heads are hot, the night is without sleep, the day a fear of interruption,—pallor, squalor, hunger, and egotism.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

10 Study is like the heaven's glorious sun

That will not be deep-search'd with saucy looks:

Small have continual plodders ever won

Save base authority from others' books.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 84.

So study evermore is overshot:

While it doth study to have what it would

It doth forget to do the thing it should,

And when it hath the thing it hunteth most,

'Tis won as towns with fire, so won, so lost.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 143.

STYLE

I—Style: Definitions

BUFFON, Discourse, at reception into French Academy, 1750,

The style is the man; and some will add that, thus unsupported, it does not amount to much of a man. It is a sort of fighting and profane parody of the Old Testament.

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Victorian Age in Literature, p. 185. Referring to Swinburne.

1 It is most true, stylus virum arguit,—our style bewrays us.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

A chaste and lucid style is indicative of the same personal traits in the author.

HOSEA BALLOU, Sermons.

2 And, after all, it is style alone by which posterity will judge of a great work, for an author can have nothing truly his own but his style.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Miscellanies: Style.

3 A man's style is his mind's voice.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 457.

The style of an author should be the image of his mind, but the choice and command of language is the fruit of exercise.

EDWARD GIBBON, Miscellaneous Works. Vol. i, p. 145.

4 Form is the Golden Vase wherein Thought, that fleeting essence, is preserved to Posterity.

ANATOLE FRANCE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 29.)

5 What is called style in writing or speaking is formed very early in life, while the imagination is warm and impressions are permanent.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 185.

Style! style! why, all writers will tell you that it is the very thing which can least of all be changed. A man's style is nearly as much a part of him as his physiognomy, his figure, the throbbing of his pulse,—in short, as any part of his being is at least subjected to the action of the will.

FÉNELON, Dialogues sur l'Eloquence.

6 Master alike in speech and song
Of fame's great antiseptic—Style,
You with the classic few belong

Who tempered wisdom with a smile.

J. R. LOWELL, To Oliver Wendell Holmes on His Seventy-fifth Birthday. St. 15.

7 Wit belongs to the man, style to the author.

MAUPERTUIS, Letter to Frederick the Great, 19 Nov., 1745.

PETRARCH, Morte di Laura. Sonnet 68.

9 Expression is the dress of thought, and still Appears more decent as more suitable.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 118. (1712)

Style is the dress of thoughts.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. 24 Nov., 1749.

Dress covers the mortal body and adorns it, but style is the vehicle of the spirit.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Miss Harcourt, 1842.

Style is what gives value and currency to thought.

AMIEL, Journal: Introduction.

10 Style, after all, rather than thought, is the immortal thing in literature.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Writing of Essays.

II—Style: Good Style

11 Sound words, I know, Timothy is to use,
And old wives' fables he is to refuse;
But yet grave Paul him nowhere did forbid
The use of parables; in which lay hid
That gold, those pearls, and precious stones that were

Worth digging for, and that with greatest care.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

May I not write in such a style as this?
In such a method, too, and yet not miss
My end—thy good?

12 Nor can one word be chang'd but for a worse.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 192. (Pope, tr.)

A strict and succinct style is that, where you can take away nothing without loss, and that loss to be manifest.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consuetudo.

13 Clear arrangement. (Lucidus ordo.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 41.

14 With a nice taste and care in weaving words together, you will express yourself most happily, if a skillful setting makes a familiar word new. (In verbis etiam tenuis cautusque serendis Dixeris egregie, notum si callida verbum Reddidit junctura novum.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 46.

It has ever been, and ever will be, permitted to issue words stamped with the mint-mark of the day. (Licuit semperque licebit Signatum præ-sente nota producere nomen.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 58.

A man coins not a new word without some peril and less fruit; for if it happen to be received, the praise is but moderate; if refused, the scorn is assured.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Orationis Dignitate.

15 Well-rounded phrase. (Ore rotundo.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica. l. 323. The words are applied to style, not utterance, although commonly quoted as referring to the latter.

Your language is that of the toga, skilled in clever phrasing, rounded but not full-mouthed. (Verba togæ sequeris junctura callidus acri, Ore tereb modico.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 14. That is, the language of the cultivated class.

1 The chief virtue of a style is perspicuity, and nothing so vicious in it to need an interpreter. Words borrowed of antiquity do lend a kind of majesty to style, and are not without their delight sometimes. For they have the authority of years, and out of their intermission do win themselves a kind of grace-like newness. But the eldest of the present, and newness of the past language are best.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consuetudo.

2 Before employing a fine word, find a place for it. (Avant d'employer un beau mot, faites-lui une place.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 302.

3 I think that too many stops stop the way, and that every sixth or seventh is uncalled for.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to John Forster, 1854. Of punctuation.

4 A careful felicity of style. (Curiosa felicitas.) PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 118.

5 When an old phrase fits the occasion, it's well used. (Scitumst, per tempus si obviamst, verbum vetus.)

PLAUTUS, Pœnulus, l. 135. (Act i, sc. 1.)

6 Style has no fixed laws; it is changed by the usage of the people, never the same for any length of time. (Oratio certam regulam non habet; consuetudo illam civitatis, quæ numquam in eodem diu stetit, versat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 13.

7 The word is well culled, chose, sweet and apt, I do assure you, sir, I do assure.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 1, l. 98.

Proper words in proper places.

(Tous les genres sont bons, hors le genre ennuyeux.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Enfant Prodigue: Preface.

10 That graceful manner of thinking in Virgil seems to me to be more than style, if I do not refine too much: and I admire, I confess, Mr. Addison's phrase, that Virgil "tossed about his dung with an air of majesty."

WALPOLE, Letter to John Pinkerton, 26 June, 1785.

III—Style: Bad Style

11 That's not good language that all understand not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

That must be fine, for I understand nothing of it. (Oui, ça est si beau, que je n'y entends goutte.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 4.

12 We say it is a fleshy style, when there is much periphrasis and circuit of words; and when, with more than enough, it grows fat and corpulent; arvina orationis, full of suet and tallow.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Carnosa.

The fleshy gentlemen [Swinburne, Baudelaire and Rossetti] have bound themselves by solemn league and covenant to extol fleshliness as the distinct and supreme end of poetic and pictorial art.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Fleshly School of Poetry.

13 The gloomy comparisons of a disturbed imagination, the melancholy madness of poetry without the inspiration.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 7.

14 It frequently happens that where the second line is sublime, the third, in which he meant to rise still higher, is perfect bombast.

LONGINUS, On the Sublime. Sec. 3. Referring to Lucan's style.

That passage is what I call the sublime dashed to pieces by cutting too close with the fiery four-in-hand round the corner of nonsense.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk. 20 Jan., 1834.

15 Ornate rhetoric taught out of the rule of Plato.

MILTON, Tractate of Education.

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise, Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation, Figures pedantical; these summer-flies Have blown me full of maggot ostentation.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 407.

Flowers of rhetoric, in sermons and serious discourses, are like the blue and red flowers in corn, pleasing to them who come only for amusement, but prejudicial to him who would reap the profit.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

The flowery style is not unsuitable to public speeches or addresses, which amount only to compliment. The lighter beauties are in their place when there is nothing more solid to say; but the flowery style ought to be banished from a pleading, a sermon, or a didactic work.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Style.

1 Some by old words to fame have made pretence,

Ancients in phrase, mere moderns in their sense;

Such labour'd nothings, in so strange a style, Amaze the unlearn'd, and make the learned smile.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 124.

In a style, to be sure, of remarkable fullness, But which nobody reads on account of its dullness.

J. G. SAXE, Pyramus and Thisbe.

2 It is no less degenerate to use no words except those which are striking, high-sounding, and poetical, avoiding what is familiar and usual. (Quam nolle nisi splendidis uti ac sonantibus et poeticis, necessaria atque in usu posita vitare.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 14.

It begins to hunt for novelties in speech, summing and displaying obsolete and old fashioned words, or coining and misshaping unknown words.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 10.

With others it is not so much an arrangement of words, as it is a setting to music, so wheedling and soft is their gliding style.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 16.

3 Base is the style and matter mean withall.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 44.

4 His style is chaos illumined by flashes of lightning. As a writer, he has mastered everything except language.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. Referring to George Meredith.

SUCCESS

I—Success: Definitions

5 Have little care that Life is brief,
And less that Art is long.

Success is in the silences

Though Fame is in the song.

BLISS CARMAN, Songs from Vagabondia: Envoy.

6 In all things, success depends upon previous preparation, and without such preparation there is sure to be failure.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.)

7 Success is the child of Audacity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Iskander. Ch. 4.

8 The secret of success is constancy to purpose.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 24 June, 1870.

9 The things you must scramble and elbow for are not worth having; not one of them. They are the swill of life, my son; leave them to swine.

E. S. MARTIN, A Father to His Freshman Son.

10 There is only one success—to be able to spend your life in your own way.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 85.

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much.

MRS. A. J. STANLEY, What Constitutes Success.

11 Only he is successful in his business who makes that pursuit which affords him the highest pleasure sustain him.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 10 Jan., 1851.

12 Success, a sort of suicide, Is ruin'd by success.

YOUNG, Resignation. Pt. ii, l. 299.

13 Success shall be in thy courses tall,
Success in thyself, which is best of all,
Success in thy hand, success in thy foot,
In struggle with man, in battle with brute.

SVEND VONVED. Ancient Norse ballad.

II—Success: Apothegms

14 'Tis not in mortals to command success,
But we'll do more, Sempronius; we'll deserve it.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 2.

But though the place I never gain,
Herein lies comfort for my pain:

I will be worthy of it.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, I Will be Worthy of It.

15 Success in men's eyes is God and more than God. (Τὸ δ' εὐτυχεῖν, τὸδ' ἐν βροτοῖς θεὸς τε καὶ θεοῦ πλεον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Chæphoroi, l. 59.

16 I have found it! I have found it! (Eureka! Eureka!)

ARCHIMEDES. (VITRUVIUS, De Architectura, ix, 215.)

When the idea flashed across his mind, the philosopher sprang out of the bath, exclaiming, "Heureka! heureka!" and without waiting to dress himself, ran home to try the experiment.

VITRUVIUS, of Archimedes, who discovered a method of testing the purity of Hiero's crown, while in the bath.

17 Success is full of promise till men get it; and then it is a last-year's nest from which the birds have flown.

Stuart, on his landing in Scotland, 1745.

III—Success: How It Is Won

<sup>6</sup>
Those things which are not practicable are not desirable. There is nothing in the world really beneficial that does not lie within the reach of an informed understanding and a well-directed pursuit.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on the Plan for Economical Reform, 11 Feb., 1780.

<sup>7</sup>
Presence of mind and courage in distress
Are more than armies to procure success.
DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act ii.

<sup>8</sup>
The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong, neither yet bread to the wise, nor yet riches to men of understanding, nor yet favour to men of skill; but time and chance happeneth to them all.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 11.

Not to the swift, the race:
Not to the strong, the fight:
Not to the righteous, perfect grace:
Not to the wise, the light.

But often faltering feet
Come surest to the goal;
And they who walk in darkness meet
The sunrise of the soul.
HENRY VAN DYKE, Reliance.

The race by vigour, not by vaunts, is won.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 59.

<sup>10</sup>
Be studious in your profession, and you will be learned. Be industrious and frugal, and you will be rich. Be sober and temperate, and you will be healthy. Be in general virtuous, and you will be happy. At least, you will, by such conduct, stand the best chance for such consequences.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to John Almeyn.

If you want to know whether you are destined to be a success or a failure in life, you can easily find out. The test is simple and it is infallible. Are you able to save money? If not, drop out. You will lose. You may think not, but you will lose, as sure as you live. The seed of success is not in you.
JAMES J. HILL.

<sup>11</sup>
If you can dream—and not make dreams
your master;

If you can think—and not make thoughts
your aim;

If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same; . . .

If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

RUDYARD KIPLING, If—.

<sup>12</sup>
There are only two ways of getting on in the world: by one's own industry, or by the stupidity of others. (Il n'y a au monde que deux manières de s'élever, ou par sa propre industrie, ou par l'imbécillité des autres.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Biens de Fortune.

The talent of success is nothing more than doing what you can do well; and doing well whatever you do, without a thought of fame.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 8.

To know how to wait is the great secret of success.

DE MAISTRE.

<sup>14</sup>
The man who seeks one thing in life, and but
one,

May hope to achieve it before life be done;
But he who seeks all things, wherever he goes,
Only reaps from the hopes which around him
he sows

A harvest of barren regrets.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto ii, sec. 4.

<sup>15</sup>
I have always observed that to succeed in the world one should seem a fool, but be wise.
(J'ai toujours vu que, pour réussir dans le monde, il fallait avoir l'air fou et être sage.)
MONTESQUIEU, Pensées Diverses.

<sup>16</sup>
The success of most things depends upon knowing how long it will take to succeed. (Le succès de la plupart des choses dépend de voir combien il faut de temps pour réussir.)

If you wish to reach the highest, begin at the lowest. (Si vis ad summum progredi ab infimo ordire.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 647.

1 Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 131.

drawn from out her breast: "If thou believest me," she said, "the wound I have inflicted has no smart; but the wound thou shalt inflict—this,
for me, Pætus, has the smart."

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 13.

10 There is left us Ourselves to end ourselves.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 14, l. 21.

Is it sin
To rush into the secret house of death,
Ere death dare come to us?
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 15, l. 80.

This mortal house I'll ruin.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 51.

11 Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine
That cravens my weak hand.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 78.

Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 131.

12 By self and violent hands Took off her life.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 70.
With blade, with bloody blameful blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloody breast.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 147.

13 I will incontinently drown myself.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 306.
The more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 29.

And now I'm here, from this here pier, it is my fixed intent
To jump as Mister Levi did from off the monument.

R. H. BAREHAM, Aunt Fanny.
Ah, yes! the sea is still and deep,
All things within its bosom sleep!
A single step, and all is o'er;
A plunge, a bubble, and no more.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend: Pt. v, The Inn at Genoa.

If you like not hanging, drown yourself;
Take some course for your reputation.
PHILIP MASSINGER, *A New Way to Pay Old
Debts*. Act ii, sc. 1.

14 There is no refuge from confession but suicide; and suicide is confession.
DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument on the Murder of Captain Wilde, 6 April, 1830.

II—Suicide: Its Folly

15 Suicide is the worst form of murder, because it leaves no opportunity for repentance.
CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

16 When Fannius from his foe did fly,
Himself with his own hands he slew;
Who e'er a greater madman knew,
Life to destroy for fear to die?

(Hostem cum fugeret, se Fannius ipse pere-mit.

Hoc, rogo, non furor est, ne moriari, mori?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 80.

It is folly to die through fear of dying. The executioner is upon you; wait for him. (Stultitia est timore mortis mori. Venit qui occidat. Expecta.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 8.

Who doubting tyranny, and fainting under Fortune's false lottery, desperately run To death, for dread of death; that soul's most stout,

That, bearing all mischance, dares last it out.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Honest Man's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 1.

Why should we Anticipate our sorrows? 'Tis like those

That die for fear of death.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, The Sophy.

The beasts had committed suicide to save themselves from slaughter.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, at Birmingham, 1867.

Referring to the Conservatives.

III—Suicide: Its Wisdom

1 We are in the power of no calamity while death is in our own.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii.

The sweetest gift nature has bequeathed us . . . is that she has left us the key of the fields.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

Happy men that have the power to die.

TENNYSON, Tithonus, l. 70.

But now that refuge of despair is shut,
For other lives have twined themselves with mine.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Lammas.

2 What, does he who is at liberty to leave the banquet when he will, and play the game no longer, keep on annoying himself by staying?

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 37.

3 If suicide be supposed a crime, it is only cowardice can impel us to it. If it be no crime, both prudence and courage should engage us to rid ourselves at once of existence when it becomes a burden. It is the only way that we can then be useful to society, by setting an example which, if imitated, would preserve every one his chance for happiness in life, and would effectually free him from all danger or misery.

DAVID HUME, Essays: Suicide.

4 Just as I shall select my ship when I am about to go on a voyage, or my house when I propose to take a residence, so I shall choose my death when I am about to depart from life.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 11.

5 Tranquillity can be purchased at the cost of a pin-prick. (Puncto securitas constat.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 16.

6 He is truly great who has not only given himself the order to die, but has found the means. (Ille vir magnus est, qui mortem sibi non tantum imperavit, sed invenit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 25.

7 That self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Splitted the heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 1, l. 21.

Bravest at the last,
She lell'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
Took her own way.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 338.

She drank Prussic acid without any water,
And died like a Duke-and-a-Duchess's daughter!

R. H. BARHAM, The Tragedy.

8 You good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick the bolt,
Then, free for ever!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

9 To be, or not to be: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 56.

For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,

The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,

The pangs of despised love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns

That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 70.

10 But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 96.

He that cuts off twenty years of life
Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 101.

11 Let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 168.

12 Why should I, beastlike as I find myself,
Not manlike end myself?—our privilege—

What beast has heart to do it?

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 231.

Again the voice spake unto me:

"Thou art so steep'd in misery,

Surely 't were better not to be."

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 46.

1 Though the Garden of thy Life be wholly waste, the sweet flowers withered, the fruit-trees barren, over its wall hang ever the rich dark clusters of the Vine of Death, within easy reach of thy hand, which may pluck of them when it will.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night. Pt. i, note.

IV—Suicide: Its Cowardice

2 Self-murder! name it not; our island's shame; That makes her the reproach of neighb'ring states.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 403.

Our time is fixed, and all our days are number'd; How long, how short, we know not:—this we know, Duty requires we calmly wait the summons, Nor dare to stir till Heaven shall give permission.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 417.

3 The divinity who rules within us forbids us to quit this world without his command. (Vet-at dominans ille in nobis deus, injussu hinc nos suo demigrare.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74.

Death may be call'd in vain, and cannot come, Tyrants can tie him up from your relief:

Nor has a Christian privilege to die. . . .

Brutus and Cato might discharge their souls,

And give them furlo's for another world:

But we like sentries are oblig'd to stand

In starless nights, and wait th' appointed hour.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act ii, sc. 1.

The thought is Cicero's, but how it is intensified by the "starless nights"! Dryden, I suspect, got it from his favorite, Montaigne.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Dryden.

4 Fool! I mean not That poor-souled piece of heroism, self-slaughter;

Oh no! the miserablest day we live

There's many a better thing to do than die!

GEORGE DARLEY, Ethelstan.

5 Self-destruction is the effect of cowardice in the highest extreme.

DANIEL DEFOE, An Essay Upon Projects: Of Projectors.

He is as cowardly

That longer fears to live, as he that fears to die.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Purple Island. Canto x, st. 8.

6 Who quits a world where strong temptations try,

And, since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly!

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 101.

7 When all the blandishments of life are gone, The coward sneaks to death, the brave live on. (Rebus in angustis facile est contemnere vitam:

Fortiter ille facit qui miseresse potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, 56. (Sewell, tr.)

8 Yet we should not, Howe'er besieged, deliver up our fort Of life, till it be forced.

MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act ii, sc. 4.

This life's a fort committed to my trust, Which I must not yield up till it be forced: Nor will I. He's not valiant that dares die, But he that boldly bears calamity.

MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act iv, sc. 3.

9 It is the rôle of cowardice, not of courage, to crouch in a hole, under a massive tomb, to avoid the blows of fortune. (C'est le rôle de la couardise, non de la vertu, de s'aller tapir dans un creux, sous un tombe massive, pour éviter les coups de la fortune.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

10 To wish for death is a coward's part. (Timidi est optare necem.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 115.

11 We men are in a kind of prison and must not set ourselves free or run away. ('Ὅς ἐν τινι φρουρᾷ ἐσμεν οἱ ἄνθρωποι καὶ οὐ δεῖ δὴ ἑαυτὸν ἐκ ταύτης λύειν οὐδ' ἀποδιδράσκειν.)

PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 62.

Nor at all can tell Whether I mean this day to end myself, Or lend an ear to Plato where he says, That men like soldiers may not quit the post Allotted by the Gods.

TENNYSON, Lucretius, l. 145.

12 You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worser spirit tempt me again To die before you please!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 221.

13 Less base the fear of death than fear of life.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 441.

SUMMER

I—Summer: Apothegms

14 Summer has set in with his usual severity.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Letter to Charles Lamb, May, 1826.

If that the summer is not too severe.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 55. A note to this passage says, "An allusion to Horace Walpole's expression in a letter," but Charles Lamb, in a letter to Bernard Barton (16 May, 1826), states that a letter just received by him from Coleridge began with this phrase.

Summer, as my friend Coleridge waggishly writes, has set in with its usual severity.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to V. Novello, 9 May, 1826.

1 Summer is gone on swallow's wings.

THOMAS HOOD, The Departure of Summer.

2 There is something of summer in the hum of insects.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to Southey, 1810.

Do what we can, summer will have its flies.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

3 Expect Saint Martin's summer, halcyon days.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 131.

The middle summer's spring.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 82.

The Indian Summer, the dead Summer's soul.

MARY CLEMMER, Presence, l. 62.

II—Summer: Its Beauty

4 Bring back the singing; and the scent

Of meadowlands at dewy prime;—

Oh, bring again my heart's content,

Thou Spirit of the Summertime!

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Song.

5 Now simmer blinks on flowery braes,

And o'er the crystal streamlet plays.

BURNS, The Birks of Aberfeldy.

6 I question not if thrushes sing,

If roses load the air;

Beyond my heart I need not reach

When all is summer there.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Love's World.

7 Here is the ghost Of a summer that lived for us,

Here is a promise Of summers to be.

W. E. HENLEY, Rhymes and Rhythms. No. 8.

8 All labourers draw hame at even,

And can to others say,

"Thanks to the gracious God of heaven,

Whilk sent this summer day."

ALEXANDER HUME, Evening. St. 2.

O summer day beside the joyous sea!

O summer day so wonderful and white,

So full of gladness and so full of pain!

Forever and forever shalt thou be

To some the gravestone of a dead delight,

To some the landmark of a new domain.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

9 Where'er you walk cool gales shall fan the glade;

Trees, where you sit, shall crowd into a shade;

Where'er you tread, the blushing flowers shall rise,

And all things flourish where you turn your eyes.

POPE, Pastorals: Summer, l. 73.

10 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,

And summer's lease hath all too short a date.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xviii.

11 In the good old summer time,

In the good old summer time,

Strolling thro' the shady lanes,

With your baby mine;

You hold her hand and she holds yours,

And that's a very good sign

That she's your tootsey-wootsey

In the good old summer time.

REN SHIELDS, In the Good Old Summer Time. (1902)

12 Then came the jolly Summer, being dight

In a thin silken cassock, coloured green,

That was unlined all, to be more light.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto vii, st. 29.

13 Pale in her fading bowers the Summer stands,

Like a new Niobe with claspèd hands,

Silent above the flowers, her children lost,

Slain by the arrows of the early Frost.

RICHARD HENRY STODDARD, Ode.

14 Pride of summer passing by

With lordly laughter in her eye.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. ii, st. 1.

Strong summer, dumb with rapture, bound

With golden calm the woodlands round.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. vii, st. 14.

15 The Summer looks out from her brazen tower,

Through the flashing bars of July.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Corymbus for Autumn.

16 From brightening fields of ether fair-disclosed,

Child of the sun, refulgent Summer comes.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1.

17 O, softly on yon banks of haze,

Her rosy face the Summer lays!

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

18 Sumer is icumen in,

Lhude sing cuccu!

Groweth sed, and bloweth med,

And springth the wude nu—

Sing cuccu!

UNKNOWN, Cuckoo Song. The oldest song in the English language, written, probably in 1226, by a monk at Reading Abbey, somewhat questionably identified as John of Fornsete. Original in the Harleian MS., No. 978. The music to which it was sung still survives.

III—Summer: Its Heat

1 O thou who passest thro' our valleys in Thy strength, curb thy fierce steeds, allay the heat

That flames from their large nostrils! Thou,
O Summer,

Oft pitched'st here thy golden tent, and oft
Beneath our oaks hast slept, while we beheld
With joy thy ruddy limbs and flourishing hair.
WILLIAM BLAKE, To Summer.

2 O for a lodge in a garden of cucumbers!
O for an iceberg or two at control!
O for a vale that at midday the dew cumbers!
O for a pleasure trip up to the pole!

ROSSITER JOHNSON, Ninety-Nine in the Shade.
As a lodge in a garden of cucumbers.
Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 8.

3 But see, the shepherds shun the noonday heat,
The lowing herds to murmuring brooks retreat,

To closer shades the panting flocks remove:
Ye Gods! and is there no relief for love?
POPE, Pastorals: Summer, i, 85.

4 Summer's parching heat.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 81.

5 Heat, ma'am! It was so dreadful here that I found there was nothing left for it but to take off my flesh and sit in my bones.
SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch. 9.)

6 The dogged dog-days had begun to bite.
JOHN TAYLOR, A Very Merry-Wherry-Ferry Voyage, l. 6.

7 All-conquering heat, oh, intermit thy wrath!
And on my throbbing temples potent thus Beam not so fierce! Incessant still you flow,
And still another fervent flood succeeds,
Pour'd on the head profuse. In vain I sigh,
And restless turn, and look around for night:
Night is far off; and hotter hours approach.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 451.

SUN

I—Sun: Apothegms

8 Fabricius finds certain spots and clouds in the sun.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3.

The sun is not all spots.
AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta, Second Series: John Milton.

9 Make hay while the sun shines.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 11.

10 As thick as motes in the sun-beam.
CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 12.

As thick and numberless
As the gay motes that people the sunbeams.
MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 7.

11 The sun shines on both sides of the hedge.
DENHAM, Proverbs, 49.

The vernal sun new life bestows
Even on the meanest flower that blows.
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto i, Introduction, l. 63.

The selfsame sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage but Looks on alike.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 454.
12 Stand a little out of my sun. (Μικρόν ἀπὸ τοῦ ἡλίου μετὰσσηθι.)

DIOGENES to Alexander, when the latter asked if there was anything he could do for him.
(PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 14, sec. 2.)

13 The sun, too, visits cesspools and is not defiled. (Ἡλῖος εἰς τοὺς ἀποπάτους, ἀλλ' οὐ μαινεται.)

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 63.)

The sun, which passeth through pollutions and itself remains as pure as before.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1623)

The sun his fairness never he tines,
Though he on the muck heap shines.
ROBERT MANNING (or ROBERT DE BRUNNE),
Handlyng Synne, l. 2299. (1303)

The sun shineth upon the dunghill and is not corrupted.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 43. (1579)

As sunshine, broken in the rill,
Though turn'd aside, is sunshine still!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

The sun reflecting upon the mud of strands and shores is unpolluted in his beam.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. i, sec. 3. (1650)

14 Out of the solar walk and Heaven's highway.
DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 353.

In climes beyond the solar road.
THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy, l. 54.

15 Let not the sun look down and say, Inglorious here he lies.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

16 In every country the sun rises in the morning.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Sad soul, take comfort, nor forget
That sunrise never failed us yet.

CELIA THAXTER, The Sunrise Never Failed Us Yet.

<sup>1</sup> The sun, too, will blind you if you persist in gazing at it. (Sol etiam cæcat, contra si tendere pergas.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 326.

But who can gaze upon the sun in heaven?

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 123.

<sup>2</sup> Suppose the chariot of the sun were given you: what would you do? (Finge datos currus: quid ages?)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 74. Apollo's question to Phaëton.

Why, so this gallant will command the sun.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 198.

<sup>3</sup> The sun is a faithful artist, but his choice of emphasis is often too ironical to be intelligible to human faculty.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH THE YOUNGER, Oxford Poetry 1914: Preface.

<sup>4</sup> He that walks in the sun, though he walk not for that purpose, must needs become sunburned. (Qui in solem venit, licet non in hoc venerit, colorabitur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiii, 4.

To be still hot summer's tanlings.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 29. (1610)

He that walketh in the sun shall be tanned.

DAVID TUVILL, Vade Mecum, p. 56. (1638)

<sup>5</sup> I 'gin to be aweary of the sun.

TERTULLIAN, De Resurrectione Carnis. Ch. 47.

Such words fall too often on our cold and careless ears with the triteness of long familiarity; but to Octavia . . . they seemed to be written in sunbeams.

F. W. FARRAR, Darkness and Dawn. Ch. 46.

The great duties of life are written with a sunbeam.

JOHN JORTIN, Sermons. (1751)

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 97. A line described by Tennyson as "almost the grandest in the English language."

<sup>9</sup> A sunbeam took human shape when he was born.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, The Melting-Pot. Act i.

II—Sun: Its Praise

10

The sun, centre and sire of light,

The keystone of the world-built arch of heaven.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Heaven.

See the sun!

God's crest upon His azure shield, the Heavens.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Mountain.

See the gold sunshine, patching,
And streaming and streaking across
The grey-green oaks; and catching,
By its long brown beard, the moss.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Earth's Surface.

<sup>11</sup> And if the sun would ever shine, there would I dwell.

BRYANT, The Cloud on the Way, l. 18.

<sup>13</sup> The God of life and poesy and light,—
The Sun.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 161.

And representative of the Unknown—
Who chose thee for His shadow!

BYRON, Manfred. Act iii, sc. 2.

<sup>14</sup> The glorious lamp of Heav'n, the radiant sun,
Is Nature's eye.

DRYDEN, The Fable of Acis, l. 165. (OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii.)

Thou sun, of this great world both eye and soul.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 171.

Lamp of the world, light of this universe.

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, The Chariot of the Sun.

Aloof the vulgar constellations thick,
That from his lordly eye keep distance due,
Dispenses light from far.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 576.

<sup>17</sup> O thou that with surpassing glory crown'd,
Look'st from thy sole dominion like the God
Of this new world; at whose sight all the stars

Hide their diminish'd heads!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 32.

Ye little stars, hide your diminish'd rays.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 282.

What balm, what life is in thy ray!
To feel thee is such real bliss,
That had the world no joy but this,
To sit in sunshine calm and sweet,—
It were a world too exquisite

For man to leave it for the gloom,
The deep, cold shadow, of the tomb.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers, Third Day, l. 342.

1 The glorious sun,
Stays in his course and plays the alchemist,
Turning with splendour of his precious eye
The meagre cloddy earth to glittering gold.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 77.

Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxiii.

2 That orb'd continent the fire
That severs day from night.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act v, sc. 1, l. 278.

3 In the warm shadow of her loveliness,
He kissed her with his beams.
SHELLEY, The Witch of Atlas. St. 2.

4 Fairest of all the lights above,
Thou sun, whose beams adorn the spheres,
And with unwearied swiftness move,
To form the circles of our years.
ISAAC WATTS, Sun, Moon and Stars, Praise Ye the Lord.

5 Give me the splendid silent sun with all his beams full-dazzling!
WALT WHITMAN, Give Me the Splendid Silent Sun.

6 The sunshine seemed to bless,
The air was a caress.
WHITTIER, The Maids of Attitash. St. 24.

7 The sun's gold would not seem pure gold
Unless the sun were in the sky:
To take him thence and chain him near
Would make his beauty disappear.
WILLIAM WINTER, Love's Queen.

III—Sun: Rising and Setting

8 Men rather honour the sun rising than the sun going down.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act i, sc. 1.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3470.

Welcome, young Sunrise, since Voltaire is about to set!

FREDERICK THE GREAT, to Bacalard d'Arnaud.
Frederick wrote. "Voltaire est à son couchant, Vous êtes à votre aurore." The rendering is Carlyle's.

9 Let others hail the rising sun:

I how to that whose course is run.

DAVID GARRICK, On the Death of Mr. Pelham.

10 More worship the rising than the setting sun.
(Τὸν ἥλιον ἀνατέλλοντα πλεονες ἢ δύόμενον προσκυνοῦσιν.)

POMPEY, to Sulla. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Pompey. Ch. 14, sec. 3.)

You forsake the setting to court the rising sun.
TIBERIUS, to Macro, when the latter seemed favoring Caligula. (TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 46.)

11 Men shut their doors against a setting sun.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 150.

12 The Sun came up upon the left,
Out of the sea came he!
And he shone bright, and on the right
Went down into the sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i.

The Sun now rose upon the right:
Out of the sea came he,
Still hid in mist, and on the left
Went down into the sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. ii.

So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed,
And yet anon repairs his drooping head,
And tricks his beams, and with new spangled ore
Flames in the forehead of the morning sky.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 168.

13 When the sun shines let foolish gnats make sport,

But creep in crannies when he hides his beams.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 30.

IV—Sun: Sunrise

See also Dawn, Morning

14 And led by silence more majestic
Than clash of conquering arms, He comes! He Comes!

And strikes out flame from the adoring hills.

ALICE BROWN, Sunrise on Mansfield Mountain.

15 The sun is bright on heaven's brow,
The world's fresh blood runs fleet;

Time is as young as ever now,
Nature as fresh and sweet.

JOHN DAVIDSON, A Ballad of Euthanasia.

16 And all the small fowls singing on the spray
Welcome the lord of light, the lamp of day.

GAVIN DOUGLAS, Morning in May.

17 I saw myself the lambent easy light
Gild the brown horror, and dispel the night.

DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. ii, l. 658.

18 Now from the smooth deep ocean-stream
the sun

Began to climb the heavens, and with new rays

Smote the surrounding fields.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 525. (Bryant, tr.)

19 Father of rosy day,
No more thy clouds of incense rise;
But waking flow'rs,
At morning hours,

Give out their sweets to meet thee in the skies.

THOMAS HOOD, Hymn to the Sun. St. 4.

Night's son was driving
His golden-haired horses up;
Over the eastern firths
High flashed their manes.

KINGSLEY, The Longbeards' Saga, l. 122.

Thou shalt sleep in thy clouds, careless of the voice of the morning.

MACPIERSON, Ossian: Address to the Sun.

The east is blossoming! Yea, a rose,
Vast as the heavens, soft as a kiss,
Sweet as the presence of woman is,
Rises and reaches, and widens and grows
Large and luminous up from the sea,
And out of the sea, as a blossoming tree,
Richer and richer, so higher and higher,
Deeper and deeper it takes its hue;
Brighter and brighter it reaches through
The space of heaven and the place of stars,
Till all is as rich as a rose can be,
And my rose-leaves fall into billows of fire.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Sunrise in Venice.

Right against the Eastern gate,
Where the great Sun begins his state.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 59.

Whether the sun, predominant in Heav'n,
Rise on the earth, or earth rise on the sun, . . .
Solicit not thy thoughts with matters hid,
Leave them to God above, him serve and fear.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 160.

"But," quoth his neighbour, "when the sun
From East to West his course has run,
How comes it that he shows his face
Next morning in his former place?"

"Ho! there's a pretty question, truly!"

Replied our wight, with an unruly
Burst of laughter and delight,
So much his triumph seemed to please him.

"Why, blockhead! he goes back at night,
And that's the reason no one sees him!"

HORACE SMITH, The Astronomical Alderman.

And see—the Sun himself!—on wings
Of glory up the East he springs.
Angel of Light! who from the time
Those heavens began their march sublime,
Hath first of all the starry choir
Trod in his Maker's steps of fire!

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers, Second Day, l. 25.

Wake! for the Sun, who scatter'd into flight
The Stars before him from the Field of Night,
Drives Night along with them from Heav'n, and strikes

The Sultan's Turret with a Shaft of Light.
OMAR KHAYYĀM, Rubāiyāt. St. 1. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

8
The morning sun has now smiled upon the roofs. (Matutinus sol tectis arrisit.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 5.

Day, peeping from the east, makes the sun turn from black to red, like a boiled lobster.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 7.

The sun had long since, in the lap
Of Thetis, taken out his nap,
And, like a lobster boil'd, the morn
From black to red began to turn.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 29.

10
Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus 'gins arise.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

11
The hour before the heavenly-harness'd team
Begins his golden progress in the east.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 221.

An hour before the worshipp'd sun
Peer'd forth the golden window of the east.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 125.

12
For night's swift dragons cut the clouds full fast,

And yonder shines Aurora's harbinger:

At whose approach, ghosts, wandering here
and there,

Troop home to churchyards.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 379.

He fires the proud tops of the eastern pines
And darts his light through every guilty hole.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 42.

As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And, having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 5.

13
At last, the golden oriental gate
Of greatest heaven 'gan to open fair,
And Phoebus, fresh as bridegroom to his mate,
Came dancing forth, shaking his dewy hair.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto v, st. 2.

14
And yonder fly his scattered golden arrows,
And smite the hills with day.

BAYARD TAYLOR, The Poet's Journal: Third Evening: Morning.

But yonder comes the powerful King of Day,
Rejoicing in the east.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 81.

15
See how there The cowl'd Night
Kneels on the Eastern sanctuary-stair.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, A Corymbus for Autumn.

16
It is true, I never assisted the sun materially in his rising; but, doubt not, it was of the last importance only to be present at it.

HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

First gilds the clouds, then shows his globe of light

At such a distance from our eyes, as though
He knew what harm his hasty beams would do.

EDMUND WALLER, To the King, Upon His Majesty's Happy Return, l. 1.

In yonder West: the changing pageantry,
The fading alps and archipelagoes,
And spectral cities of the sunset-sea.

T. B. ALDRICH, Miracles.

<sup>3</sup> The sun had gone down fiery red;
And if, that evening, he laid his head
In Thetis's lap beneath the seas,
He must have scalded the goddess's knees.

R. H. BARHAM, The Witches' Frolic.

As far as Phoebus first doth rise,
Until in Thetis' lap he lies.

SIR ARTHUR GORGES, Ode.

<sup>4</sup> The sun descending in the west,
The evening star does shine;
The birds are silent in their nest,
And I must seek for mine.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Night.

<sup>5</sup> The sacred lamp of day
Now dipt in western clouds his parting ray.
WILLIAM FALCONER, The Shipwreck. Canto ii,
l. 27.

<sup>6</sup> For the Elysians the sun seems always to have just set.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Infernal Marriage.
Pt. iv, ch. 2.

<sup>7</sup> Behold him setting in his western skies,
The shadows lengthening as the vapours rise.
DRYDEN, Abalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 268.

<sup>8</sup> Oft did I wonder why the setting sun
Should look upon us with a blushing face:
Is't not for shame of what he hath seen done,
Whilst in our hemisphere he ran his race?

LYMAN HEATH, On the Setting Sun.

<sup>9</sup> A late lark twitters from the quiet skies;
And from the west,
Where the sun, his day's work ended,
Lingers as in content,
There falls on the old, grey city
An influence luminous and serene,
A shining peace.

W. E. HENLEY, Margaritæ Sorori. St. 1.

The smoke ascends
In a rosy-and-golden haze. The spires
Shine, and are changed. In the valley
Shadows rise. The lark sings on. The sun,
Closing his benediction,
Sinks, and the darkening air
Thrills with a sense of the triumphing night—
Night with her train of stars
And her great gift of sleep.

W. E. HENLEY, Margaritæ Sorori. St. 2.

<sup>10</sup> Now deep in ocean sunk the lamp of light,
And drew behind the cloudy veil of night.

the West.

SIDNEY LANIER, The Marshes of Glynn.

<sup>12</sup> Down sank the great red sun, and in golden,
glimmering vapors

Veiled the light of his face, like the Prophet descending from Sinai.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, sec. 4.

After a day of cloud and wind and rain
Sometimes the setting sun breaks out again,
And, touching all the darksome woods with light,

Smiles on the fields, until they laugh and sing,
Then like a ruby from the horizon's ring,
Drops down into the night.

LONGFELLOW, Hanging of the Crane. Pt. vii.

<sup>13</sup> The sun is set; and in his latest beams
Yon little cloud of ashen gray and gold,
Slowly upon the amber air unrolled,
The falling mantle of the Prophet seems.

LONGFELLOW, A Summer Day by the Sea.

<sup>14</sup> The west is broken into bars
Of orange, gold, and gray;
Gone is the sun, come are the stars,
And night unfolds the day.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Songs of the Summer Nights.

<sup>15</sup> And the gilded car of day,

Where the molten metal spills,
At His forge among the hills

He has hammered out the glory of a day that's done.

LEW SARETT, God Is at the Anvil.

1 No pale gradations quench his ray,
No twilight dews his wrath allay;
With disk like battle-target red
He rushes to his burning bed,
Dyes the wide wave with bloody light,
Then sinks at once—and all is night.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 21.

2 The lonely sunsets flare forlorn
Down valleys dreadfully desolate;
The lonely mountains soar in scorn
As still as death, as stern as fate.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, The Land That God Forgot.

3 The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 5.

4 The setting sun, and music at the close,
At the last taste of sweets, is sweetest last.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 12.

5 When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 34.

6 The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives signal of a goodly day to-morrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 19.

7 The beams of sunset hung their rainbow hues
High 'mid the shifting domes of sheeted spray
That canopied his path o'er the waste deep.

SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 334.

When, as a token at parting, munificent Day, for remembrance,

WILLIAM WATSON, Hymn to the Sea. Pt. iii, l. 15.

Touched by a light that hath no name,
A glory never sung,

Aloft on sky and mountain wall
Are God's great pictures hung.

WHITTIER, Sunset on the Bearcamp. St. 3.

8 There sinks the nebulous star we call the sun.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 1.

9 Nobody of any real culture ever talks nowadays about the beauty of a sunset. Sunsets are quite old-fashioned. They belong to the time when Turner was the last note in art.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

VI—Sun and Moon

10 That hour of the day when, face to face, the rising moon beholds the setting sun.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 10.

11 Courses even with the sun
Doth her mighty brother run.

BEN JONSON, The Gipsies Metamorphosed.

12 And God made two great lights, great for their use

To man, the greater to have rule by day,
The less by night altern.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 346.

13 The sun to me is dark
And silent as the moon,
When she deserts the night
Hid in her vacant interlunar cave.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 86.

14 And teach me how
To name the bigger light, and how the less,
That burn by day and night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 334.

15 L'Abbé de Ville proposed a toast:

His master, as the rising Sun;

Reisbach then gave the Empress Queen,
As the bright Moon, and much praise won.

The earl of Stair, whose turn came next,
Gave for his toast his own King Will,

As Joshua, the son of Nun,

Who made both Sun and Moon stand still.

UNKNOWN. (Anecdote Library, 1822.) The Empress Queen was Maria Theresa. John Dalrymple, Second Earl of Stair, was a famous diplomatist. The same anecdote is related of other men, notably of Benjamin Franklin, who, at a banquet in England, after toasts to Great Britain as the sun which gives light to the whole earth, and to France as the moon whose magic rays move the earth's tides, is said to have toasted Washington "the Joshua of America, who commanded the sun and moon to stand still—and they obeyed."

SUN-DIAL

I—Sun-Dial: Its Mission

16 Think: the shadow on the dial
For the nature most undone,
Marks the passing of the trial,
Proves the presence of the sun.

E. B. BROWNING, The Fourfold Aspect, l. 107.

17 The dial tells the golden-lighted hours
In gardens fair with roses.

DOROTHY COOPER JOHNSON, Country Gardens.

18 Thou breathing dial! since thy day began
The present hour was ever mark'd with shade.
W. S. LANDOR, The Sun-Dial.

1 Carve out the dials quaintly, point by point,
Thereby to see the minutes how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 24.

2 A sun-dial which keeps very good time.
MARK TWAIN, Autobiography. Vol. ii, p. 222.

II—Sun-Dial Mottoes

3 Once at a potent leader's voice I stayed;
Once I went back when a good monarch prayed;
Mortals, howe'er we grieve, howe'er deplore,
The flying shadow will return no more.

WILLIAM HAMILTON, Sun-dial Motto. (CHALMERS, Poets of Scotland, xv, 620.)

4 Plant the seed of time so deep—
Time that shall outgrow all flowers—
That you shall forget to weep,
Beholding such a host of hours.

ROBERT HUNT, Legend for a Sun-dial.

5 A lumine motus. (I am moved by the light.)
MAETERLINCK, Measure of the Hours: Motto.

6 I mark my hours by shadow;
Mayest thou mark thine by sunshine.
C. B. HILTON-TURVEY, The Sundial, (The Van Haavens.)

7 Time can never take
What Time did not give;
When your shadows have all passed,
I shall live.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Dial.

8 Hours fly, Flowers die.
New days, New ways,
Pass by. Love stays.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Motto for Katrina's Sun-Dial.

9 Time is Too slow for those who Wait,
Too Swift for those who Fear,
Too Long for those who Grieve,
Too Short for those who Rejoice,
But for those who Love
Time is not.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Motto for Katrina's Sun-Dial.

10 With warning hand I mark Time's rapid flight
From life's glad morning to its solemn night;
Yet, through the dear God's love, I also show
There's Light above me by the Shade below.

WHITTIER, Inscription on a Sun-dial for Dr. Henry I. Bowditch.

11 He knows but from its shade the present hour.

WORDSWORTH, An Evening Walk, l. 42.

12 Horas non numero nisi serenas. (I count only the hours that are bright.)

UNKNOWN. Ancient inscription, frequently found on sun-dials.

Horas non numero nisi serenas.

There stands in the garden of old St. Mark
A sun-dial quaint and gray.

It takes no heed of the hours which in dark
Pass o'er it day by day.

It has stood for ages amid the flowers
In that land of sky and song.

"I number none but the cloudless hours,"
Its motto the live day long.

WILLIAM C. DOANE, Of a Sun-Dial in Venice.

Horas non numero nisi serenas is the motto of a sun-dial near Venice. There is a softness and harmony in the words and in the thought unparalleled. Of all conceits it is surely the most classical. "I count only the hours that are serene."

WILLIAM HAZLITT, On a Sun-Dial.

Let others tell of storms and showers,
I'll only mark your sunny hours.

UNKNOWN. A variation of the foregoing.

13 The Natural Clock-work by the mighty ONE
Wound up at first, and ever since have gone.
Inscription on sun-dial on south porch of Seaham church, Durham, England.

14 Our life's a flying shadow, God's the pole,
The index pointing at Him is our soul;
Death the horizon, when our sun is set,
Which will through Christ a resurrection get.
Inscription on sun-dial, Glasgow cathedral.

15 Give God thy heart, thy service, and thy gold;
The day wears on, and time is waxing old.
Inscription on sun-dial in the cloister garden of cathedral at Gloucester, England.

16 Hours are Time's shafts, and one comes winged with death.
Inscription on the clock at Keir House.

17 Amende to-day and slack not,
Deythe cometh and warneth not,
Tyme passeth and speketh not.
Inscription on ancient sun-dial at Moccas Hall, near Hereford, England.

18 Vivite, ait, fugie. (Live ye, he says, I flee.)
Motto on sun-dial of Bishop Francis Atterbury, at Rochester, England.

19 As the long hours do pass away,
So doth the life of man decay.
Inscription on sun-dial in garden of Royal Hotel, Sevenoaks, Kent, England.

SUNFLOWER

20 Ah sunflower, weary of time,
Who countest the steps of the Sun,
Seeking after that sweet golden clime

Where the traveller's journey is done.

WILLIAM BLAKE, The Sunflower.

The motto, cut upon a white cornelian.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 198. Elle vous suit partout: She follows you everywhere.

As the sunflower turns on her god when he sets,
The same look which she turn'd when he rose.

THOMAS MOORE, Believe Me, if All Those Endearing Young Charms.

In the course of the evening, you find chance for certain

Soft speeches to Anne, in the shade of the curtain:
You tell her your heart can be likened to one flower,

"And that, O most charming of women, 's the sunflower,

Which turns"—here a clear nasal voice, to your terror,

From outside the curtain, says, "That's all an error."

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 266.

<sup>2</sup> Light-enchanted Sunflower, thou

Who gazest ever true and tender

On the sun's revolving splendour!

CALDERON, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 66.
(Shelley, tr.)

Restless Sunflower; cease to move.

CALDERON, Magico Prodigioso. Sc. 3, l. 76.

To nap by daylight, strove t' excuse the blame;
It was not sleep that made him nod, he said,

But too great weight and largeness of his head.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Poppy, l. 102.

<sup>4</sup> With zealous steps he climbs the upland lawn,
And bows in homage to the rising dawn;

Imbibes with eagle eye the golden ray,

And watches, as it moves, the orb of day.

ERASMUS DARWIN, Loves of the Plants. Canto i, l. 225.

<sup>5</sup> Eagle of flowers! I see thee stand,
And on the sun's noon-glory gaze;

With eye like his, thy lids expand,

And fringe their disk with golden rays:

Though fix'd on earth, in darkness rooted there,

Light is thine element, thy dwelling air,

Thy prospect heaven.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Sun-flower.

<sup>6</sup> But one, the lofty follower of the sun,
Sad when he sets, shuts up her yellow leaves,

Drooping all night; and, when he warm returns,
Points her enamour'd bosom to his ray.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 216.

SUPERSTITION

I—Superstition: Definitions

<sup>7</sup> Superstition is the reproach of the Deity.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

The master of superstition is the people; and in all superstition, wise men follow fools.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

There is a superstition in avoiding superstition.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

<sup>8</sup> Superstition, that poisons and destroys all peace of mind. (Superstitio, qua qui est imbutus quietus esse numquam potest.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 60.

<sup>9</sup> A superstition is a premature explanation that overstays its time.

GEORGE ILES, Jottings.

<sup>10</sup> The greatest burden in the world is superstition, not only of ceremonies in the church, but of imaginary and scarecrow sins at home.

MILTON, Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce.

<sup>11</sup> It was necessary to succumb to superstitions, which are, more than ourselves, the kings of nations. (Il fallut succomber aux superstitions, qui sont, bien plus que nous, les rois des nations.)

VOLTAIRE, Eryphile. Act iii, sc. 2.

II—Superstition: Its Folly

<sup>12</sup> I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious.

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 22.

All superstition from thy breast repel.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 175.

Better be dumb than superstitious.

BEN JONSON, Elegy on My Muse, l. 73.

<sup>13</sup> Sickness and sorrows come and go, but a superstitious soul hath no rest.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 3.

<sup>14</sup> Superstition, which is widespread among the nations, has taken advantage of human weakness to cast its spell over the mind of almost every man. (Superstitio, fusa per gentis, oppressit omnium fere animos atque hominum imbecillitatem occupavit.)

<sup>15</sup> All people have their blind side—their superstitions.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Mrs. Battle's Opinions on Whist.

For not to rank nor sex confined
Is this vain ague of the mind.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto ii, st. 11.

<sup>16</sup> Look, how the world's poor people are amazed

At apparitions, signs and prodigies!

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 925.

No natural exhalation in the sky,
No scope of nature, no distemper'd day,
No common wind, no custom'd event,
But they will pluck away his natural cause
And call them meteors, prodigies and signs,
Abortives, presages and tongues of heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 153.

Ghost, kelpie, wraith,
And all the trumphy of vulgar faith.

CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe, l. 188.

He put this engine [a watch] to our ears, which made an incessant noise like that of a water-mill:
and we conjecture it is either some unknown animal or the god that he worships, but we are more inclined to the latter opinion.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Lilliput.

A pupil in the many-chambered school
Where superstition weaves her airy dreams.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 609.

III—Superstition and Religion

A great fear . . . is the parent of superstition;
but a discreet and well-guided fear produced religion.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living, p. 317.

I can hardly think there was ever any scared into Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 59.

Superstition is the religion of feeble minds.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Superstition is the only religion of which base souls are capable. (La superstition est la seule religion dont soient capables les âmes basses.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 27.

Foul Superstition! howsoe'er disguised,
Idol, saint, virgin, prophet, crescent, cross,
For whatsoever symbol thou art prized,
Thou sacerdotal gain, but general loss!
Who from true worship's gold can separate thy dross?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 44.

For superstition will survive,
Purer religion to perplex.

APHRA BEHN, On Desire.

Superstition consists in a senseless fear of the gods, religion in the pious worship of them.
(Superstitio, in qua inest inanis timor Deorum; religio, quæ deorum pio cultu continetur.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, sec. 42.

The destruction of superstition does not mean the destruction of religion. (Superstitio tollenda religio tollitur.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 72, sec. 148.

O! Superstition is the giant shadow

Which the solicitude of weak mortality,
Its back towards Religion's rising sun,
Casts on the thin mist of th' uncertain future.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fragments. No. 42.

Superstition is godless religion, devout impiety.

JOSEPH HALL, Of the Superstitious.

A foolish superstition introduces the influences of the gods even in the smallest matters.
(Minimis etiam rebus prava religio inserit deos.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxvii, sec. 23.

Superstition is related to this life, religion to the next; superstition is allied to fatality, religion to virtue; it is by the vivacity of earthly desires that we become superstitious; it is, on the contrary, by the sacrifice of these desires that we become religious.

MADAME DE STAËL. (ABEL STEVENS, Life of Madame de Staël. Ch. 34.)

Crush the infamous thing! (Écrasez l'infâme!)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, 23 June, 1760.

"By infâme," he wrote, "you will understand that I mean superstition: as for religion, I love and respect it as you do." Voltaire adopted this phrase as his motto.

Often do the spirits
Of great events stride on before the events,
And in to-day already walks to-morrow.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act v, sc. 1.
(Coleridge, tr.)

Against ill chances men are ever merry;
But heaviness foreruns the good event.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 81.

And in such indexes, although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes, there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things to come at large.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 3, l. 343.

Nay I have had some omens: I got out of bed backwards too this morning, without premeditation; pretty good that too; but then I stumbled coming down stairs, and met a weasel; bad omens those: some bad, some good, our lives are checquer'd.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 2.

Alas! you know the cause too well;
The salt is spilt, to me it fell;
Then to contribute to my loss,
My knife and fork were laid across:
On Friday, too! the day I dread!
Would I were safe at home in bed!
Last night (I vow to Heav'n 'tis true)
Bounce from the fire a coffin flew.
Next post some fatal news shall tell:
God send my Cornish friends be well!

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven.

6 It's a bad sign when a man in a sweat shivers. (Pro monstro extemplo est, quando qui sudat tremat.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 289. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

7 This day black omens threat the brightest fair, That e'er deserv'd a watchful spirit's care.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 101.

8 Midnight hags,
By force of potent spells, of bloody characters,
And conjurations horrible to hear,
Call fiends and spectres from the yawning deep,
And set the ministers of hell at work.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 240.

9 Release, ye gods, release the mind from such omens. (Solvite tantis animum monstis, Solvite Superi!)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 1063.

10 Some devils ask but the parings of one's nail,
A rush, a hair, a drop of blood, a pin,
A nut, a cherry-stone;
But she, more covetous, would have a chain.
Master, be wise; an if you give it her,
The devil will shake her chain and fright us with it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 72.

11 In what particular thought to work I know not:

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 67.

12 The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:
As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 113.

Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds,
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 19.

And ghosts did shriek and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 24.

13 At my nativity
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning cressets; and at my birth
The frame and huge foundation of the earth
Shaked like a coward.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 13.

The owl shriek'd at my birth, an evil sign;
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time.
Dogs howled.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 6, l. 47.

14 These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond cracked 'twixt son and father.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 2, l. 112.

The night had been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,
Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death,
And prophesying with accents terrible

Of dire combustion and confused events
New hatch'd to the woeful time: the obscure bird

Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth

Was feverous and did shake.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 59.

Stones have been known to move and trees to speak.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 123.

The bay-trees in our country are all wither'd
And meteors fright the fixed stars of heaven;
The pale-faced moon looks bloody on the earth
And lean-look'd prophets whisper fearful change;
Rich men look sad and ruffians dance and leap,
The one in fear to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by rage and war:
These signs forerun the death or fall of kings.

Then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black-Monday.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
ii, sc. 5, l. 24.

If a man's nose bleeds one drop at the left nostril it is a sign of good luck, and vice versa.

SIR JOHN MELTON, Astrologaster. (1620)

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 3, l. 54.

SURETY

4
Act as surety, and ruin is at hand. (Ἐγγύα, πάρα δ' ἄρα.)

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Bk. i, sec. 73.) Diogenes Laertius states that this was Chilon's apothegm, but it has also been ascribed to Thales of Miletus. It was one of the three maxims inscribed upon the temple of Apollo at Delphi. See under MODERATION.

Act as surety, and ruin stands near you. (Ἐν ἐγγύα, πάρα δ' ἄρα, græce dicimus: Latinum est, Sponde, noxa set præsto tibi.)

THALES. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum,
l. 180.)

I could give a thousand instances to prove that those who give bond or bail appear at the bar of regret. (Per mille possem currere exempla, ut prohem Prædes vadesque pænitudinis reos.)

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 182.

Having consented to be one of three sureties, I was caught. So did the inscription at Delphi hold good for once, that suretyship is woe.

CRATINUS THE YOUNGER, Fragment.

Be surety for another and harm is at hand.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 20. (1539)

A person who can't pay gets another person who can't pay to guarantee that he can pay.

Like a person with two wooden legs getting another person with two wooden legs to guarantee that he has got two natural legs. It don't make either of them able to do a walking match.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. i, ch. 23.

6
My son, if thou be surety for thy friend, if thou hast stricken thy hand with a stranger,
Thou art snared with the words of thy mouth.

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 1-2.

My son, if I, Hafiz, thy father, take hold of thy knees in my pain,

Demanding thy name on stamped paper, one day or one hour—refrain.

Are the links of thy fetters so light that thou cravest another man's chain?

RUDYARD KIPLING, Certain Maxims of Hafiz.
No. 19.

He that is surety for a stranger shall smart for it: and he that hateth suretyship is sure.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 15.

He who is surety is never sure.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4.

One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 4, l. 3.

Procure your sureties for your days of answer.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 159.

Have pity; I'll be his surety.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 475.

9
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 83.

SWALLOW

I—Swallow: One Swallow Does Not Make
Summer

21 One swallow does not make spring, nor does one fine day. (Μία γὰρ χελιδὼν ἅρ' οὐ ποιεῖ, οὐδὲ μία ἡμέρα.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 7,
sec. 16.

One swallow does not make summer. (Una Golondrina sola no hace verano.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 13.

One swallow maketh not summer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

22 One foul wind no more makes a winter, than one swallow makes a summer.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 43.

23 One swallow proveth not that summer is near.
JOHN NORTHBROOKE, Treatise against Dancing.
(1577)

It's surely summer, for there's a swallow:
Come one swallow, his mate will follow,
The bird race quicken and wheel and thicken.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, A Bird Song. St. 2.

<sup>2</sup>
The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 6,
l. 31.

<sup>3</sup>
It is not one swallow that bringeth in summer.
RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, 25. (1539)
Nay soft (said the widow) one swallow makes not a summer, nor one meeting a marriage.
THOMAS DELONEY, Jacke of Newberie. Ch. 1.
(c. 1597)

II—Swallow: Description

<sup>4</sup>
In truth, I rather take it thou hast got
By instinct wise much sense about thy lot,
And hast small care
Whether an Eden or a desert be
Thy home, so thou remain'st alive, and free
To skim the air.
JANE WELSH CARLYE, *To a Swallow Building
under Our Eaves*.

<sup>5</sup>
Down comes rain drop, bubble follows;
On the house-top one by one
Flock the synagogue of swallows,
Met to vote that autumn's gone.
THÉOPHILE GAUTIER, Life, a Bubble.

<sup>6</sup>
But, as old Swedish legends say,
Of all the birds upon that day,
The swallow felt the deepest grief,
And longed to give her Lord relief,
And chirped when any near would come.
"Hugswala swala swal honom!"
Meaning, as they who tell it deem,
Oh, cool, oh, cool and comfort Him!
CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, The Swallow.

<sup>7</sup>
The swallow is come! The swallow is come!
O, fair are the seasons, and light
Are the days that she brings with her dusky
wings,
And her bosom snowy white!
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

<sup>8</sup>
The swallow is not ensnared by men because of its gentle nature. (At caret insidiis hominum, quia mitis, hirundo.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 149.

<sup>9</sup>
Come, summer visitant, attach
To my reed roof your nest of clay,
And let my ear your music catch,
Low twittering underneath the thatch
At the grey dawn of day.
CHARLOTTE SMITH, The First Swallow.

<sup>10</sup>
Swallow, my sister, O sister swallow,

How can thine heart be full of the spring?
A thousand summers are over and dead.
What hast thou found in the spring to follow?
What hast thou found in thy heart to sing?
What wilt thou do when the summer is shed?
SWINBURNE, Itylus. St. 1.

For where thou fliest I shall not follow,
Till life forget and death remember,
Till thou remember and I forget.
SWINBURNE, Itylus. St. 5.

<sup>11</sup>
Nature's licensed vagabond, the swallow.
TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act v, sc. 1, l. 12.

<sup>13</sup>
A swan swam in a silver lake,
And gracefully swam the swan.
MRS. E. L. AVELINE, The Vain Swan.
On thy fairy bosom, silver lake,
The wild swan spreads his snowy sail,
And round his breast the ripples break
As down he bears before the gale.
JAMES GATES PERCIVAL, To Seneca Lake.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 165.

<sup>17</sup>
The swan, with arched neck
Between her white wings mantling proudly, rows
Her state with oary feet.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 438.
Like some full-breasted swan
That, fluting a wild carol ere her death,
Ruffles her pure cold plume, and takes the flood
With swarthy webs.
TENNYSON, The Passing of Arthur, l. 434.

<sup>18</sup>
I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide,
And spend her strength with over-matching waves.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 19.

1 All the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2,
l. 101.

2 The stately-sailing swan
Gives out his snowy plumage to the gale,
And, arching proud his neck, with oary feet
Bears forward fierce, and guards his osierisle,
Protective of his young.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 778.

II—Swans: Their Death-Song

3 The jealous swan, against his death that singeth.

CHAUCEUR, Parlement of Foules, l. 342. (c. 1370)

The yellow swan famous and agreeable,
Against his death melodiously singing.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 157. (c. 1430)

Thus, like a dying swan, to a sad tune, I sing my own dirge.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Emperor of the East. Act
v, sc. 3. (1631)

Thus on Mæander's flowery margin lies
Th' expiring swan, and as he sings he dies.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto v, l. 65.

4 Not without cause is the swan dedicated to Apollo, because, foreseeing his happiness in death, he dies with a song of rapture.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i,
ch. 30, sec. 73.

The swan murmurs sweet strains with failing tongue, itself the minstrel of its own death. (Dulcia defecta modulatur carmina lingua Cantator, cygnus, funeris ipse sui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 77.

The cock swan is an emblem or representation of an affectionate and true husband to his wife above all other fowls; for the cock swan holdeth himself to one female only, and for this cause nature hath conferred on him a gift before all others; that is, to die so joyfully, that he sings sweetly when he dies; upon which the poet saith:

Dulcia defecta modulatur carmina lingua,
Cantator, cygnus, funeris ipse sui, etc.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Decision, the Case of Swans, 1600. (4 Rep. 85.)

5 Death darkens his eyes, and unplumes his wings,

Yet the sweetest song is the last he sings:

Live so, my Love, that when death shall come,

Swan-like and sweet it may waft thee home.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE, The Swan.

6 The immortal swan that did her life deplore.
GILES FLETCHER, Temptation and Victory of Christ.

7 The dying swan, when years her temples
pierce,
In music-strains breathes out her life and verse,
And, chanting her own dirge, tides on her wat'ry hearse.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Purple Island. Canto i.

8 'Tis strange that death should sing.
I am the cygnet to this pale faint swan,
Who chants a doleful hymn to his own death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailty sings
His soul and body to their lasting rest.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 20.

9 He makes a swan-like end, Fading in music.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 44.

I will play the swan, and die in music.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 247.

There, swan-like, let me sing and die.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

10 And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1161.

11 Will you not admit that I have as much of the spirit of prophecy in me as the swans?
For they, when they perceive approaching death, sing more merrily than ever, rejoicing in the thought that they are going to the god they serve.

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 84, fin.)

12 The wild swan's death-hymn took the soul
Of that waste place with joy
Hidden in sorrow. At first to the ear
The warble was low, and full and clear.

TENNYSON, The Dying Swan. St. 3.

SWEARING

See also Cursing. For Swearing, in the sense of taking an oath, see Oath, Vow

I—Swearing: Apothegms

13 'Tis strange—the Hebrew noun which means
"I am,"

The English always use to govern d—n.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 14.

Ethelberta breathed a sort of exclamation, not right out, but stealthily, like a parson's damn.

THOMAS HARDY, The Hand of Ethelberta.
Ch. 26.

Seeing would certainly have led to D—ing.

THOMAS HOOD, Legend of Navarre.

14 Jack was embarrass'd—never hero more,
And as he knew not what to say, he swore.
BYRON, The Island. Canto iii, st. 5.

1 I'm Gormed—and I can't say no fairer than that!

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 63.

2 Most bitter Billingsgate rhetoric.

EDMUND GAYTON, Festivous Notes on Don Quixote, p. 60. (1654)

Such Billingsgate language as should not come out of the mouth of any man.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 288.

Muirhead (Blue Guide to London, p. 398) states that Billingsgate, as a synonym for coarse language, is an unjust aspersion on fish-porters.

Rather too close an imitation of that language which is used in the apostolic occupation of trafficking in fish.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters to Archdeacon Singleton. No. 3.

3 Bad language or abuse
I never, never use,

Whatever the emergency;

Though "Bother it" I may

Occasionally say,

I never never use a big, big D.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

One word alone is all that strikes the ear,

One short, pathetic, simple word, . . .

"Oh, dear!"

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Autumn, l. 157.

4 It's most enough to make a deacon swear.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser ii, No. 2.

5 When I swear after mine own fashion, it is only by God; the directest of all oaths.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

6 He speaks Bear-garden.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 66. (1678)

This is brave Bear-garden language.

JEREMY COLLIER, Short View of the Immorality and Profaneness of the English Stage, p. 232. (1698)

He's as great a master of ill language as ever was bred at a Bear-garden.

EDWARD WARD, London Terræfluvius. No. iii, p. 29. (1707)

7 He'll swear dagger out of sheath; he'll swear the devil out of hell.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 271.

When he's excited he uses language that would make your hair curl.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

Full of strange oaths.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 150.

Foam'd at the mouth, and swore.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 276.

8 Swear me, Kate, like a lady as thou art,

A good mouth-filling oath, and leave "in sooth,"

And such protest of pepper-gingerbread,
To velvet-guards and Sunday-citizens.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 258.

9 Swearing till my very roof was dry.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 206.

10 You taught me language; and my profit on 't
Is, I know how to curse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 363.

11 "Our armies swore terribly in Flanders," cried my Uncle Toby, "but nothing to this."

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

12 A footman may swear, but he cannot swear like a lord. He can swear as often, but can he swear with equal delicacy, propriety and judgment?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation: Introduction.

II—Swearing: Its Virtues

13 Some fresh new oath that is not stale, but will rin round in the mouth.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

14 Take not God's name in vain; select
A time when it will have effect.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary: The Decalogue Revised.

15 Damn braces. Bless relaxes.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

16 I confess to some pleasure from the stinging rhetoric or a rattling oath.

EMERSON, Journals, 1840.

17 Page . . . take my hat . . . and go down into the courtyard and swear for me for just a short half-hour. I will swear for you when you wish it. (Paige . . . tiens ici mon bonnet . . . et va en la basse court jurer une petite demie heure pour moy. Je jureray pour toy quand tu voudras.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 36.

18 A whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my pleasure. . . . When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 4.

It comes to pass oft that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharply twanged off, gives manhood more approbation than ever proof itself would have earned him.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 196.

19 In certain trying circumstances, urgent circumstances, desperate circumstances, profanity furnishes a relief denied even to prayer.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

III—Swearing: Its Faults

1 The more you are averse to base actions, the more you should keep yourself from licence in language. (Quantum a rerum turpitudine abes, tantum te a verborum libertate sejungas.)

CICERO, Pro Caelio. Pt. iii, sec. 8.

2 But mutters coward curses as he goes.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 64.

3 Take not His name, who made thy mouth, in vain;

It gets thee nothing, and hath no excuse.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 10.

Lust and wine plead a pleasure, avarice gain;

But the cheap swearer through his open sluice

Lets his soul run for nought, as little fearing.

Were I an Epicure, I could bate swearing.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 10.

When thou dost tell another's jest, therein

Omit the oaths, which true wit cannot need.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 11.

4 Who spits against heaven, it falls in his face.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5 Things past recovery

Are hardly cur'd with exclamations.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i, l. 470.

6 And each blasphemer quite escape the rod,
Because the insult's not on man but God?

POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dialogue ii, l. 195.

7 To swear at all, except when absolutely necessary, is unbecoming to a man of sense. (In totum jurare, nisi ubi necesse est, gravi viro parum convenit.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. ix, ch. 2, sec. 98.

8 Why, what an ass am I! This is most brave,
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,

And fall a-cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 611.

SWEETNESS

I—Sweetness: Apothegms

9 Mind cannot follow it, nor words express
Her infinite sweetness.

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xiv, l. 75. (Cary, tr.)

10 No sweet without some sweat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3632.

No sweat, no sweet.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 10.

11

And spiced dainties, every one,
From silken Samarcand to cedar'd Lebanon.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 30.

12

A wilderness of sweets.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 294.

13

You are sweeter than sweet honey. (Melle dulci dulcior tu es.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 614. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

Sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb.

Old Testament: Psalms, xix, 10.

14

Sweet as dew Shut in a lily's golden core.

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Agnes.

The sweetest thing that ever grew

Beside a human door!

WORDSWORTH, Lucy Gray. St. 2.

15

Sweets to the sweet: farewell!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 266.

The sweetest garland to the sweetest maid.

THOMAS TICKELL, To a Lady with a Present of Flowers, l. 4.

They surfeited with honey and began

To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little

More than a little is by much too much.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 71.

To pile up honey upon sugar, and sugar upon honey, to an interminable tedious sweetness.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: A Chapter on Ears.

So sweet was ne'er so fatal.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 20.

18

Ah that such sweet things should be fleet,

Such fleet things sweet!

SWINBURNE, Félice. St. 22.

19

Sweet as love,

Or the remembrance of a generous deed.

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. vi, l. 682.

II—Sweetness: Sweet and Sour

19

The bitter goes before the sweet. Yea, and for as much as it doth, it makes the sweet the sweeter.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

The little sweet doth kill much bitterness.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 13.

20

No tasting earth's true food for men,

Its sweet in sad, its sad in sweet.

ROBERT BROWNING, Dis Aliter Visum. St. 25.

21

The bud may have a bitter taste,

But sweet will be the flower.

COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

- 1 Much I muse,
How bitter can spring up, when sweet is sown.
DANTE, Paradiso. Canto viii, l. 99. (Cary, tr.)
- 2 He deserves not sweet that will not taste of sour.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1834.
He hath not deserved this sweet before he hath tasted some sour.
HENRY GOLDINGHAM, Garden Plot, p. 60. (c. 1575)
Take the sweet with the sour.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
He that desireth the sweet to assay,
He must taste bitter, this is no nay.
UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures. No. 21. (c. 1535)
- 3 Sweet meat must have sour sauce.
BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act iii, sc. 3.
- 4 What is to some sad and bitter, may seem to others particularly sweet. (Aliis quod triste et amarum est, Hoc tamen esse aliis possit prædulce videri.)
LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 638.
- 5 Life to have its sweets must have its sour.
Love isn't always two souls picking flowers.
JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. iv, st. 25.
- 6 Ah, what a mixture of sweet and bitter you serve me now! (Dulce amarumque una nunc misces mihi.)
PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 63. (Act i, sc. 1.)
- 7 Flee what is sweet if it can turn to bitterness. (Dulce etiam fugias, fieri quod amarum potest.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 162.
- 8 Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 24.
Speak sweetly, man, although thy looks be sour.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 193.
- 9 The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act v, sc. 3, l. 334.
- 10 The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sour
Even in the moment that we call them ours.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 867.
- 11 Things sweet to taste prove in digestion sour.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 236. (1595)
What is sweet in the mouth is bitter in the stomach.
UNKNOWN, Politeuphuia, 172. (1669)

- Good in the mouth and bad in the maw.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5511.
It is sweet in the mouth but bitter in the belly.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho. Ch. 11.
- 12 Sweet is the rose, but grows upon a briar;
Sweet is the juniper, but sharp his bough;
Sweet is the eglantine, but pricketh near;
Sweet is the firbloom, but his branches rough;
Sweet is the cypress, but his rind is tough;
Sweet is the nut, but bitter is his pill;
Sweet is the broom-flower, but yet sour enough;
And sweet is moly, but his root is ill.
So every sweet with sour is tempered still.
SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xxvi.
Every excess causes a defect; every defect an excess. Every sweet hath its sour; every evil its good. . . . For every grain of wit there is a grain of folly. For everything you have missed, you have gained something else; and for every thing you gain, you lose something.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.
Every white will have its black
And every sweet its sour.
UNKNOWN, Sir Cauline. Pt. ii, l. 1. (c. 1450);
(PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, No. 4.)
See also under COMPENSATION.
- 13 One loving hour
For many years of sorrow can dispense:
A dram of sweet is worth a pound of sour.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto 3, st. 30.
- SWIMMING
- 14 It is one method to practise swimming with bladders, and another to practise dancing with heavy shoes.
BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.
But swam, 'till Fortune threw a rope,
Buoyant on bladders filled with hope.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 51.
My whole life, since I was left to myself to swim, as they say, without bladders.
JAMES HOWELL, Pre-eminent Parliament, 17.
Little wanton boys that swim on bladders.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 359.
- 15 Not to swim
I' th' lead o' th' current, were almost to sink.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Two Noble Kinsmen. Act i, sc. 2.
- 16 He could, perhaps, have pass'd the Hellespont,
As once (a feat on which ourselves we prided)
Leander, Mr. Ekenhead, and I did.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 105.
I read it in the story-book, that, for to kiss his dear,
Leander swam the Hellespont,—and I will swim this here.
O. W. HOLMES, The Ballad of the Oysterman.
- 17 They told me you had been to her,

And mentioned me to him:
She gave me a good character,
But said I could not swim.
LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 13.

1 Good swimmers at length are drowned.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

2 He may lightly swim that is held up by the chin.

HILL, Commonplace-Book, p. 129. (c. 1490)
He must needs swim that is held up by the chin.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5.

It is easy to swim when the head is held up.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

3 You will swim without cork; i.e., you will get on without help. (Nabis sine cortice.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 120.

4 Or sink or swim.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 194.

5 An unpractised swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1098.
I saw him beat the surges under him,
And ride upon their backs; . . . his bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oar'd
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 114.

6 I can swim like a duck.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 133.

7 A purer passion, a lordlier leisure,
A peace more happy than lives on land,
Fulfil with pulse of diviner pleasure
The dreaming head and the steering hand.
I lean my cheek to the cold grey pillow,
The deep soft swell of the full broad billow,
And close mine eyes for delight past measure,
And wish the wheel of the world would stand.

SWINBURNE, A Swimmer's Dream. Pt. v, st. 2.

SWINE

8 Root, hog, or die. This is the refrain of each of the nine verses of the Bull-Whacker's Epic.
J. H. BEADLE, Life in Utah, p. 227.

9 Thus says the prophet of the Turk:
Good mussulman, abstain from pork;
There is a part in ev'ry swine
No friend or follower of mine
May taste, whate'er his inclination,
On pain of excommunication. . . .
But for one piece they thought it hard
From the whole hog to be debarr'd. . . .
With sophistry their sauce they sweeten,
Till quite from tail to snout 'tis eaten.

COWPER, Love of the World Reproved, l. 1.

10 Though he love not to buy the pig in the poke.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

In doing of aught let your wit bear a stroke
For buying or selling of pig in a poke.
THOMAS TUSSEY, *Five Hundred Points of
Good Husbandry: September*. (1557)

He is a fool, they say, that will buy a pig in a poke.

der* FATNESS.

14 The pig, if I am not mistaken,
Supplies us sausage, ham, and bacon.
Let others say his heart is big—
I call it stupid of the pig.
OGDEN NASH, The Pig.

15 How instinct varies in the grovelling swine.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 221.

16 The hog that ploughs not, nor obeys thy call,
Lives on the labours of this lord of all.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 41.

17 'Tis old, but true, Still swine eats all the draff.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iv, sc. 2, l. 109.

18 Pearl enough for a swine.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 91. See also under PEARL.

19 Weke, weke! so cries a pig prepared to the spit.

20 What rights the brave? The sword!
What frees the slave? The sword!
What cleaves in twain the despot's chain,
And makes his gyves and dungeons vain?
The sword!

MICHAEL J. BARRY, The Sword.

He knew me and named me
The War-Thing, the Comrade,

Our right is in our swords.

BRENNUS, KING OF THE GAULS, to the Roman Ambassador, 390 B. C.

Some undone widow sits upon mine arm,
And takes away the use of 't; and my sword,
Glued to my scabbard, with wrong'd orphans'
tears,
Will not be drawn.

PHILIP MASSINGER, *A New Way to Pay Old
Debts*. Act v, sc. 1.

15
Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

New Testament: Matthew, xxvi, 52.

He that strikes with the sword shall be beaten with the scabbard.

16
Violence, . . . oppression and sword law.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 671.

17
Young fire-eyed disputants, who deem their swords,

On points of faith, more eloquent than words.

THOMAS MOORE, *Lalla Rookh: The Veiled
Prophet*, l. 18.

There are but two powers in the world, the sword and the mind. In the long run the sword is always beaten by the mind.

NAPOLEON I, Sayings of Napoleon.

19
Snatch away the sword from one who is beside herself. (Eripite isti gladium, quæ suist impos animi.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 629. (Act iii, sc. 5.)

Never put a sword in a madman's hand.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

No skill in swordsmanship, however just,
Can be secure against a madman's thrust.

COWPER, Charity, l. 509.

1
Don't stir the fire with a sword. (Πῶρ μάχαρ μὴ σκαλεῖν.)

PYTHAGORAS, (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.
Sec. 17.)

To your folly add bloodshed, and stir the fire with the sword. (Adde cruorem Stultitiæ, atque ignem gladio scrutare.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 275.

2
It is now as in the olden days when the sword ruled all things. (Es ist hier wie in den alten Zeiten Wo die klinge noch alles that bedeuten.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Lager. Sc. vi, l. 140.

3
This is his sword;
I robb'd his wound of it; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 24.

I that with my sword quarter'd the world.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 14, l. 57.

Your own good blade must win the rest.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 7.

4
So we measured swords and parted.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4,
l. 91.

And sheathed their swords for lack of argument.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 21.

5
Come, and get thee a sword, though made of lath.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 1.

Men Are as the time is: to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 30.

7
O goodly usage of those antique times,
In which the sword was servant unto right!

The arbitrament of swords.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 4, l. 53.

9
Terrible he rode alone,
With his yemen sword for aid;
Ornament it carried none
But the notches on the blade.

UNKNOWN, The Death Feud. St. 14. (Translation of an Arab war song, signed J. S. M., Tait's Edinburgh Magazine, July, 1850.)

SYMPATHY

10
A brother's sufferings claim a brother's pity.
ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

11
'Twas her thinking of others made you think of her.

E. B. BROWNING, My Kate. St. 4.

12 Needs there groan a world in anguish just to teach us sympathy?

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saisiaz, l. 312.

13
Not only hear, but patronize, befriend them,
And where ye justly can commend, commend them;

And aibins, when they winna stand the test,
Wink hard, and say: "The folks hae done their best!"

BURNS, Scots Prologue for Mrs. Sutherland's Benefit-Night, l. 37.

14
I would help others out of a fellow-feeling.

Theatre*, June, 1776.

A fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 258. Misquoting Garrick.

15
How often do the clinging hands, though weak,
Clasp round strong hearts that otherwise would break.

M. ELIZABETH CROUSE, The Strength of Weakness.

16
Jobbing, there are chords in the human mind.
DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 20.

Nature has cast me in so soft a mould,
That but to hear a story feigned for pleasure,
Of some sad lover's death, moistens my eyes,
And robs me of my manhood.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

18
Our souls sit close and silently within,
And their own web from their own entrails spin;

And when eyes meet far off, our sense is such,
That, spider like, we feel the tenderest touch.

DRYDEN, Marriage-à-la-Mode. Act ii, sc. 1.

Striking the electric chain wherewith we are darkly bound.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 23.

19
Harmony of aim, not identity of conclusion, is the secret of the sympathetic life.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

20
We sink as easily as we rise, through sympathy.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

21
The secrets of life are not shown except to sympathy and likeness.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

- 9 People in distress never think that you feel enough.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 469.)
- 10 E'en from good words thyself refrain,
And tremblingly admit
There is no anodyne for pain
Except the shock of it.
So, when thine own dark hour shall fall,
Unchallenged canst thou say:
"I never worried you at all,
For God's sake go away!"
RUDYARD KIPLING, The Comforters, St. 8.
- 11 No one is so accursed by fate,
No one so utterly desolate,
But some heart, though unknown,
Responds unto his own.
LONGFELLOW, Endymion. St. 8.
Somewhere or other there must surely be
The face not seen, the voice not heard,
The heart that not yet—never yet—ah me!
Made answer to my word.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Somewhere or Other.

Our other healthful members even to that sense.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 146.
See also under HEAD.
- 18 A heart at leisure from itself,
To soothe and sympathise.
ANNA LETITIA WARING, Father, I Know that
All My Life.
- 19 And nothing, not God, is greater to one than one's self is,
And whoever walks a furlong without sympathy walks to his own funeral drest in his shroud.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 48.
- 20 The homely sympathy that heeds
The common life our nature breeds;
A wisdom fitted to the needs
Of hearts at leisure.
WORDSWORTH, To the Daisy, l. 53.

I—Tailor: Apothegms

1 Great is the Tailor, but not the greatest.
CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe's Works.

2 Sartor resartus. (The patched-up tailor.)
THOMAS CARLYLE, Title of book, 1833.

3 The tailor that makes not a knot loseth a stitch.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4786.

4 A tailor, though a man of upright dealing,—
True but for lying,—honest but for stealing.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of a Precise Tailor.

5 Be sure your tailor is a man of sense;
But add a little care, a decent pride,
And always err upon the sober side.
O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 425.

6 Tailor, thou art a vermin,
Worse than the same thou prosecut'st and prick'st
In subtle seam.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.
I cannot abide a talking tailor.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.
7 There is knavery in all trades, but most in tailors.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Æsop, 161.
Truth among clothiers has less harbor than a louse upon a threadbare cloth.

SIR HENRY SPELMAN, Dialogue, 116. (1580)
8 Let every tailor keep to his goose.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 Lie ten nights awake, carving the fashion of a new doublet.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 18.

II—Tailor: The Tailor Makes the Man
10 God makes and the tailor shapes.

JOHN BULWER, Anthropomet., 256. (1650)
God makes and apparel shapes, but 'tis money that finishes a man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1680.
A man made by God and not by a tailor.
ANDREW JACKSON, referring to Sam Houston.
(MCELOY, Grover Cleveland, ii, 258.)

11 For though the tailor makes the man, the cook yet makes the dishes.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother. Act iii,
sc. 2. (1616)

Believe it, sir,

That clothes do much upon the wit, as weather
Does on the brain; and thence, sir, comes your proverb,

The tailor makes the man.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.
(1625)

What a fine man Hath your tailor made you!
MASSINGER, City Madam. Act i, sc. 2. (1658)

12 By a new creation of my tailor's
I've shook off old mortality.

JOHN FORD, Fancies Chaste and Noble. Act i,
sc. 3.

13 Thy tailor! . . . that poor shred
Can bring more to the making up of a man,
Than can be hoped from thee; thou art his creature;

And did he not, each morning, new create
thee,

Thou'dst stink and be forgotten.

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act iii, sc. 1.

14 Get me some French tailor
To new-create you.

MASSINGER, The Renegade. Act iii, sc. 1.

Yes, if they would thank their maker,
And seek no further; but they have new creators,
God tailor and god mercer.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 161.

15 Thy tailor, rascal, . . . made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 81.

16 Cornwall: Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent: Ay, a tailor, sir; a stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though he had been but two hours at the trade.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 61.

III—Tailor: Nine Tailors Make a Man

17 They say three tailors go to the making up of a man.

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Northward Hoe. Act
ii. (1607)

Two tailors go to a man.

UNKNOWN, Carlton's Jest, p. 20. (1611)

Some foolish knave at first began the slander that three tailors are one man.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works, p. 73.
(1630)

18 Like to nine tailors, who, if rightly spell'd
Into one man are monosyllabel'd.

UNKNOWN, Rump Songs. Pt. i, p. 159. (1639)

Just like the manhood of nine tailors.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 2, l. 22. (1663)
Nine tailors make but one man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

1 Does it not stand on record that the English Queen Elizabeth, receiving a deputation of eighteen tailors, addressed them with a "Good morning, gentlemen both!"

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

Thou wretched Fraction, wilt thou be the ninth part even of a tailor?

CARLYLE, Francia.

2 It takes nine tailors to make a man. (Il faut neuf tailleurs pour faire un homme.)

UNKNOWN. A Breton proverb, quoted by Comte de la Villemarqué.

TALE

I—Tale: Apothegms

3 Tell me the tales that to me were so dear,
Long, long ago, long, long ago.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Long, Long Ago.

The story always old, and always new.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. ii, l. 214.

A tale of the times gone by. (Das kommt mir nicht aus dem Sinn.)

HEINE, Die Lorelei.

Unwritten, half-forgotten tales of old.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xi, l. 464.

'Tis an old tale, and often told.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 27.

But now the mystic tale that pleas'd of yore
Can charm an understanding age no more.

ADDISON, An Account of the Greatest English Poets, l. 23.

4 I wrote tales beside,
Carved many an article on cherry-stones
To suit light readers.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 317.

5 Who will, may hear Sordello's story told.

Who would has heard Sordello's story told.

ROBERT BROWNING, Sordello. First and last lines. It was Tennyson who remarked that he had been able to understand only two lines of Sordello, the first and the last, and both of them were lies.

6 When we meet next we'll have a tale to tell.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 84.

Story! God bless you! I have none to tell, Sir.

GEORGE CANNING, The Friend of Humanity and the Knife Grinder.

7 Let every fellow tell his tale about.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 32.

Sey forth thy tale, and tarry not the time.

CHAUCER, The Reeves Prologue, l. 51.

8 For though myself be a full vicious man,
A moral tale yet I you telle can.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Prologue, l. 131.

Listen, every one

That listen may, unto a tale

That's merrier than the nightingale.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii, The Sicilian's Tale.

9 This tale's a fragment from the life of dreams.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Phantom or Fact?

10 Believe not every tale.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xix, 15.

This story will never go down.

HENRY FIELDING, Tumble-Down Dick. Air 1.

11 The tale runs as it pleases the teller.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4783.

12 Lest men suspect your tale untrue,
Keep probability in view.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Painter Who Pleased Nobody, l. 1.

13 A good tale, ill told, is marred in the telling.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

No tale so good but may be spoiled in the telling.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Mar a curious tale in telling it.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 35.

A tale never loses in the telling.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 6.

14 Soft as some song divine, thy story flows.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 458. (Pope, tr.)

15 Why do you laugh? Change but the name and the tale is told of you. (Quid rides? Mutato nomine de te Fabula narratur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 69.

How strive you? De te fabula!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust, last line.

16 I am always at a loss to know how much to believe of my own stories.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller: Preface.

17 A story without a head (or beginning). (Ἀκέφαλος μῦθος.)

PLATO, Phædrus. Sec. 264.

18 And thereby hangs a tale.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 28; iv, l. 60; Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 4, 159; Othello, iii, 1, 8; Taming of the Shrew, iv, 1, 60.

19 Mark now, how a plain tale shall put you down.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 281.

- I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 90.
- 1 And when thou comest thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk.
SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 305.
- An honest tale speeds best being plainly told.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 358.
- A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear,
Such as would please.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 25.
- 2 He cometh unto you with a tale which holdeth children from play, and old men from the chimney corner.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, The Defense of Poesy.
Pt. ii.
- Such wondrous tales as childhood loves to hear.
SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. i, l. 227.
- 3 What cometh once in may never out, for fear of telling tales out of school.
WILLIAM TYNDALE, Practice of Prelates, 249.
(1530)
- Beware of the porter's lodge for carrying tales out of school.
JOHN FORD, Fancies. Act i, sc. 2. (1638)
- Fie, miss! fie! tell tales out of school?
THOMAS SHADWELL, The True Widow. Act iv,
sc. 1. (1679)
- 4 The first law of story-telling. . . . "Every man is bound to leave a story better than he found it."
MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. i,
ch. 3.

II—Tale: Cock-and-Bull Stories

- 5 A schoolboy's tale, the wonder of an hour!
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 2.
- 6 If we take it for a Canterbury tale, why do we not refute it?
THOMAS CRANMER, Sermon on Rebellion. (c.
1545)
- We might as well spend that time in reading of profane histories, of Canterbury tales, or fit of Robin Hood.
HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, 49. (1549)
- That foolish young girl held us all in a Canterbury story; I thought she would never have done with it.
DANIEL DEFOE, Roxana. (1724)
- 7 What a tale of a cock and a bull he told my father.
JOHN DAY, Law Trickes. Act iv, sc. 2. (1608)
- Thou talk'st of cocks and bulls.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Chances. Act ii, sc.
4. (1625)
- Things which some call a cock and a bull, and others the product of a lively imagination.
THOMAS BROWN, Works. Vol. ii, p. 94. (1702)

- And then tell a familiar tale of a cock and a bull, and a whore and a bottle.
CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 15.
- 8 Old wives' foolish tales of Robin Hood.
ERASMUS, Adagia. (Udall, tr., 1542)
- This is a tale of Robinhood, which to believe, might show my wits but weak.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso, xlv,
105. (1591)
- From idle tales of Robin Hood, the blessed Lord of Heaven deliver me.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, i, 8. (1600)
- 9 He tells old wives' tales appropriate to the case. (Garrit aniles Ex re fabellas.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 77.
- A fool he is for his most felicity
Is to believe the tales of an old wife.
ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Ship of Fools, i, 72.
(1509)
- Thinking every old wives' tale to be a truth.
JOHN LYLIV, Euphues, p. 347.
- The Old Wives Tale.
GEORGE PEELE. Title of play (c. 1585); ARNOLD
BENNETT. Title of Novel.
- 10 This is a fair tale of a tub told us of his election.
SIR THOMAS MORE, *Confutation of Tyndale's
Answers*. (1532)
- Ye say they follow your law,
And vary not a shaw,
Which is a tale of a tub.
JOHN BALE, Three Laws. Pt. ii. (1538)
- Having entertained the fellow with a tale of a tub.
DANIEL DEFOE, Memoirs of a Cavalier, p. 97.
- Tale of a Tub.
BEN JONSON. Title of play; JONATHAN SWIFT.
Title of satire.
- Do not believe what I tell you here any more than if it were some tale of a tub.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 38.
- Note: A tale of a tub is a cock-and-bull story,
a rignmarole, usually told with intent to deceive;
a tale of Robin Hood is a fiction, usually told as such; a Canterbury tale is a traditional story designed to amuse, and sometimes long-winded;
an old wives' tale is any marvellous, legendary story.

III—Tale: Twice-Told Tales

- 11 'Tis hard to venture where our betters fail,
Or lend fresh interest to a twice-told tale.
BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 183.
- 12 A tale twice told is cabbage twice sold.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 429.
- It ought to be a good tale that is twice told.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3041.
- 13 It is an irksome thing to tell again a plain-told tale. ('Εχθρόν δέ μοι ἔστιν αὖτις ἀριζήλως εἰρημένα μυθολογεῖν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, last line.

And what so tedious as a twice told tale?

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, last line. (Pope, tr.)

Often would he tell the same tale in other words. (Ille referre aliter sæpe solebat idem.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 128.

A good tale is none the worse for being twice told.

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 7.

Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 108.

IV—Tale: Long-Winded Tales

See also Brevity

Various and strange was the long-winded tale.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 388.

Three stories high, long, dull, and old
As great lords' stories often are.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Maid of the Moor.

A story, in which native humour reigns,
Is often useful, always entertains:
A graver fact, enlisted on your side,
May furnish illustration, well applied;
But sedentary weavers of long tales
Give me the fidgets, and my patience fails.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 203.

A tale should be judicious, clear, succinct;
The language plain, and incidents well link'd;
Tell not as new what every body knows;
And, new or old, still hasten to a close.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 235.

It is a foolish thing to make a long prologue,
and to be short in the story itself.

APOCRYPHA: II Maccabees, ii, 32.

This is a long preamble of a tale.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 831.

O, Sir! the story will make your heart bleed,
... but it is too long to be told now.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

But that's another story.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Soldiers Three: Mulvaney.

V—Tale: Sad Tales

All the piteous tales that tears
Have water'd since the world was born.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 11.

The tale is worth the hearing; and may move Compassion, perhaps deserve your love
And approbation.

MASSINGER, Believe as You List: Prologue.

I will tell ye now

What never yet was heard in tale or song,
From old or modern bard, in hall or bower.

MILTON, Comus, l. 43.

Masters, I have to tell a tale of woe,
A tale of folly and of wasted life,
Hope against hope, the bitter dregs of strife,
Ending, where all things end, in death at last.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Prologue. St. 6.

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 15.

I had as lief you would tell me of a mess of porridge.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 64.

A sad tale's best for winter: I have one
Of sprites and goblins.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 25.

Come listen to my mournful tale,
Ye tender hearts and lovers dear;
Nor will you scorn to heave a sigh,
Nor need you blush to shed a tear.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Jemmy Dawson.

For seldom shall she hear a tale
So sad, so tender, yet so true.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Jemmy Dawson.

A lamentation and an ancient tale of wrong,
Like a tale of little meaning tho' the words are strong.

TENNYSON, The Lotos-eaters, l. 118.

I shudder as I tell it. (Horresco referens.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 204.

TALENT

See also Genius and Talent

To do easily what is difficult for others is the mark of talent.

AMIEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1856.

Talent is habitual facility of execution.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

Her talents were of the more silent class.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 49.

Few boys are born with talents that excel,
But all are capable of living well.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 509.

The difference between talents and character is adroitness to keep the old and trodden round, and power and courage to make a new road to new and better goals.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Profound sincerity is the only basis of talent, as of character.

EMERSON, Essays: Natural History of Intellect.

Talent is developed in retirement; character is formed in the rush of the world. (Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille, Sich ein Charakter in dem Strom der Welt.)

GOETHE, Tasso. Act i, sc. 2.

1 Each man has his own vocation. The talent is the call.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

Each man has an aptitude born with him.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

Every man has his gift, and the tools go to him that can use them.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act ii, sc. 6.

2 Talents differ; all is well and wisely put; If I cannot carry forests on my back, Neither can you crack a nut.

EMERSON, Fable.

3 And sure th' Eternal Master found His single talent well employ'd.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Mr. Robert Levet. St. 7.

That one talent which is death to hide.

MILTON, Sonnet: On His Blindness.

And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth.

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 25.

4 Let us not overstrain our talents, lest we do nothing gracefully. (Ne forçons point notre talent; Nous ne ferions rien avec grâce.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 5.

5 Let the path be open to talent.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

6 Hidden talent counts for nothing. (Occultæ musicæ nullum esse respectum.)

NERO, quoting a Greek proverb, when arranging to make his début as a singer. (SUETONIUS, Lives: Nero. Ch. 20, sec. 2.)

Suetonius records that the début was made at Naples, that the theatre was shaken by an earthquake shock while Nero was singing, but that he finished the number. The theatre collapsed shortly after the audience dispersed.

Hide not your talents, they for use were made. What's a Sun-dial in the Shade?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

7 Often the greatest talents lie unseen. (Sæpe summa ingenia in occulto latent.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 165. (Act i, sc. 2.)

8 Nathaniel: A rare talent!

Dill: If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 64.

9 Talents angel-bright,
If wanting worth, are shining instruments

In false ambition's hand, to finish faults
Illustrious, and give infamy renown.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 273.

TALK

See also Conversation, Speech

I—Talk: Definitions

10 A great thing is a great book, but greater than all is the talk of a great man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

11 The most fluent talkers or most plausible reasoners are not always the justest thinkers.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Prejudice.

12 Talking is like playing on the harp; there is as much in laying the hands on the strings to stop their vibration as in twanging them to bring out their music.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

13 The man who talks to unburthen his mind is the man to delight you.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 247.)

14 A good talker, even more than a good orator, implies a good audience.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Life of Samuel Johnson. Ch. 3.

15 All natural talk is a festival of ostentation; and by the laws of the game each accepts and fans the vanity of the other.

R. L. STEVENSON, Memories and Portraits: Talk and Talkers.

II—Talk: Apothegms

16 Two great talkers will not travel far together.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 35. Cited as a Spanish proverb.

17 "The time has come," the Walrus said,
"To talk of many things:

Of shoes—and ships—and sealing-wax—

Of cabbages—and kings—

And why the sea is boiling hot—

And whether pigs have wings."

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 4.

18 When I can't talk sense, I talk metaphor.

JOHN PHILPOT CURRAN. (MOORE, Life of Sheridan, ii, 29, note.)

19 True he can talk, and yet he is no speaker. (Λαλεῖν ἄριστος, ἀδυνατώτατος λέγειν.)

EUPOLIS, Demes. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alcibiades, xiii, 2.) Of Alcibiades.

Talkative rather than eloquent. (Loquax magis quam facundus.)

SALLUST, History. Bk. iv, sec. 43.

1 Time will explain it all. He is a talker, and needs no questioning before he speaks.

EURIPIDES, Æolus. Fragment 38.

2 People may come to do anything almost, by talking of it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, v, 286.)

3 Talking is the disease of age.

BEN JONSON, Works, iii, 395. See also AGE: ITS GARRULITY.

4 You talk just like a book. (Vous parlez tout comme un livre.)

MOLIÈRE, Don Juan. Act i, sc. 2, l. 100.

5 Strange the difference of men's talk!

SAMUEL PEYS, Diary, 1660.

6 A hotch-potch of talk. (Sartago loquendi.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 80.

You are talking cobble-stones. (Lapides loqueris.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 152. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

This is idle talk. (Verba multa facimus.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 638. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

7 The talk of the lips tendeth only to penury. Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 23.

8 I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 162.

9 And all talk died, as in the grove all song Beneath the shadow of some bird of prey.

TENNYSON, Pelleas and Ettarre, l. 594.

III—Talk: Table-Talk

10 In dinner talk it is perhaps allowable to fling any faggot rather than let the fire go out.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 34.

11 A civil guest Will no more talk all, than eat all the feast.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 51.

12 A table-talker rich in sense, And witty without wit's pretence.

COTTON MATHER, Epitaph on Anne Bradstreet.

13 And not to serve for table-talk.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

Let it serve for table-talk.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 93.

14 In after dinner talk, Across the walnuts and the wine.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter. St. 4.

IV—Talk: Admonitions

15 Talk often, but never long: in that case, if you do not please, at least you are sure not to tire your hearers.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Oct., 1748.

16 Men of your kidney talk little; they glory in taciturnity, and cut their hair shorter than their eyebrows. (Rarus sermo illis et magna libido tacendi Atque supercilio brevior coma.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 14.

17 We know well enough that we should not talk of our wives, but we seem not to know that we should talk still less of ourselves. (On sait assez qu'il ne faut guère parler de sa femme, mais on ne sait pas assez qu'on devrait encore moins parler de soi.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 364.

18 Let your talk be such as is worthy of belief, and your words such as are commonly used. (Sit tibi credibilis sermo, consuetaque verba.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 467.

19 Talk to every woman as if you loved her, and to every man as if he bored you.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

V—Talk: Familiar Talk

20 The charm and playfulness of his talk. (Lepos et festivitas orationis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 56.

21 They would talk of nothing but high life, and high-lived company; with other fashionable topics, such as pictures, taste, Shakespeare, and the musical glasses.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 9.

22 No season now for calm, familiar talk.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 169. (Pope, tr.)

23 And the talk slid north, and the talk slid south, With the sliding puffs from the hookah-mouth.

Four things greater than all things are,— Women and Horses and Power and War.

KIPLING, Ballad of the King's Jest.

24 To beguile with talk the slow-moving hours. (Tarde tempora narrando fallat.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 3, l. 11.

We were wont to spend long hours in talking, the day not sufficing for our discourse. (Solebamus consumere longa loquendo Tempora, sermonem deficiente die.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 13, l. 28.

25 His talk was like a stream which runs With rapid change from rocks to roses:

It slipped from politics to puns:

It passed from Mahomet to Moses:

Beginning with the laws which keep

The planets in their radiant courses,

And ending with some precept deep

For dressing eels or shoeing horses.

WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED, The Vicar.

1 Come, let's now talk with deliberation, fair and softly, as lawyers go to heaven.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 28.

2 Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epi-taphs; . . .

Let's choose executors and talk of wills.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 145.

3 I am not one who oft or much delight

To season my fireside with personal talk.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. No. 1.

VI—Talk: Loquacity

See also Speech: Loquacity;

Words: Verbosity

4 The talk of empty-headed, vain and tiresome babbler . . . has justly been thought to come from the lips and not from the heart.
The tongue ought not to be unrestrained and rambling, but guided by cords connected with the inmost breast.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 15,
sec. 1.

5 It would talk; Lord, how it talked!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady.
Act iv, sc. 1.

Then he will talk—good gods, how he will talk!
NATHANIEL LEE, Alexander the Great. Act i,
sc. 1.

How you do talk!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 44.

Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 64.

6 Folded his two hands and let them talk,
Watching the flies that buzzed! and yet no fool.

ROBERT BROWNING, An Epistle, l. 123.

7 So much they talked, so very little said.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 550.

8 He who talks much says many foolish things.
(Qui parle beaucoup dit beaucoup de sottises.)

CORNEILLE, Le Menteur: Sequel. Act iii, sc. 1.

Much talk, much foolishness.

The Talmud.

9 But far more numerous was the herd of such,
Who think too little, and who talk too much.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 533.

Those that merely talk and never think.

BEN JONSON, *An Epistle, Answering One that
Asked to be Sealed of the Tribe of Ben*, l. 9.

They never taste who always drink;

They always talk who never think.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Upon a Passage in the Scaligeriana.

The less people think the more they talk.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 Though I'm anything but clever,

I could talk like that for ever.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

11 He who talks much cannot always talk well.
(Chi parla troppo non può parlar sempre bene.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 6.

12 And there's our well-dressed gentleman, who sits,

By right divine, no doubt, among the wits,
Who airs his tailor's patterns when he walks,
The man that often speaks, but never talks.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, l. 63.

13 Whom the disease of talking still once possessed, he can never hold his peace. Nay, rather than he will not discourse, he will hire men to hear him.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Optanda: Thersites Homeri.

14 Oft has it been my lot to mark
A proud, conceited, talking spark.

JAMES MERRICK, The Chameleon.

15 You interrupt him with your talking. (Sermone huic obsonas.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 74.

16 Talkativeness has another plague attached to it, even curiosity; for praters wish to hear much that they may have much to say.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Of Talkativeness.

17 Talk thy tongue weary: speak.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 115.

18 If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 26.

19 The red wine first must rise
In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em

Talk us to silence.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 43.

20 For the watch to babble and to talk is most tolerable and not to be endured.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 37.

With volleys of eternal babble.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 453.

They only babble who practise not reflection.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act i, sc. 1.

21 A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 155.

<sup>1</sup> In my youth people talked about Ruskin; now they talk about drains.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

TARIFF, THE

<sup>2</sup> Protection and patriotism are reciprocal. This is the road that all great nations have trod.

J. C. CALHOUN, Speech, House of Representatives, 12 Dec., 1811.

<sup>3</sup> It is a condition that confronts us—not a theory.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Annual Message, 1887, referring to the tariff.

There's one more President for us in Protection.

JAMES G. BLAINE, Letter, Dec., 1887, after Cleveland's tariff message.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech on Import Duties, 25 April, 1843.

Protection is not a principle, but an expedient.

DISRAELI, Speech, 17 March, 1845.

<sup>5</sup> Free-trade, they [parties] concede, is very well as a principle, but it is never quite time for its adoption.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.

HENRY GEORGE, Protection or Free Trade. Ch. 9.

WINFIELD SCOTT HANCOCK, Interview, Paterson, N. J., Daily Guardian, 8 Oct., 1880, during his campaign for the Presidency, a remark widely ridiculed and which helped to lose him the election.

<sup>8</sup> Our interest will be to throw open the doors of commerce, and to knock off all its shackles, giving perfect freedom to all persons for the vent of whatever they may choose to bring into our ports, and asking the same in theirs.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 240.

We should encourage home manufactures to the extent of our own consumption of everything of which we raise the raw material.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 236.

I do not mean to say that it may not be for the general interest to foster for awhile certain infant manufactures, until they are strong enough to stand against foreign rivals, but when evident that they will never be so, it is against right to make the other branches of industry support them.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xv, p. 432.

<sup>9</sup> It accorded well with two favorite ideas of mine, of leaving commerce free, and never keeping an unnecessary soldier.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvii, p. 330.

<sup>10</sup> I have come to a resolution myself, as I hope every good citizen will, never again to purchase any article of foreign manufacture which can be had of American make, be the difference of price what it may.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 223.

<sup>11</sup> Free trade, one of the greatest blessings which a government can confer on a people, is in almost every country unpopular.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mitford's History of Greece.

<sup>12</sup> The tariff is the Gulf Stream of politics. It flows through both parties, and each is trying to catch the other in bathing and steal his clothes.

PATRICK FRANCIS MURPHY, Speeches, at Manhattan Club.

ARTEMUS WARD, Things in New York.

TASTE

<sup>14</sup> Every one carries his own index-rule of taste, and amuses himself by applying it, triumphantly, wherever he travels.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 132.

<sup>15</sup> Want of taste plays the chief part among men and plethora of words. (Ἀνομία τὸ πλεον μένος ἐν βοροῖσι, λόγων τε πλήθος —)

CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Bk. i, sec. 91.)

<sup>16</sup> Other virtues are in request in the field and workyard, but a certain degree of taste is not to be spared in those we sit with.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

Those who are esteemed umpires of taste are often persons who have acquired some knowledge of admired pictures or sculptures, and have an inclination for whatever is elegant; but if you inquire whether they have beautiful souls, and whether their own acts are like fair pictures, you learn that they are selfish and sensual.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

<sup>17</sup> Men lose their tempers in defending their taste.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ii, p. 147.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: Beauty.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 242.

A judge of matters of taste. (Elegantiae arbiter.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, sec. 18. Usually quoted: Arbiter elegantiarum.

<sup>5</sup> Men have not all the same tastes and likes. . . . Their tastes vary, and they call for widely different things. (Non omnes eadem mirantur amantque. . . . Poscentes vario multum diversa palato.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 58.

There are as many thousands of tastes as there are living men. (Quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum Milia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 27.

Such and so various are the tastes of men.

MARK AKENSIDE, The Pleasures of Imagination. Bk. iii, l. 567.

Now who shall arbitrate?

Ten men love what I hate,

Shun what I follow, slight what I receive.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 22.

In different courses different tempers run;

He hates the moon, I sicken at the sun.

Wound up at twelve at noon, his clock goes right;

Mine better goes, wound up at twelve at night.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 16. Quoting an old French proverb.

Every man as he loveth, quoth the good man when that he kissed his cow.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

Every one as they like, as the woman said when she kissed her cow.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 29.

<sup>12</sup> There is no one thing that pleases all: one man gathers thorns and another roses. (Non omnibus unum est quod placet: hic spinas colligit, ille rosas.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 74.

<sup>13</sup> Talk what you will of taste, my friend, you'll find

Two of a face as soon as of a mind.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 268.

One likes the pheasant's wing, and one the leg; The vulgar boil, the learned roast an egg.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2.

But different taste in different men prevails, And one is fired by heads, and one by tails.

POPE, A Sermon Against Adultery, l. 35.

<sup>14</sup> I have always suspected public taste to be a mongrel product, out of affectation by dogmatism.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Reflections upon Ridicule, p. 122. Quoting a Latin proverb, used by many other writers.

COWPER, The Yearly Distress. St. 5.
- 4
Of all debts men are least willing to pay taxes.
What a satire is this on government! Everywhere they think they get their money's worth, except for these. Hence the less government we have the better—the fewer laws and the less confided power.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.
- 5
Was it Bonaparte who said that he found vices very good patriots?—"he got five millions from the love of brandy, and he should be glad to know which of the virtues would pay him as much." Tobacco and opium have broad backs, and will cheerfully carry the load of armies.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization.
- 6
But in this world, nothing is certain but death and taxes. (Mais dans ce monde, il n'y a rien d'assuré que la mort et les impôts.)
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to M. Leroy, 1789.
- "It was as true," said Mr. Barkis, . . . "as taxes is. And nothing's truer than them."
DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 21.
- 7
Taxation must not lead men into temptation, by requiring trivial oaths, by making it profitable to lie, to swear falsely, to bribe or to take bribes.
HENRY GEORGE, The Condition of Labor, p. 11.
- Taxation must not take from individuals what rightfully belongs to individuals.
HENRY GEORGE, The Condition of Labor, p. 11.
- 8
No one should be permitted to hold natural opportunities without a fair return to all for any special privilege thus accorded to him, and that value which the growth and improvement of a community attaches to land should be taken for the use of the community. . . . We are in favor of raising all public revenues by a single tax upon land values.
HENRY GEORGE, The Single Tax Theory.

- 9
All taxes must, at last, fall upon agriculture.
GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 8.
- 10
Robin: On Tuesday I made a false income tax return. All: Ha! ha! 1st Ghost: That's nothing. 2nd Ghost: Nothing at all. 3rd Ghost: Everybody does that. 4th Ghost: It's expected of you.
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act ii.
- 11
Unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation.
ABRAM S. HEWITT, Resolution, Democratic platform, 1884.
- 12
The purse of the people is the real seat of sensibility. Let it be drawn upon largely, and they will then listen to truths which could not excite them through any other organ.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 59.
- The marvel of all history is the patience with which men and women submit to burdens unnecessarily laid upon them by their governments.
WILLIAM H. BORAH, Speech, U. S. Senate.

Taxes milks dry, but, neighbor, you'll allow Thet havin' things unsettled kills the cow.
J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers: Mason and Slidell.
- The beggar is taxed for a corner to die in.
J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. i, Prelude.
- 15
O that there might in England be
A duty on Hypocrisy,
A tax on humbug, an excise
On solemn plausibilities.
HENRY LUTTRELL, An Aspiration.
- 16
The power to tax is the power to destroy.
CHIEF JUSTICE JOHN MARSHALL, Decision, U. S. Supreme Court, 1819.
- The power to tax is the one great power on which the whole national fabric is based. . . . It is not only the power to destroy, but also the power to keep alive.
Decision, U. S. Supreme Court.
- 17
"I would," says Fox, "a tax devise
That shall not fall on me."
"Then tax receipts," Lord North replies,
"For those you never see."
RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN, Epigram.
- 18
We can inform Jonathan what are the inevitable consequences of being too fond of glory:
—Taxes upon every article which enters the mouth, or covers the back, or is placed on the foot . . . taxes on everything on earth, and in the waters under the earth.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Review of Seybert's Statistical Annals of the United States.

The schoolboy whips his taxed top, the beardless youth manages his taxed horse with a taxed bridle, on a taxed road; and the dying Englishman, pouring his medicine, which has paid seven per cent., flings himself back on his chintz bed, which has paid twenty-two per cent., and expires in the arms of an apothecary, who has paid a license of a hundred pounds for the privilege of putting him to death.

SYDNEY SMITH, Essays: Review of Seybert's Annals.

1 Men who prefer any load of infamy, however great, to any pressure of taxation, however light.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letters on American Debts.

2 It is the part of a good shepherd to shear his flock, not flay it. (Boni pastoris esse tondere pecus, non deglubere.)

TIBERIUS CÆSAR, to certain governors who recommended burdensome taxes. (SUE-TONTIUS, Lives: Tiberius. Ch. xxxii, sec. 2.)

What am I now to take out of all this scarcity? (Quid ego ex hac inopia nunc capiam?)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 167. (Act i, sc. 3.)

TEA

3 The would-be wits and can't-be gentlemen, I leave them to their daily "tea is ready," Smug coterie, and literary lady.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 76.

4 Tea! thou soft, thou sober, sage, and venerable liquid, . . . thou female tongue-running, smile-smoothing, heart-opening, wink-tipping cordial, to whose glorious insipidity I owe the happiest moment of my life, let me fall prostrate.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Lady's Last Stake. Act i, sc. 1.

5 Free yourselves from the slavery of tea and coffee and other slop-kettle.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 1.

Oh some are fond of Spanish wine and some are fond of French, And some 'll swallow tay and stuff fit only for a wench.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Captain Stratton's Fancy.

6 Retired to tea and scandal, according to their ancient custom.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1.

Love and scandal are the best sweeteners of tea. FIELDING, The Roast Beef of Old England.

7 Now stir the fire, and close the shutters fast, Let fall the curtains, wheel the sofa round, And, while the bubbling and loud hissing urn Throws up a steamy column, and the cups, That cheer but not inebriate, wait on each, So let us welcome peaceful ev'ning in.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 36. (1785)

[Tar water] is of a nature so mild and benign and proportioned to the human constitution as to warm without heating, to cheer but not inebriate.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Siris. Sec. 217. (1744) Quoted by SCOTT, St. Roman's Well: Heading, ch. 7.

8 Polly put the kettle on, we'll all have tea. DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 17.

9 Tea, though ridiculed by those who are naturally coarse in their nervous sensibilities, . . . will always be the favourite beverage of the intellectual.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an English Opium-Eater.

10 There is a great deal of poetry and fine sentiment in a chest of tea.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration; Representative Men: Montaigne.

11 We had a kettle: we let it leak: Our not repairing it made it worse.

We haven't had any tea for a week. . . . The bottom is out of the Universe!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Natural Theology.

12 Soft yielding minds to water glide away, And sip, with Nymphs, their elemental tea. POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 61.

Here, thou, great Anna! whom three realms obey, Dost sometimes counsel take—and sometimes tea.

POPE, Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 7. It should be remembered that in Pope's day, tea was pronounced tay.

13 Thank God for tea! What would the world do without tea? how did it exist? I am glad I was not born before tea.

SYDNEY SMITH, (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 383.)

14 Venus her myrtle, Phoebus has his bays; Tea both excels, which she vouchsafes to praise. . . .

The Muse's friend, tea does our fancy aid, Repress those vapours which the head invade, And keeps that palace of the soul serene.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Tea.

15 For her own breakfast she'll project a scheme, Nor take her tea without a stratagem.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 190.

I—Teaching: Definitions and Apothegms

<sup>1</sup> To know how to suggest is the great art of teaching.

AMIEL, Journal, 16 Nov., 1864.

I do not teach, I only tell. (Je n'enseigne point, je raconte.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

<sup>2</sup> 'Tis the taught already that profits by teaching.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. iv.

<sup>3</sup> He is wise who can instruct us and assist us in the business of daily virtuous living.

CARLYLE, Essays: Schiller.

<sup>4</sup> The master loseth his time to learn
When the disciple will not hear.

CHAUCEER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 2149.

<sup>5</sup> What greater or better gift can we offer the republic than to teach and instruct our youth? (Quod enim munus reipublicæ afferre majus meliusve possumus, quam si docemus atque erudimus juventutem?)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 4.

<sup>6</sup> Not only is there an art in knowing a thing, but also a certain art in teaching it. (Nam non solum scire aliquid artis est, sed quædam ars etiam docendi.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. ii, ch. 19, sec. 47.

<sup>7</sup> It is always safe to learn, even from our enemies—seldom safe to venture to instruct, even our friends.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 284.

<sup>8</sup> Examinations are formidable, even to the best prepared, for the greatest fool may ask more than the wisest man can answer.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 322.

<sup>9</sup> Seek to delight, that they may mend mankind.

And, while they captivate, inform the mind.

COWPER, Hope, l. 758.

<sup>10</sup> The schools became a scene
Of solemn farce, where Ignorance in stilts,
His cap well lin'd with logic not his own,
With parrot tongue perform'd the scholar's part,

Proceeding soon a graduated dunce.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 735.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Motto, for the astronomy building of Junior College, at Pasadena, Calif.

<sup>12</sup> There is no teaching until the pupil is brought into the same state or principle in which you are; a transfusion takes place; he is you and you are he; there is a teaching, and by no unfriendly chance or bad company can he ever quite lose the benefit.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

<sup>13</sup> It is a luxury to learn; but the luxury of learning is not to be compared with the luxury of teaching.

R. D. HITCHCOCK, Eternal Atonement: Receiving and Giving.

<sup>14</sup> While the colt has a tender neck and is able to learn, the trainer teaches him to go as his rider directs. (Fingit equum tenera docilem cervicem magister Ire viam qua monstret eques.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 64.

<sup>15</sup> Instruction enlarges the powers of the mind. (Doctrina sed vim promovet insitam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 33.

<sup>16</sup> If you love instruction, you will be well instructed. (Ἐὰν ᾗς φιλομαθῆς, ἔσει πολυμαθῆς.)

ISOCRATES, Ad Dæmonicum. Sec. 18. Roger Ascham (The Schoolmaster) states that this motto was inscribed in golden letters above the door of Isocrates' school.

<sup>17</sup> Very few men are wise by their own counsel; or learned by their own teaching. For he that was only taught by himself, had a fool to his master.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Consilia.

<sup>18</sup> The guidance of our mind is of more importance than its progress. (La direction de notre esprit est plus importante que son progrès.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 266.

<sup>19</sup> Those having torches will pass them on to others. (Δαμπᾶδια ἔχοντες διαδῶσουσιν ἀλλήλοις.)

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 328.

Who kindly sets a wanderer on his way
Does e'en as if he lit another's lamp by his:
No less shines his, when he his friend's hath lit.
(Homo, qui erranti comiter monstrat viam,
Quasi lumen de suo lumine accendat, facit.
Nihilo minus ipsi lucet, cum illi accenderit.)

ENNIUS. (CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 51.)

Ministers of good things are like torches, a light to others, waste and destruction to themselves.

RICHARD HOOKER. Quoted by Gladstone, 1880. (MORLEY, Life of Gladstone. Bk. viii, ch. 1.)

<sup>20</sup> Men must be taught as if you taught them not,
And things unknown proposed as things forgot.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 15.

1 The teaching makes the difficulty. (Difficultatem facit doctrina.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. x, ch. 3.

2 Men learn while they teach. (Homines, dum docent, discunt.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. vii, sec. 9.

And gladly would he learn, and gladly teach.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 310.

Men learn when they teach.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture.

3 Is it this nonsense we teach with sour and pale faces? (Hoc est, quod tristes docemus et pallidi?)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. 48, sec. 7.

4 Highly fed and lowly taught.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 3.

Better fed than taught.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Jack-a-Lent.

5 To teach a teacher ill beseemeth me.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 108.

6 Delightful task! to rear the tender thought,
To teach the young idea how to shoot.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 1152.

II—Teaching: The Teacher

7 Brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel.

New Testament: Acts, xxii, 3.

8 A schoolmaster should have an atmosphere of awe, and walk wonderingly, as if he was amazed at being himself.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. i, p. 52.

9 The hawk-nosed, high-cheek-boned Professor . . .

The shallow, virgin-minded, studious
Martyr to mild enthusiasm.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Pt. xiv.

10 Here lie Willie Michie's banes:

O Satan, when ye tak him,

Gie him the schulin o' your weans,
For clever deils he'll mak them!

ROBERT BURNS, For Mr. William Michie.

11 Look out, gentlemen, the schoolmaster is abroad!

LORD BROUGHAM, Address, London Mechanics' Institute, 1825, referring to the secretary, John Reynolds, a schoolmaster.

Let the soldier be abroad if he will, he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage,—a personage less imposing in the eyes of some, perhaps insignificant. The schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier, in full military array.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, 29 Jan., 1828.

The victory of the Prussians over the Austrians was a victory of the Prussian over the Austrian schoolmaster.

PRIVY COUNCILLOR PESCHEL. (Ausland. No. 19, 17 July, 1866.)

The Prussian schoolmaster won the battle of Sadowa. (Der preussische Schulmeister hat die Schlacht bei Sadowa gewonnen.)

VON MOLTKE, Speech, Reichstag, 16 Feb., 1874.

12 'Tis pleasing to be school'd in a strange tongue

By female lips and eyes—that is, I mean,
When both the teacher and the taught are young.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 164.

13 Respectable Professors of the Dismal Science.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 1. Used with reference to political economy.

14 A teacher should be sparing of his smile.

COWPER, Charity, l. 490.

15 We loved the doctrine for the teacher's sake.

DANIEL DEFOE, Character of the Late Dr. Annesley. See also HOLMES under CREED.

16 Consider that I laboured not for myself only, but for all them that seek learning.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxiii, 17.

17 He teaches who gives and he learns who receives.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

The man who can make hard things easy is the educator.

EMERSON, Journals, 1861.

The Spirit only can teach. Not any sensual, not any liar, not any slave can teach.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: An Address Delivered before the Senior Class in Divinity College, Cambridge, 15 July, 1838.

18 A mere professor, spite of all his cant, is

Not a whit better than a Mantis,—

An insect, of what clime I can't determine,
That lifts its paws most parson-like, and thence,

By simple savages—thro' sheer pretence—
Is reckon'd quite a saint amongst the vermin.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 87.

19 Now owls are not really wise—they only look that way. The owl is a sort of college professor.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

20 Our American professors like their literature clear, cold, pure, and very dead.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Address, Swedish Academy, 12 Dec., 1930.

1 The average schoolmaster is and always must be essentially an ass, for how can one imagine an intelligent man engaging in so puerile an avocation?

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 244.

2 Beside yon straggling fence that skirts the way,

With blossom'd furze unprofitably gay,
There, in his noisy mansion, skill'd to rule,
The village master taught his little school;
A man severe he was, and stern to view;
I knew him well, and every truant knew;
Well had the boding tremblers learn'd to trace

The day's disasters in his morning face;
Full well they laugh'd, with counterfeited glee,

At all his jokes, for many a joke had he;
Full well the busy whisper, circling round,
Convey'd the dismal tidings when he frown'd;

Yet he was kind; or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 193.

3 The vanity of teaching often tempteth a man to forget he is a blockhead.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 240.

4 The times were hard when Rip to manhood grew;

They always will be when there's work to do.
He tried at farming,—found it rather slow,—
And then at teaching—what he didn't know.

O. W. HOLMES, Rip Van Winkle, M. D., l. 7.

5 For him the Teacher's chair became a throne.
LONGFELLOW, Parker Cleaveland.

6 Teacher, spare your simple flock. . . . Let the dismal rods, sceptres of pedagogues, have a rest. (Ludi magister, parce simplici turbæ; . . . ferulæque tristes, sceptræ pædagogorum, cessant.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 62.

The twig is so easily bended
I have banished the rule and the rod:
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge,
They have taught me the goodness of God:
My heart is the dungeon of darkness,
Where I shut them for breaking a rule;
My frown is sufficient correction;
My love is the law of the school.

CHARLES M. DICKINSON, The Children.

7 Let such teach others who themselves excel,
And censure freely who have written well.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 15.

8 Woe upon ye
And all such false professors.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 114.

9 When I am forgotten, . . . say, I taught thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 432.

10 Schoolmasters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 1, l. 94.

I do present you with a man of mine,
Cunning in music and the mathematics.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 55.

11 I am not a teacher: only a fellow-traveller of whom you asked the way. I pointed ahead—ahead of myself as well as of you.

BERNARD SHAW, Getting Married.

12 He who can, does. He who cannot, teaches.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

13 Seven pupils in the class
Of Professor Callias,
Listen silent while he drawls,—
Three are benches, four are walls.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Professor.

14 Everybody who is incapable of learning has taken to teaching.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

15 He is either dead or teaching school. ("ἢ τεθνηκεν ἢ διδάσκει γράμματα.")

ZENOBIUS. Quoted by Erasmus, Adagia: "Aut mortuus est aut docet litteras."

16 The same persons telling to the same people the same things about the same things. (Οἱ αὐτοὶ περὶ τῶν αὐτῶν τοῖς αὐτοῖς τὰ αὐτά.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb. Quoted by Isaac le Grange, apropos of teachers.

17 Every tear from every eye
Becomes a babe in eternity.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

18 Tears are the noble language of the eye.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 150.

Tears, though th' are here below the sinner's brine,

Above they are the Angels' spiced wine.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Tears.

Our present tears here, not our present laughter,
Are but the handbills of our joys hereafter.

ROBERT HERRICK, Tears.

19 A winy vapour melting in a tear.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 143. (Pope, tr.)

1 Sweet tears! the awful language, eloquent
Of infinite affection, far too big for words.
POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. v, l. 633.

2 Sweet drop of pure and pearly light,
In thee the rays of Virtue shine;
More calmly clear, more mildly bright,
Than any gem that gilds the mine.
SAMUEL ROGERS, On a Tear.

3 Eye-offending brine.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 1, l. 30.

4 Of all the languages of earth in which the

II—Tears: Apothegms

7 The welling fountains of my tears are utterly dried up. (Κλαυμάτων ἐπισσυντοι πηγάι κατεσβήκασιν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 887.

Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears.

Old Testament: Jeremiah, ix, 1.

If you go over desert and mountain,
Far into the country of Sorrow, . . .
You shall certainly come to the fountain
At length,—to the Fountain of Tears.

ARTHUR O'SHAUGHNESSY, The Fountain of Tears.

Silver key of the fountain of tears.

SHELLEY, Fragment: To Music.

8 Why mournest thou, Rachel, shedding bitter tears? Because I see my children slain I shed tears.

AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS, On Rachel. (Greek Anthology. Bk. i, epig. 43.)

Rachel weeping for her children.

torica*. Bk. i, sec. 56; Ad Herennium. Bk. ii, sec. 31.) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757.

Nothing dries sooner than a woman's tears.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3661.

Never a tear bedims the eye

That time and patience will not dry.

BRET HARTE, The Lost Galleon, l. 33.

The tear down childhood's cheek that flows
Is like the dew-drop on the rose;
When next the summer breeze comes by
And waves the bush, the flower is dry.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iv, st. 11.

10 It is not possible that a child of these tears should be lost. (Fieri non potest, ut filius istarum lachrimarum pereat.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Ch. xii. The answer of the Bishop to St. Augustine's mother, when she wept for her son's heresies.

11 It is the wisdom of crocodiles, that shed tears
when they would devour.

BACON, Essays: Of Wisdom for a Man's Self.

To these crocodile tears they will add sobs, fiery sighs, and sorrowful countenance.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
iii, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 4.

Lepidus: What manner o' thing is your crocodile? . . . 'Tis a strange serpent.

Antony: 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 7, l. 46.

The mournful crocodile

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 226.

Crocodiles wept tears for thee.

12 Tell Alyttes, from me, to make his diet of onions.

BIAS, advising an enemy to weep. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias. Bk. i, sec. 84.)

Onions can make even heirs and widows weep.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

The tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc.
2, l. 177.

And if the boy have not a woman's gift
To rain a shower of commanded tears,
An onion will do well for such a shift,
Which in a napkin being close convey'd
Shall in despite enforce a watery eye.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. i, l. 124.

13 The busy have no time for tears.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act iv, sc. 1.

Weep if thou wilt, but weep not all too long;
Or weep and work, for work will lead to song.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Within and Without. Pt.
iv, Introductory Sonnet, l. 6.

<sup>1</sup> Tears are blessings, let them flow.
HARRY HUNTER, Song.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xv, l. 131.

Dear Lord, though I be changed to senseless clay,
And serve the potter as he turns his wheel,
I thank Thee for the gracious gift of tears!

T. B. ALDRICH, Two Moods. Pt. ii.

The gift of tears is (as has been said) the best gift of God to suffering man.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. No. 16.

<sup>3</sup> It is only to the happy that tears are a luxury.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Prologue No. 2.

<sup>4</sup> Truly it is allowed us to weep; by weeping we disperse our wrath; and tears course over the bosom like a flowing stream. (Flere licet certe; flendo defundimus iram, Perque sinum lacrimæ fluminis instar eunt.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. viii, l. 61.

There is a certain joy in weeping, for by tears grief is sated and relieved. (Est quædam flere voluptas; Expletur lacrimis egeriturque dolor.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 3, l. 37.

<sup>5</sup> Tears soothe suffering eyes.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Flower, Fruit, and Thorn Pieces. Bk. iv, ch. 23.

<sup>6</sup> Tears fall, no matter how we try to check them, and by being shed they ease the soul. (Excidunt etiam retinentibus lacrimæ et animum profusæ levant.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, 16.

<sup>7</sup> The liquid drops of tears that you have shed
Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl,
Advantaging their loan with interest
Of ten times double gain of happiness.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 321.

IV—Tears: Weeping

<sup>8</sup> The flower which the wind has shaken
Is soon filled again with rain;
So does my heart fill slowly with tears,
O Foam-driver, Wind-of-the-vineyards,
Until you return.

RICHARD ALDINGTON, Images. No. 6.

<sup>9</sup> Frequent tears have run
The colours from my life, and left so dead
And pale a stuff, it were not fitly done
To give the same as pillow to thy head.

E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets From the Portuguese. No. 8.

<sup>10</sup> "I weep for you," the Walrus said:
"I deeply sympathize."

With sobs and tears he sorted out
Those of the largest size,
Holding his pocket-handkerchief
Before his streaming eyes.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 4.

<sup>11</sup> It's such a little thing to weep,
So short a thing to sigh;
And yet by trades the size of these
We men and women die!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 91.

<sup>12</sup> What precious drops are those Which silently each other's track pursue,
Bright as young diamonds in their infant dew?

DRYDEN, II Conquest of Granada. Act iii, sc. 1.

Not a sigh nor a tear my pain discloses,
But they fall silently, as dew on roses.

DRYDEN, Secret Love. Act iv, sc. 2.

<sup>13</sup> But nothing could a charm impart
To soothe the stranger's woe;
For grief was heavy at his heart,
And tears began to flow.

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 8.)

<sup>14</sup> And weep the more because I weep in vain.
THOMAS GRAY, Sonnet: On the Death of Richard West.

<sup>15</sup> Weep not, my wanton, smile upon my knee,
When thou art old there's grief enough for thee.

ROBERT GREENE, Menaphon: Song.

<sup>16</sup> Such pretty flowers, like to orphans young,
To speak by tears, before ye have a tongue.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Primroses Filled With Morning Dew.

<sup>17</sup> My tears must stop, for every drop
Hinders needle and thread.

THOMAS HOOD, The Song of the Shirt.

Oh! would I were dead now,
Or up in my bed now,
To cover my head now
And have a good cry.

THOMAS HOOD, A Table of Errata.

<sup>18</sup> Shed no tear! O shed no tear!
The flower will bloom another year.
Weep no more! O weep no more!
Young buds sleep in the root's white core.

JOHN KEATS, Faery Songs. No. 1, l. 1.

<sup>19</sup> E'en like the passage of an angel's tear
That falls through the clear ether silently.

KEATS, Sonnet: To One Who Has Been Long in City Pent.

1 Give me thy tears: I ask not for thy kiss,
Or for thy smile—but only for thy tears.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, From a Lover's Notebook.

Give other friends your lighted face,
The laughter of the years;

I come to crave a greater grace—
Bring me your tears.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Your Tears.

I do not beg the flower, the fruit,
Your summer wears;
Some winter hour when joy is mute,
Give me your tears.

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, Petition.

2 A flood of thoughts came o'er me
That filled my eyes with tears.

LONGFELLOW, The Bridge. St. 6.

3 But only human eyes can weep.

ANDREW MARVELL, Eyes and Tears, l. 48.

4 The setting is all of rubies red,
And pearls which a Peri might have kept.
For each ruby there my heart hath bled:
For each pearl my eyes have wept.

OWEN MEREDITH, The Portrait.

5 Weep not, nor pity thine own life too much.
WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xiii, l. 315.

6 Some reckon their age by years,
Some measure their life by art;
But some tell their days by the flow of their tears,
And their lives by the moans of their heart.
ABRAM J. RYAN, The Rosary of My Tears.

7 The big round tears
Coursed one another down his innocent nose.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, 38.
The big round tears run down his dappled face.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 454.

8 No longer will I be fool,
To put the finger in the eye and weep.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 205.

9 Draw them to Tiber banks, and weep your tears
Into the channel, till the lowest stream
Do kiss the most exalted shores of all.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 1, l. 63.

Why, man, if the river were dry, I am able to fill it with my tears.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 58.

She by the river sat, and sitting there,
She wept, and made it deeper by a tear.
ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Julia, Weeping.

10 Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean,

Tears from the depth of some divine despair
Rise in the heart, and gather to the eyes,
In looking on the happy autumn-fields,
And thinking of the days that are no more.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 21. See also under MEMORY.

11 She bid me take life easy, as the grass grows on the weirs;
But I was young and foolish, and now am full of tears.

12 What gem hath dropp'd and sparkles o'er his chain?

The tear most sacred, shed for other's pain,
That starts at once—bright—pure—from pity's mine,
Already polish'd by the hand divine!

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto ii, st. 15.

13 There is a tear for all that die,
A mourner o'er the humblest grave.
BYRON, On the Death of Sir Peter Parker, Bart.

14 No radiant pearl, which crested Fortune wears,
No gem that twinkling hangs from Beauty's ears,
Not the bright stars which Night's blue arch adorn,

Nor rising suns that gild the vernal morn,
Shine with such lustre as the tear that flows
Down Virtue's manly cheek for others' woes,
ERASMUS DARWIN, The Botanic Garden. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 459.

15 Ope the sacred source of sympathetic tears.

16 The tribute of a tear is all I crave.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ii, l. 89. (Pope, tr.)

None are so desolate but something dear,
Dearer than self, possesses or possess'd
A thought, and claims the homage of a tear.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 24.

17 If you would have me weep, you must first feel grief yourself. (Si vis me flere, dolendum est Primum ipsi tibi.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 102. See also under FEELING.

18 He must not float upon his watery bier
Unwept, and welter to the parching wind,
Without the meed of some melodious tear.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 12.

19 The glorious Angel, who was keeping
The gates of Light, beheld her weeping;
And, as he nearer drew and listen'd

To her sad song, a tear-drop glisten'd
Within his eyelids, like the spray

From Eden's fountain, when it lies
On the blue flow'r, which—Bramins say—
Blooms nowhere but in Paradise.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 28.

A tear so limpid and so meek
It would not stain an angel's cheek.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto ii, st. 22.

1 And wiped our eyes
Of drops that sacred pity hath engender'd.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 122.

Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII: Prologue, l. 5.

2 Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Shamed their aspect with store of childish drops.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 154.

And wet his grave with my repentant tears.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 216.

My tears that fall Prove holy water on thee.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 268.

3 Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless
night,
And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd
woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxx.

I so lively acted with my tears
That my poor mistress, moved therewithal,
Wept bitterly.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iv, sc. 4, l. 174.

4 Who in telling such things can refrain from tears? (Quis talia fando . . . Temperet a lacrimis?)

5 Our funeral tears, from diff'rent causes, rise.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 522.

VI—Tears of Men

6 Talk not of grief till thou hast seen the tears of warlike men!
FELICIA HEMANS, Bernardo del Carpio, l. 26.

A child will weep a bramble's smart,
A maid to see her sparrow part,
A stripling for a woman's heart;
But woe awaits a country when
She sees the tears of bearded men.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 16.

7 Thrice he assay'd, and thrice, in spite of scorn,

Tears, such as angels weep, burst forth.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 619.

8 Look, they weep;
And I, an ass, am onion-eyed; for shame,
Transform us not to women.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv,
sc. 2, l. 34.

9 Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 186.

10 All my mother came into mine eyes
And gave me up to tears.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 31.

See, see what showers arise,
Blown with the windy tempest of my heart.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 85.

What I should say
My tears gainsay; for every word I speak,
Ye see, I drink the water of mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 4, l. 73.

11 Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forced me,
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 428.

O, I could play the woman with mine eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 230.

12 These foolish drops do something drown my manly spirit.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 13.

13 Did he break into tears? . . . There are no faces truer than those that are so washed.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 24.

One whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 348.

14 Scorn the proud man that is asham'd to weep.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 108.

VII—Tears of Women

15 A lady's tears are silent orators.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii,
sc. 3.

With the persuasive language of a tear.
CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Times, l. 308.
Tears are sometimes as weighty as words. (Interdum lacrimae pondera vocis habent.)
OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 1, l. 158.

16 So bright the tear in Beauty's eye,

Love half regrets to kiss it dry.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 8.

For Beauty's tears are lovelier than her smile.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 180.

There shall he love, when genial morn appears,

Like pensive Beauty smiling in her tears.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 95.

Yet ah, how lovely in her tears!

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 10.

Oh! too convincing—dangerously dear—

In woman's eye the unanswerable tear!

That weapon of her weakness she can wield,

To save, subdue—at once her spear and shield.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto ii, st. 15.

What lost a world, and bade a hero fly?

The timid tear in Cleopatra's eye.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto ii, st. 15.

And the tear that is wip'd with a little address,

May be follow'd perhaps by a smile.

COWPER, The Rose, l. 19. See also SMILE AND TEAR.

Then Niobe dissolves into a tear.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 168.

Like Niobe, all tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 149.

She would have made a splendid wife, for crying only made her eyes more bright and tender.

O. HENRY, Options.

Women laugh when they can and weep when they will.

8 I wept not, so of stone grew I within. (Io non piangeva, si dentro impietrai.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxiii, l. 49.

9 "Oh, weep with me, Daphne," he sighed, "for you know it's

A terrible thing to be pestered with poets!" But, alas, she is dumb, and the proverb holds good,

She never will cry till she's out of the wood!

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 73.

10 Tell me, you winged winds, That round my pathway roar,

Know ye not some spot

Where mortals weep no more?

CHARLES MACKAY, Tell Me Ye Winds.

11 Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail Or knock the breast.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1721.

I cannot weep; for all my body's moisture

Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning heart.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 79.

No, I'll not weep:

I have full cause of weeping; but this heart Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws Or ere I'll weep.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 286.

12 Hush'd be that sigh, be dry that tear, Nor let us lose our Heaven here.

Dry be that tear!

R. B. SHERIDAN, Dry be That Tear.

13 Weep no more, lady, weep no more, Thy sorrow is in vain,

For violets pluckt, the sweetest showers Will ne'er make grow again.

UNKNOWN, The Friar of Orders Gray. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. 2, No. 18.)

Oh! sing unto my roundelay;

Oh! drop the briny tear with me;

Dance no more at holiday;

Like a running river be.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, Ælla: Minstrel's Song.

Weep no more, nor sigh, nor groan,

Sorrow calls no time that's gone;

Violets pluck'd the sweetest rain

Makes not fresh nor grow again.

JOHN FLETCHER, Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc.

1. Perhaps a spurious addition to the play.

Weep no more, my lady, oh! weep no more to-day!

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, My Old Kentucky Home.

TEMPERAMENT

14 Perhaps he confuses temperament, character and individuality? . . . Individuality is a matter of psychology; temperament, a matter of sensation or æsthetics; character alone is a matter of morals.

AMEL, Journal, 30 Aug., 1869. Referring to Schopenhauer.

15 So well she acted all and every part

By turns—with that vivacious versatility,

Which many people take for want of heart.

They err—'tis merely what is call'd mobility,

A thing of temperament and not of art,

Though seeming so, from its supposed facility;

And false—though true; for surely they're sincerest

Who're strongly acted on by what is nearest.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 97.

16 The nerves, they are the man.

CABANIS. (EMERSON, Montaigne.)

17 Betsy, like all good women, had a temper of her own.

WILL CARLETON, Betsy and I Are Out.

Of all bad things by which mankind are cursed,
Their own bad tempers surely are the worst.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Menander.

A lady of what is commonly called an uncertain temper—a phrase which being interpreted signifies a temper tolerably certain to make everybody more or less uncomfortable.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 7.

Good temper is an estate for life.

16 Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

Temperance, the first of thirteen virtues which Franklin tried to practise. The others were silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquillity, chastity, humility.

17 If we give more to the flesh than we ought, we nourish an enemy; if we give not to her necessity what we ought, we destroy a citizen.

ST. GREGORY, Homilies. No. 3.

18 Drink not the third glass, which thou canst not tame,

When once it is within thee; but before

Mayst rule it, as thou list: and pour the shame,

Which it would pour on thee, upon the floor.

It is most just to throw that on the ground,

Which would throw me there, if I keep the round.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 5.

19

If all the world

Should in a pet of temperance feed on pulse,
Drink the clear stream, and nothing wear but freize,

Th' all-giver would be unthank'd, would be unprais'd, . . .

And we should serve him as a grudging master, . . .

And live like Nature's bastards, not her sons.
MILTON, Comus, l. 720.

1 Impostor do not charge most innocent Nature,
As if she would her children should be riotous

With her abundance; she, good cateress,
Means her provision only to the good
That live according to her sober laws,
And holy dictate of spare Temperance.

MILTON, Comus, l. 762.

2 Temperance controls our desires; some it hates and routs, others it regulates and restores to a healthy measure. Temperance knows that the best measure of the appetites is not what you want to take, but what you ought to take.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 29.

3 Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 13, l. 121.

Make less thy body hence, and more thy grace;
Leave gormandizing.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 5, l. 56.

Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only

Which your disease requires.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 124.

4 I prefer temperance hotels—although they sell worse liquor than any other kind of hotels.

ARTEMUS WARD, Temperance.

5 Temperance is the nurse of chastity.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act
iii, sc. 3.

TEMPTATION

6 It is good to be without vices, but it is not good to be without temptations.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 237.

7 If thou wilt go seek for a thief, no wonder if thou be robbed. . . . If thou wilt go seek fire to put in the thatch, no wonder if thy house be burned. . . . If thou canst not keep at a distance nor forbear the presence of the bait, thou art not like to forbear the sin.

RICHARD BAXTER, Works. Vol. iii, p. 447.

8 Why comes temptation but for man to meet
And master and make crouch beneath his foot,

And so be pedestaled in triumph?

ROBERT BROWNING, *The Ring and the Book:
The Pope*, l. 1185.

9 What's done we partly may compute,

But know not what's resisted.

BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid, l. 63.

10 So you tell yourself you are pretty fine clay
To have tricked temptation and turned it
away,

But wait, my friend, for a different day;

Wait till you want to want to!

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, Desire.

11 The subtlest tempter has the smoothest style;
Sirens sing sweetest when they would betray.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Legend of Matilda the Fair.

12 As the Sandwich Islander believes that the strength and valor of the enemy he kills passes into himself, so we gain the strength of the temptation we resist.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

13 How much, preventing God, how much I owe
To the defences thou hast round me set;
Example, custom, fear, occasion slow,—
These scorned bondmen were my parapet.
I dare not peep over this parapet

To gauge with glance the roaring gulf below,
The depths of sin to which I had descended,
Had not these me against myself defended.

If that he has a will to masterdom.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptations.

Temptations hurt not, though they have access:
Satan o'ercomes none, but by willingness.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptations.

The devil tempts us not—'tis we tempt him,

Reckoning his skill with opportunity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 47.

1 There are temptations that require all of one's strength to yield to.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xx, 86.

Do you really think that it is weakness that yields to temptation? I tell you that there are terrible temptations which it requires strength, strength and courage, to yield to.

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 24.

13 The devil was piqued such saintship to behold,

And long'd to tempt him like good Job of old;

But Satan now is wiser than of yore.

And tempts by making rich, not making poor.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 349.

The tempter saw his time; the work he plied;
Stocks and subscriptions poured on ev'ry side,
Till all the demon makes his full descent

chime

To drown the ears in Tennysonian rhyme!
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. i, sec. 6.

You talk of tinsel! why, we see
The old mark of rouge upon your cheeks.

You prate of Nature! you are he
That spilt his life among the cliques.

TENNYSON, The New Timon and the Poets.

Tennyson's rejoinder to Bulwer-Lytton's attack. Published in Punch, 28 Feb., 1846. See also SOULS: GOOD AND BAD.

Ah God! the petty fools of rhyme
That shriek and sweat in pigmy wars
Before the stony face of Time,
And look'd at by the silent stars;

Who hate each other for a song,
And do their little best to bite
And pinch their brethren in the throng,
And scratch the very dead for spite.

TENNYSON, Literary Squabbles. Originally printed in Punch, 7 March, 1846, entitled After-thought. Referring to the attack by Bulwer-Lytton.

THANKSGIVING DAY

13 Come, ye thankful people, come,
Raise the song of Harvest-home!

HENRY ALFORD, Thanksgiving Day.

Heap high the board with plenteous cheer, and gather to the feast,
And toast the sturdy Pilgrim band whose courage never ceased.

Give praise to that All-Gracious One by whom their steps were led,
And thanks unto the harvest's Lord who sends
our "daily bread."

ALICE WILLIAMS BROTHERTON, The First Thanksgiving Day.

14 Thanksgiving-day, I fear,
If one the solemn truth must touch,
Is celebrated, not so much
To thank the Lord for blessings o'er,
As for the sake of getting more!

WILL CARLETON, Captain Young's Thanksgiving.

WHITTIER, For an Autumn Festival. St. 12.

Ah! on Thanksgiving day, when from East and from West,

From North and South, come the pilgrim and guest,

When the gray-haired New Englander sees round his board

The old broken links of affection restored,
When the care-wearied man seeks his mother once more,

And the worn matron smiles where the girl smiled before.

What moistens the lip and what brightens the eye?

What calls back the past, like the rich Pumpkin pie?

Act i, sc. 3, l. 32.

O, good! convey? conveyors are you all,
That rise thus nimbly by a true king's fall.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 317.

The most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is to let him show himself what he is and steal out of your company.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 61.

Flat burglary as ever was committed.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 2, l. 52.

The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 208.

He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,
Let him not know 't, and he 's not robb'd at all.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 342.

What loss feels he that wots not what he loses?
WILLIAM BROOME, Merry Beggars. Act i, sc. 1.

1 I'll example you with thievery:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction

Robs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,
And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement: each thing's a thief.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3,
l. 438.

2 O, theft most base,
That we have stol'n what we do fear to keep!
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 92.

3 Save a thief from the gallows and he'll cut your throat.

SMOLLETT, Humphrey Clinker. (Cited as a proverb.)

This is true, by all hallows,
Deliver a thief from the gallows,
And he shall wait thee to rob or slay.

UNKNOWN, Sir Beves of Hamtoun, l. 969. (14th

THIRST

7 The panting thirst that scorches in the breath
Of those that die the soldier's fiery death.

BYRON, Lara. Canto ii, st. 16.

8 The fountains themselves are athirst. (Fontes ipsi sitiunt.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. iii,
ch. 1, sec. 4.

9 Hunger is bitter, but the worst
Of human pangs, the most accursed
Of Want's fell scorpions, is Thirst.

ELIZA COOK, Melaia.

10 Go not to the pot for every thirst.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

He that can master his thirst is master of his health.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

11 And pines with thirst amidst a sea of waves.
HOMER, The Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 722. (Pope, tr.)

There, with water everywhere, dry thirst burns the throat. (Illic interaquas urit sitis arida fauces.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 87.

Water, water, every where,
And all the boards did shrink;
Water, water, every where,
Nor any drop to drink.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. ii,
st. 9. Often incorrectly quoted, "And not a drop to drink."

12 Tantalus, thirsty wretch, catches at the streams that fly from his lips. (Tantalus a labris sitiens fugientia capat Flumina.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 69.

He [Tantalus] seeks water in the midst of water.
(Quærit aquas in aquis.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 2, l. 43.

No water is obtainable to thee, Tantalus. (Tibi Tantale, nullæ Dependuntur aquæ.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 458.

13 I drank at every vine.

The last was like the first.

I came upon no wine
So wonderful as thirst.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Feast.

14 Whenever I see thee thirst, cup in hand, I apply it to my lips more for thy sake than for drinking.

PHILOSTRATUS, Letters. No. 24.

The thirst that from the soul doth rise,
Doth ask a drink divine;

But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

BEN JONSON, To Celia.

15 It's a miserable business, waiting till thirst has you by the throat before you dig the well.
(Miserum est opus, Igitur demum fodere puteam, ubi sitis fauces tenet.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 379. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

16 When they are thirsty, fools would fain have drink.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc.
2, l. 372.

17 The thirsty drink in silence. (Οἱ διψῶντες σιωπῇ πινοῦσι.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb.

THOREAU, HENRY DAVID

18 Masterful in genius was he, and unique,
Patient, sagacious, tender, frolicsome—

This Concord Pan.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Thoreau.

We, sighing, said, "Our Pan is dead;
His pipe hangs mute beside the river." . . .
Then from the flute untouched by hands,
There came a low, harmonious breath:
"For such as he there is no death;
His life the eternal life commands."

LOUISA MAY ALCOTT, Thoreau's Flute.

1 Thoreau's quality is very penetrating and contagious; reading him is like eating onions—one must look out or the flavor will reach his own page.

JOHN BURROUGHS, Journal, 1878.

2 [Thoreau's] father was a manufacturer of lead-pencils, and Henry applied himself for a time to this craft, believing he could make a better pencil than was then in use. After completing his experiments, he exhibited his work to chemists and artists in Boston, and having obtained their certificates to its excellence and to its equality with the best London manufacture, he returned home contented. His friends congratulated him that he had now opened his way to fortune. But he replied that he should never make another pencil. "Why should I? I would not do again what I have done once."

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: Thoreau.

He was a protestant à outrance, and few lives contain so many renunciations. He was bred to no profession; he never married; he lived alone; he never went to church; he never voted; he refused to pay a tax to the State; he ate no flesh, he drank no wine, he never knew the use of tobacco; and, although a naturalist, he used neither trap nor gun. He chose, wisely, no doubt, for himself, to be the bachelor of thought and Nature.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: Thoreau.

3 I love Henry, but I cannot like him; and as for taking his arm, I should as soon think of taking the arm of an elm-tree.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Studies: Thoreau. Quoting a friend of Thoreau.

4 Whatever question there may be of his talent, there can be none, I think, of his genius. It was a slim and crooked one, but it was eminently personal. He was unperfect, unfinished, inartistic; he was worse than provincial—he was parochial.

HENRY JAMES, Hawthorne. Ch. iv, p. 94. (Referring to Thoreau.)

I—Thought: Definitions

5 Men's thoughts are much according to their inclination, their discourse and speeches according to their learning and infused opinions.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Custom and Education.

6 And inasmuch as feeling, the East's gift,
Is quick and transient—comes, and lo, is gone,

While Northern thought is slow and durable.
ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act v.

7 Thought is valuable in proportion as it is generative.

BULWER-LYTTON, Cantoniana. Essay 14.

8 The blight of life—the demon Thought.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 84.

9 It is the Thought of man; the true thaumaturgic virtue; by which man works all things whatsoever. All that he does, and brings to pass, is the vesture of a Thought.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

10 One thought includes all thought, in the sense that a grain of sand includes the universe.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Additional Table Talk: Thought.

11 Our thought is the key which unlocks the doors of the world. There is something in us which corresponds to that which is around us, beneath us, and above us.

SAMUEL MCCORD CROTHERS. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 211.)

12 The art of meditation may be exercised at all hours, and in all places; and men of genius, in their walks, at table, and amidst assemblies, turning the eye of the mind inwards, can form an artificial solitude; retired amidst a crowd, calm amidst distraction, and wise amidst folly.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. 11.

13 Man carries the world in his head, the whole astronomy and chemistry suspended in a thought.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

Thought makes everything fit for use. The vocabulary of an omniscient man would embrace words and images excluded from polite conversation.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

14 Nothing in the universe so solid as a thought.
EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

As certainly as water falls in rain on the tops of mountains and runs down into valleys, plains and pits, so does thought fall first on the best minds, and run down, from class to class, until it reaches the masses, and works revolutions.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

<sup>6</sup>
In the sunshine, by the shady verge of woods, by the sweet waters where the wild dove sips, there alone will thought be found.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Pigeons at the British Museum.

If any imagine they will find thought in many books, certainly they will be disappointed. Thought dwells by the stream and the sea, by the hill and in the woodland, in the sunlight and free wind.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, Pigeons at the British Museum.

Thought depends absolutely on the stomach, but in spite of that, those who have the best stomachs are not the best thinkers.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, 20 Aug., 1770.

One of their [Continental] philosophers has lately discovered that "as the liver secretes bile, so does the brain secrete thought," which astonishing discovery Dr. Cabanis . . . has pushed into his minutest developments. . . . Thought, he is inclined to hold, is still secreted by the brain; but then, poetry and religion (and it is really worth knowing) are "a product of the smaller intestines."

will soon lose the command of his actions.
THOMAS WILSON, Sacra Privata, p. 153.

11 Thoughts too deep to be expressed,
And too strong to be suppressed.
GEORGE WITHER, Mistress of Philarete.

12 How oft the noon, how oft the midnight, bell
(That iron tongue of death!) with solemn knell,

On folly's errands as we vainly roam,
Knocks at our hearts, and finds our thoughts from home.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 93.

13 Thought, busy thought! too busy for my peace!

stronger than any material force, that thoughts rule the world.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

22 What shame is there, but thinking makes it so?
EURIPIDES, Æolus. Frag. xix.

Nothing is miserable but what is thought so,
and contrariwise, every estate is happy if he that bears it be content. (Nihil est miserum nisi cum putes contraque beata sors omnis est æquanimitate tolerantis.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. ii, sec. 4, l. 64.

Nothing is a misery,
Unless our weakness apprehend it so.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act i, sc. 1.

Man is only miserable so far as he thinks himself so. (Tanto è miser l'uom quant' ei si riputa.)
SANNAZARO, Ecloga Octava.

A man is as miserable as he thinks he is. (Tam miser est quisque quam credidit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. 78, sec. 14.

There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 256.

And he that knoweth what is what
Saith he is wretched that weens him so.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Despair Counselleth the Deserted Love.

It's what you think that makes the world
Seem sad or gay to you;

Your mind may color all things gray,
Or make them radiant hue.

GRENVILLE KLEISER, The Bridge You'll Never Cross.

When thought is speech, and speech is truth.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto ii, Introduction l. 110.

Thoughts, from the tongue that slowly part,

Glance quick as lightning through the heart.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 19.

21 Give thy thoughts no tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 59.

Speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 131.

He gave man speech, and speech created thought,

Which is the measure of the universe.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 4,
l. 72.

And Thought leapt out to wed with Thought
Ere Thought could wed itself with Speech.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxiii, st. 4.

IX—Thought: Thinking

Upon the cunning loom of thought
We weave our fancies, so and so.

T. B. ALDRICH, Cloth of Gold: Proem.

As soon as you can say what you think, and not what some other person has thought for you, you are on the way to being a remarkable man.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 22.

He thought as a sage, though he felt as a man.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit, l. 8.

And many a thought did I build up on
thought,

As the wild bee hangs cell to cell.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pauline, l. 439.

Ah thought which saddens while it soothes!

ROBERT BROWNING, Pictor Ignotus, l. 3.

Among them, but not of them; in a shroud
Of thoughts which were not their thoughts.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 113.

My thoughts and I were of another world.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.
Act iii, sc. 3.

Whatsoe'er thy birth,
Thou wert a beautiful thought, and softly bodied forth.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 115.

And o'er that fair, broad brow were wrought
The intersected lines of thought.

BYRON, Parisina. St. 20.

Never did I see such apparatus got ready for thinking, and so little thought.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Coleridge.

Nay, in every epoch of the world, the great event, parent of all others, is it not the arrival of a Thinker in the world?

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture 1.

Beware when the great God lets loose a thinker on this planet.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Perhaps 'tis pretty to force together
Thoughts so all unlike each other;
To mutter and mock a broken charm,
To dally with wrong that does no harm.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, l. 666.

In the book of poetry are three hundred pieces, but the design of them all may be embraced in that one sentence, "Have no depraved thoughts."

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

I pray thee, O God, that I may be beautiful within.

SOCRATES.

Stand porter at the door of thought, admitting only such conclusions as you wish realized in bodily results, you will control yourself harmoniously.

Think alone, and all places are friendly and sacred.

EMERSON, *Nature, Addresses and Lectures:
Literary Ethics*.

There are thoughts that moan from the soul of the pine

And thoughts in a flower bell curled;
And the thoughts that are blown with scent of the fern

Are as new and as old as the world.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Bloodless Sportsman.

He is a fool that thinks not that another thinks.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A moment's thinking is an hour in words.

Happy the heart that keeps its twilight hour,
And, in the depths of heavenly peace reclined,
Loves to commune with thoughts of tender power,—

Thoughts that ascend, like angels beautiful,
A shining Jacob's-ladder of the mind!

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Sonnets. No. ix.

12 If I could think how these my thoughts to leave,
Or thinking still, my thoughts might have good end;

If rebel sense would reason's law receive,
Or reason foil'd would not in vain contend;
Then might I think what thoughts were best to think;

Then might I wisely swim, or gladly sink.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Sonnet.

13 Break, break, break,
On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

16 I heard a thousand blended notes,
While in a grove I sate reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.

Yet sometimes, when the secret cup
Of still and serious thought went round,
It seemed as if he drank it up—
He felt with spirit so profound.

WORDSWORTH, Matthew. St. 7.

X—Thought: Its Difficulty

17 To the vast majority of mankind nothing is more agreeable than to escape the need for mental exertion. . . . To most people nothing is more troublesome than the effort of thinking.

JAMES BRYCE, Studies in History and Jurisprudence: Obedience.

<sup>1</sup> There is no expedient to which a man will not go to avoid the real labor of thinking.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

<sup>2</sup> What is the hardest task in the world? To think.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Thinking is the hardest work there is, which is the probable reason why so few engage in it.

HENRY FORD, Interview, Feb., 1929.

<sup>3</sup> I never could find any man who could think for two minutes together.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 19.

XI—Thought: Its Futility

<sup>4</sup> The extra calories needed for one hour of intense mental effort would be completely met by the eating of one oyster cracker or one half of a salted peanut.

FRANCIS G. BENEDICT, The Energy Requirements of Intense Mental Effort.

<sup>5</sup> Thought is the work of brain and nerve, in small-skulled idiot poor and mean; In sickness sick, in sleep asleep, and dead when Death lets drop the scene.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. vii, st. 13.

<sup>6</sup> Why should I disparage my parts by thinking what to say? None but dull rogues think.

Make not your thoughts your prisons.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 185.

You do unbend your noble strength, to think So brainsickly of things.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 45.

<sup>15</sup> Thinking is but an idle waste of thought, And nought is everything, and everything is nought.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Cui Bono. St. 8.

<sup>16</sup> Men suffer from thinking more than anything else.

LEO TOLSTOY, Sevastopol.

<sup>17</sup> Beauty ends where an intellectual expression begins. Intellect destroys the harmony of any face. The moment one sits down to think, one becomes all nose.

WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 1.

THREAT

<sup>18</sup> Threats without power are like powder without ball.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Definition.

<sup>19</sup> If it is not right to hurt, it is neither right nor wise to menace.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 1773.

<sup>20</sup> Do not use threats to anyone, for that is womanish.

<sup>22</sup> Many a man threatens while he quakes for fear.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Threateners do not fight. (Dreigers vechten niet.)

UNKNOWN. A Dutch proverb.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 9.

<sup>24</sup> He threatens many that hath injured one.

BEN JONSON, Fall of Sejanus. Act ii.

<sup>25</sup> Nor think thou with wind Of aery threats to awe whom yet with deeds Thou canst not.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 282.

1 Even though I should live to extreme old age, the time would be short for enduring what you threaten me with. (Etsi pervivo usque ad summam ætatem, tamen Breve spatium est perferundi quæ minitas mihi.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 742. (Act iii, sc. 5.)

2 Threatened folks live long.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women. (1599)

The proverb says that threatened men live long.

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 14.

There are more men threatened than stricken.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A man does not die of threats.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

3 There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats, For I am arm'd so strong in honesty That they pass by me as the idle wind, Which I respect not.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 66.

Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is most unlawful.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 192.

4 I'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 34.

I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the walls of a jakes with him.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 70.

If ever henceforth thou

These rural latches to his entrance open, Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,

I will devise a death as cruel for thee

As thou art tender to 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 447.

I—Thrift: Apothegms

5 Wise men say

Keep somewhat till a rainy day.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works. Vol. i, p. 29. (1582)

Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come.

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 19.

6 As great a craft is keep well as win.

CHAUCEER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 1634.

Nor is it less a virtue to take care of property than to acquire it. In the latter, there is chance; the former demands skill. (Noc minor est virtus quam quærere, parta tueri: Casus inest illic; hoc erit artis opus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 13.

7 Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure nineteen nineteen six, result happiness. Annual income twenty pounds, annual expenditure twenty pounds ought and six, result misery.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 12.

8 A shilling spent idly by a fool, may be picked up by a wiser person.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Benjamin Vaughan.

Spare and have is better than spend and crave.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

For age and want save while you may,

No morning sun lasts a whole day.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

9 If you put nothing into your purse, you can take nothing out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2781.

'Tis not all saved that's put in the purse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, p. 45.

All is not gain that is got into the purse.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 30.

10 Thrift is the philosopher's stone.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5040.

Get what you can, and what you get hold;

'Tis the stone that will turn all your lead into gold.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

11 Know when to spend and when to spare, And you need not be busy; you'll never be bare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6437.

Who more than he is worth doth spend,

He makes a rope his life to end.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 24.

He who spends all he gets is on his way to beggary.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 172.

12 Worldly wealth he cared not for, desiring only to make both ends meet.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. (1662)

Tho' he had a good estate, hardly making both ends meet.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 137.

13 Live with a thrifty, not a needy fate;

Small shots paid often waste a vast estate.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 28.

14 He who adds to what he has will keep off bright-eyed hunger; for if you add only a little to a little and do this often, soon that little will become great. (Σμικρὸν ἐπὶ σμικρῷ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 361. See also under TRIFLES.

15 When thrift and you fell first at a fray, You played the man and made thrift run away.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

16 Even as the tiny, hard-working ant drags all she can with her mouth, and adds it to the heap she is building, because she is not heedless of the morrow.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 32.

1 Resolve not to be poor: whatever you have, spend less.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iv, 157.)
Do not discourage your children from hoarding, if they have a taste to it; whoever lays up his penny rather than part with it for a cake, at least is not the slave of gross appetite.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol 1, p. 251.

2 If you spend a thing you can not have it. (Non tibi illud apparere si sumas potest.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 12. See also under POSSESSIONS.

3 Of saving cometh having.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 139.

Saving is getting.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 265.

4 As my canny subjects in Scotland say, If you keep a thing seven years, you are sure to find a use for it at last.

SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 28. King Charles II to Dr. Rochecliffe.

5 Thrift, thrift, Horatio! the funeral baked meats

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 180.

6 What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion! . . . How, i' the name of thrift

Does he rake this together?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 107.

7 Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 131.

8 Their thrift waxes thin
That spend more than they win.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 100. (c. 1460)

II—Thrift: Pins and Pennies

9 A pin a day is a groat a year.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 295.

A penny saved is two pence clear,
A pin a day's a groat a year.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Necessary Hints to Those that Would be Rich.

He that will not stoop for a pin will never be worth a pound.

SIR WILLIAM COVENTRY, to Charles II. (PEPYS, Diary, 3 Jan., 1668.)

See a pin and pick it up,
All the day you'll have good luck;
See a pin and let it lie,
You'll want a pin before you die.
UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhyme. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. 10, p. 477.)

10 Who will not lay up a penny Shall never have many.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6383.

A penny spared is twice got.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Penny and penny laid up will be many.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130.

11 Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.

WILLIAM LOWNDES, Secretary of Treasury under William III.

I knew once a very covetous, sordid fellow who used to say, "Take care of the pence, for the pounds will take care of themselves."

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. 6 Nov., 1747; also 5 Feb., 1750. Quoting Lowndes.

12 A penny in the purse is better than a friend at court.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 126. Quoted as "a true saying."

13 A penny sav'd is a penny got.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Sweet-Scented Miser, l. 30.

He abounds in frugal maxims, . . . "A penny saved is a penny got."

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 2.

"A penny savèd is a penny got"—
Firm to this scoundrel maxim keepeth he.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 50.

A penny well sav'd is as good as one earn'd.
UNKNOWN. (Roxburghe Ballads, vi, 349. c. 1686)

14 It was said of old Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, that she never puts dots over her i's, to save ink.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann, 4 Oct., 1785.

THRONE

See also King

15 Emulous always of the nearest place
To any throne except the throne of grace.

COWPER, Hope, l. 238.

16 The legs of the throne are the plough and the oar, the anvil and the sewing-machine.

EMERSON, Journals, 1857.

17 Forbade to wade through slaughter to a throne.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 17.

1 And in mercy shall the throne be established.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xvi, 5.

2 The throne is but a piece of gilded wood covered with velvet.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (THIERS, Consulate and Empire. Bk. II.)

3 There is something behind the throne greater than the King himself.

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, Speech, 2 March, 1770. (Chatham Correspondence; MAHON, History of England, v, 258.) Hence the phrase, "The power behind the throne."

And lives to clutch the golden keys,
 To mould a mighty state's decrees,
 And shape the whisper of the throne.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxiv, st. 3.

4 No throne without thorn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A doubtful throne is ice on summer seas.

TENNYSON, The Coming of Arthur, l. 247.

5 In that fierce light which beats upon a throne.
 TENNYSON, Idylls of the King: Dedication, l. 26.

6 Methought I saw the footsteps of a throne.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 29.

THRUSH

7 Hark, where my blossomed pear-tree in the hedge
 Leans to the field and scatters on the clover
 Blossoms and dewdrops—at the bent spray's edge—

That's the wise thrush: he sings each song twice over
 Lest you should think he never could recapture
 The first fine careless rapture!

ROBERT BROWNING, Home Thoughts from Abroad.

8 No voice awoke. Dwelling sedate, apart,
 Only the thrush, the thrush that never spoke,
 Sang from her bursting heart.

LAURA BENÉT, The Thrush.

9 God's poet, hid in foliage green,
 Sings endless songs, himself unseen;
 Right seldom come his silent times.

Linger, ye summer hours, serene!
 Sing on, dear Thrush, amid the limes!
 MORTIMER COLLINS, My Thrush.

10 Through the wood's full strains I hear
 Thy monotone deep and clear,
 Like a sound amid sounds most fine.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, A Rhyme About Birds.

11 The full notes clearer grow;

Hark, what a torrent gush!

They pour, they overflow—

Sing on, sing on, O thrush!

AUSTIN DOBSON, Ballad of the Thrush.

12 An aged thrush, frail, gaunt, and small,
 In blast-beruffled plume,
 Had chosen thus to fling his soul

Upon the growing gloom. . . .

And I could think there trembled through
 His happy good-night air
 Some blessed Hope, whereof he knew
 And I was unaware.

THOMAS HARDY, The Darkling Thrush.

13 Full lasting is the song, though he,
 The singer, passes: lasting too,
 For souls not lent in usury,
 The rapture of the forward view.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Thrush in February.

14 A voice peals in this end of night
 A phrase of notes resembling stars,
 Single and spiritual notes of light.

What call they at my window-bars?

The South, the past, the day to be,
 An ancient infelicity.

ALICE MEYNELL, A Thrush Before Dawn.

15 O thrush, your song is passing sweet,
 But never a song that you have sung
 Is half so sweet as thrushes sang
 When my dear love and I were young.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Other Days.

16 In the gloamin' o' the wood
 The throssil whusslit sweet.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, Jeanie Morrison.

The throstle with his note so true.
 SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
 Act iii, sc. 1, l. 130.

17 At earliest dawn, his thrilling pipe was heard;
 And, when the light of evening died away,
 That blithe and indefatigable bird
 Still his redundant song of joy and love preferred.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, A Tale of Paraguay: Dedication. St. 4.

18 Sing, sweet thrushes, forth and sing!
 Meet the moon upon the lea.

THOMAS TOD STODDART, The Angler's Trysting-Tree.

19 Hush! With sudden gush
 As from a fountain sings in yonder bush
 The Hermit Thrush.

JOHN BANISTER TABB, Overflow.

20 Blow softly, thrush, upon the hush
 That makes the least leaf loud,
 Blow, wild of heart, remote, apart
 From all the vocal crowd,

Apart, remote, a spirit note
That dances meltingly afloat,
Blow faintly, thrush!
JOSEPH RUSSELL TAYLOR, Blow Softly, Thrush.

1 When rosy plumelets tuft the larch,
And rarely pipes the mounted thrush.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xci.

2 Oh, hark to the brown thrush! hear how he sings!

How he pours the dear pain of his gladness!
What a gush! and from out what golden springs!

What a rage of how sweet madness!

DAVID ATWOOD WASSON, Joy-Month.

3 And hark! how blithe the throistle sings!
He, too, is no mean preacher:
Come forth into the light of things,
Let Nature be your teacher.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned.

At the corner of Wood Street, when daylight appears,

Hangs a thrush that sings loud, it has sung for three years.

WORDSWORTH, The Reverie of Poor Susan.

THUNDER

See also Lightning

4 And hark to the crashing, long and loud,
Of the chariot of God, in the thunder-cloud!
W. C. BRYANT, The Hurricane.

5 From peak to peak the rattling crags among Leaps the live thunder!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 92.

6 Loud roared the dreadful thunder,
The rain a deluge showers.

ANDREW CHERRY, The Bay of Biscay.

7 Heaven's great artillery.

RICHARD CRASHAW, The Flaming Heart, l. 56.

And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 205.

8 They steal my thunder.

JOHN DENNIS. See under PLAGIARISM.

9 The thunderbolt strikes on an inch of ground,
but the light of it fills the horizon.

EMERSON, Journals, 1865.

10 The thunder hath but its clap.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4793.

11 Winter's thunder Is the world's wonder.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Nature Songs.

12 The god hurls his thunderbolt against the loftiest building.

HERODOTUS. History. Bk. vii, ch. 10, sec. 5. See also GREATNESS: ITS PENALTIES.

13 Thy thunder, conscious of the new command,
Rumbles reluctant o'er our fallen house.
KEATS, Hyperion, Bk. i, l. 60.

14 Men thy bold deeds shall tell,
Old Heart of Oak,
Daring Dave Farragut,
Thunderbolt stroke!

WILLIAM TUCKER MEREDITH, Farragut.

15 Their rising all at once was as the sound
Of thunder heard remote.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 476.

16 A senseless thunderbolt. (Brutum fulmen.)
PLINY, History. Bk. ii, ch. 43, sec. 113.

17 He never embraced his wife unless it thundered loudly, and it was a pleasantry of his to remark that he was a happy man when it thundered.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 17, sec. 7.
Of Cato.

18 To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' the air.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 151.

Rumble thy bellyfull.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 14.

19 What is the cause of thunder?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 160.

The crazed Lear asks the fool a question which still remains unanswered.

Father very often wonders
When it lightens why it thunders,
And he wonders, when it brightens,
When it thunders why it lightens.

GUY BOAS, Speculation.

20 To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?

In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 33.

21 Are there no stones in heaven
But what serve for the thunder?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 234.

22 As loud As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 96.

23 If it should thunder as it did before,
I know not where to hide my head.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 22.

24 The thunder, That deep and dreadful organ-pipe.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 97.

The dread rattling thunder.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 44.

1 All the heavens
Open'd and blazed with thunder such as seem'd
Shoutings of all the sons of God.
TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 507.

2 It is the flash which appears, the thunderbolt will follow. (C'est l'éclair qui paraît, la foudre va partir.)
VOLTAIRE, Oreste. Act ii, sc. 7.

TIDE

3 Now the great winds shorewards blow,
Now the salt tides seawards flow;
Now the wild white horses play,
Champ and chafe and toss in the spray.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Forsaken Merman, l. 4.

4 Now morn has come,
And with the morn the punctual tide again.
SUSAN COOLIDGE, Flood-Tide.

5 The tide turns at low water as well as at high.
HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments.
Ser. i, p. 103.

6 The ebb will fetch off what the tide brings in.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4495.
The tide will fetch away what the ebb brings.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 26.

7 The tide tarries no man.
JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 2801.
(c. 1440)

Hoist up sail while gale doth last,
Tide and wind stay no man's pleasure.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, St. Peter's Complaint.

Tide bides no man.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Ebb and flood wait for no man. (Ebbe und Fluth warten auf Niemand.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.
See also TIME AND TIDE.

8 The western tide crept up along the sand,
And o'er and o'er the sand,
And round and round the sand,
As far as eye could see.

The rolling mist came down and hid the land:
And never home came she.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Sands of Dee. St. 2.

The tide rises, the tide falls,
The twilight darkens, the curlew calls;
Along the sea-sands damp and brown
The traveller hastens toward the town,
And the tide rises, the tide falls.
LONGFELLOW, The Tide Rises, the Tide Falls.

9 A single breaker may recede; but the tide is evidently coming in.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies.

10 No animal dies except upon a receding tide.
(Nullum animal nisi æstu recedente expirare.)
PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii, ch. 101.

11 A' parted even just between twelve and one,
even at the turning o' the tide.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 12.

"People can't die along this coast," said Mr.
Peggotty, "except when the tide's pretty nigh out. They can't be born, unless it's pretty nigh in—not properly born, till flood. He's a-going out with the tide."

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 30.

Pliny hath an odd and remarkable passage concerning the death of men and animals upon the recess of ebb of the sea.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Letters. No. 7.

12 Down beyond the haven the tide comes with a shout.

WILLIAM SHARP, An Old Tale of Three.

13 No motion but the moving tide, a breeze,
Or merely silent Nature's breathing life.

WORDSWORTH, Elegiac Stanzas, Suggested by a Picture of Peele Castle in a Storm, l. 27.

14 Tide flowing is fear'd, for many a thing,
Great danger to such as be sick, it doth bring;
Sea ebb, by long ebbing, some respite doth give,
And sendeth good comfort to such as shall live.

THOMAS TUSSEY, *Five Hundred Points of
Good Husbandry*. Ch. 14.

TIGER

15 Tiger! Tiger! burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye,
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?
WILLIAM BLAKE, The Tiger. St. 1.

16 If a man proves too clearly and convincingly to himself that the tiger is an optical illusion —well, he will find out that he is wrong. The tiger will himself intervene in the discussion.
G. K. CHESTERTON, Illusions.

17 When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3,
l. 142.

18 Tigers, of course, have solitary habits
And haunt where brown and yellow leaves are strown.

They're not companionable beasts like rabbits
And much prefer to eat their meals alone.
W. C. SMITH, A Heretic.

The Tiger, on the other hand, is kittenish and mild;

He makes a pretty playfellow for any little child;
And mothers of large families (who claim to common sense)

Will find a Tiger well repay the trouble and expense.

HILAIRE BELLOC, The Tiger.

Or if some time when roaming round,
A noble wild beast greets you,
With black stripes on a yellow ground,
Just notice if he eats you.

This simple rule may help you learn
The Bengal Tiger to discern.

CAROLYN WELLS, How to Tell the Wild Animals.

1 Shun the companionship of the tiger. (Tigridis evita sodalitatem.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

2 Time which is the author of authors.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. i.

3 Time is the greatest innovator.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

It were good therefore, that men in their innovations would follow the example of time itself, which indeed innovateth greatly, but quietly and by degrees scarce to be perceived.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Innovations.

4 Wherever anything lives, there is, open somewhere, a register in which time is being inscribed.

HENRI BERGSON, Creative Evolution. Ch. 1.

5 That great mystery of TIME, were there no other; the illimitable, silent, never-resting thing called Time, rolling, rushing on, swift, silent, like an all-embracing ocean-tide, on which we and all the Universe swim like exhalations, like apparitions which are, and then are not: this is forever very literally a miracle; a thing to strike us dumb,—for we have no word to speak about it.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture 1.

6 Old Time, that greatest and longest established spinner of all! . . . His factory is a secret place, his work is noiseless, and his Hands are mutes.

DICKENS, Hard Times. Bk. i, ch. 14.

7 Time, to the nation as to the individual, is nothing absolute; its duration depends on the rate of thought and feeling.

JOHN WILLIAM DRAPER, History of the Intellectual Development of Europe. Vol. i, ch. 1.

Time is the rider that breaks youth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

10 Made, bitter-sweet, from fruits of life
There is a wine;

It quenches every human thirst—
We call it Time.

JEAN HERRICK, Time.

11 Old Time, in whose bank we deposit our notes,

Is a miser who always wants guineas for groats;

He keeps all his customers still in arrears

By lending them minutes and charging them years.

O. W. HOLMES, Our Banker. St. 1.

12 What is time? The shadow on the dial, the striking of the clock, the running of the sand, day and night, summer and winter, months, years, centuries—these are but arbitrary and outward signs, the measure of Time, not Time itself. Time is the Life of the soul.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

13 Time is not progress, but amount;
One vast accumulating store,

Laid up, not lost!

<sup>1</sup> Time is a gentle deity. (Χρόνος γάρ εὐμαρὴς θεός.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 179.

Time is the nurse and breeder of all good.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 243.

II—Time: Apothegms

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 982.

Time, young man, has taught us both a lesson.

THEMISTOCLES, to Antiphales. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles.)

Wait, thou child of hope, for Time shall teach thee all things.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Good in Things Evil.

<sup>3</sup> Time is one's best friend, teaching best of all the wisdom of silence.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Learning.

The grand instructor, Time.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, 26 May, 1799.

<sup>4</sup> To choose time, is to save time.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Despatch.

He who gains time gains everything.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

Who hath time hath life.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 28.

Who hath time, and tarrieth for time, loseth time.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 28.

<sup>5</sup> Time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries. Vol. i, bk. 1, ch. 18.

<sup>6</sup> Time eateth away at many an old delusion.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Testament of Beauty, l. 599.

<sup>7</sup> There is no antidote against the opium of Time.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. v, 6.

<sup>8</sup> Why should we break up

Our snug and pleasant party?

Time was made for slaves,

But never for us so hearty.

J. B. BUCKSTONE, Billy Taylor. (1830)

<sup>9</sup> The silent touches of time.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Matthew Smith.

<sup>10</sup> Time ripens all things. No man is born wise.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 33.

All in good time.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 36.

<sup>11</sup> I count my time by times that I meet thee.

R. W. GILDER, The New Day. Pt. iv, Sonnet 6.

<sup>12</sup> You cannot fight against the future. Time is on our side.

GLADSTONE, Speech on Reform Bill, 1866.

Time and I against any two.

CARDINAL MAZARIN, during Louis XIV's minority.

Time and I are the two mightiest monarchs.

PHILIP II OF SPAIN.

<sup>13</sup> Thus at Time's humming loom I ply. (So schaff' ich am sausenden Webstuhl der Zeit.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1, l. 156.

<sup>14</sup> My inheritance how lordly wide and fair:

Time is my fair seed-field, to Time I'm heir.

(Mein Erbteil wie herrlich, weit und breit: Die Zeit ist mein Besitz, mein Acker ist die Zeit.)

GOETHE, Westöstliche Divan: Buch der Sprüche. (Carlyle, tr., Chartism, ch. 6.)

My inheritance how wide and fair:

Time is my estate; to Time I'm heir.

(Mein Vermächtniss, wie herrlich weit und breit!
Die Zeit ist mein Vermächtniss, mein Acker ist die Zeit.)

SIDNEY LANIER, Clover.

<sup>21</sup> Oh, glory, that we wrestle

So valiantly with Time!

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, The Eld.

<sup>22</sup> Time will run back and fetch the age of gold.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 135. See also under AGE, THE.

<sup>23</sup> Time hath a taming hand.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Persecution.

<sup>24</sup> Be ruled by time, the wisest counsellor of all.

(Σύμβουλον ἀναμείνας χρόνον.)

<sup>1</sup> How goes the enemy?

FREDERIC REYNOLDS, The Will. Act i, sc. 1.
Said by Mr. Ennui, the "time-killer."

George: How goes the enemy?

Lucifer: What can he mean?

Festus: He asks the hour.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party.

<sup>2</sup> Who knows what may be slumbering in the background of time! (O, wer weiss Was in der Zeiten Hintergrunde schlummert.)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act i, sc. 1, l. 44.

<sup>3</sup> Oh, how much good time you lose over a bad matter! (O quam bonum tempus in re mala perdis!)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 28.

Time elaborately thrown away.

YOUNG, The Last Day. Bk. i, l. 206.

WORDSWORTH, Laodamia, l. 161. This line appeared in the editions of 1815 and 1820, but not in later ones.

<sup>10</sup> The unimaginable touch of Time.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Mutability.

III—Time: A Time for All Things

<sup>11</sup> A time to love, and a time to wed, and a time to seek rest. ("Ωρη ἐρᾶν, ὦρη δὲ γαμεῖν, ὦρη δὲ πεπαύσθαι.")

DIONYSIUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 38.) Though credited to Dionysius in the Anthology, this line was really spoken by Timon of Dionysius of Heraclea, a Stoic philosopher who deserted to the Epicureans in his old age. It was preceded by the punning line, "Now when it is time for him to set, he begins to seek pleasure." ('Ἦνικ' ἐχρῆν δύνειν, νῦν ἀρχεται ἡδύνεσθαι.)

To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven:

A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pluck up that which is planted;

A time to kill, and a time to heal; a time to break down, and a time to build up;

A time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance; . . .

A time to get, and a time to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away;

A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to keep silence, and a time to speak;

A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 1-8.

Of a Monday I drive the coach, of a Tuesday I drive the plough, on Wednesday I follow the hounds, a Thursday I dun the tenants, on Friday I go to market, on Saturday I draw warrants, and a Sunday I draw beer.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 3.

For holy offices I have a time; a time
To think upon the part of business which I bear i' the state; and nature does require
Her times of preservation.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 144.

<sup>12</sup> But all thing hath time.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Richard the Redeless. Pt. iii, l. 278. (c. 1399)

Everything has time.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act v, sc. 2.

Everything hath its time, and that time must be watch'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1466.

<sup>13</sup> There's a time for all things.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 65.

There is a time for some things, and a time for all things; a time for great things and a time for small things.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 35.

IV—Time: A River

<sup>14</sup> Time's waters will not ebb nor stay.

JOHN KEBLE, Christian Year: First Sunday after Christmas.

<sup>15</sup> Time is a river of passing events, aye, a rushing torrent. (Ποταμός τις ἐκ τῶν γινομένων καὶ πεῖμα βλαῖον ὁ αἰών.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 43.

Time is a flowing river. Happy those who allow themselves to be carried, unresisting, with the current. They float through easy days. They live, unquestioning, in the moment.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Where the Blue Begins, p. 81.

<sup>16</sup> The stream of time glides smoothly on and is past before we know. (Labitur occulte fallitque, volubilis ætas.)

OVIN, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 49.

Time glides by with constant movement, not unlike a stream. For neither can a stream stay its course, nor can the fleeting hour. (Adsiduo labuntur tempora motu, Non secus ac flumen; neque enim consistere flumen Nec levis hora potest.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 179.

1 A wonderful stream is the River Time,
As it runs through the realm of Tears,
With a faultless rhythm, and a musical rhyme,
And a broader sweep, and a surge sublime,
As it blends with the Ocean of Years.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN TAYLOR, The Long Ago.

2 The forward-flowing tide of time.
TENNYSON, Recollections of the Arabian Nights, l. 4.

3 Time, like an ever-rolling stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten, as a dream
Dies at the opening day.
ISAAC WATTS, O God, Our Help in Ages Past.

V—Time and Truth

4 The inseparable propriety of time, which is ever more and more to disclose truth.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Time trieth truth in every doubt.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Time tries the troth in everything.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Author's Epistle. Ch. 1.

5 Time stands with impartial law. (Æquo stat fœdare tempus.)

MANLIUS, Astronomica, iii, 360.

Time is the old justice that examines all such offenders, and let Time try.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 203.

6 O Time! whose verdicts mock our own,
The only righteous judge art thou!
THOMAS WILLIAM PARSONS, On a Bust of Dante.

7 See to it lest you try aught to conceal:
Time sees and hears all, and will all reveal.
SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 280.

Time shall unfold what plaited cunning hides.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 283.

Time and chance reveal all secrets.
MARY DE LA RIVIERE MANLEY, New Atlantis. Pt. ii, l. 230.

8 The wisest thing is Time, for it brings everything to light. (Σοφώτατον χρόνος, ἀνευρίσκει γὰρ πάντα.)

THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 35.)

Time will bring to light whatever is hidden; it will cover up and conceal what is now shining in splendor. (Quidquid sub terra est, in apicem proferet ætas; Defodiet condetque nitentia.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 24.

VI—Time: Its Flight

9 Alas! how swift the moments fly!
How flash the years along!
Scarce here, yet gone already by,
The burden of a song.

See childhood, youth, and manhood pass,
And age with furrowed brow;
Time was—Time shall be—drain the glass—
But where in Time is now?

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, The Hour Glass.

10 For though we sleep or wake, or roam, or ride,
Aye fleets the time, it will no man abide.
CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 118.

Bide for time who will, for time will no man bide.
JOHN SKELTON, Works. Vol. i, p. 137.

Time and tide stayeth for no man.
RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentleman, p. 189. (1630)

For the next inn he spurs amain,
In haste alights, and skuds away,
But time and tide for no man stay.
W. C. SOMERVILLE, The Sweet-Scented Miser, l. 98.

Nae man can tether time or tide.

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter, l. 67.

See also under TIDE.

11 No! no arresting the vast wheel of Time,
That round and round still turns with onward might,
Stern, dragging thousands to the dreadful night
Of an unknown hereafter.

CHARLES COWDEN CLARKE, The Course of Time.

12 Swift, speedy Time, feathered with flying hours.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. xxxix.

Time is a feathered thing,
And, whilst I praise,
The sparkling of thy looks, and call them rays,
Takes wing.

JASPER MAYNE, Time.

13 Whether we wake or we sleep,
Whether we carol or weep,
The Sun with his Planets in chime,
Marketh the going of Time.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Chronomoros.

14 You may delay, but time will not.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

15 Time flies over us, but leaves its shadow behind.

HAWTHORNE, The Marble Faun. Ch. 24.

<sup>1</sup> Where's the use of sighing?
Sorrow as you may,

Time is always flying—
Flying!—and defying
Men to say him nay.

WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY, Villanelle.

<sup>2</sup> Thursday come, and the week is gone.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>3</sup> I made a posy, while the day ran by:
Here will I smell my remnant out, and tie
My life within this band.

But time did beckon to the flowers, and they
By noon most cunningly did steal away,
And wither'd in my hand.
GEORGE HERBERT, Life.

<sup>4</sup> Time, you old gipsy man,
Will you not stay,
Put up your caravan
Just for one day?

RALPH HODGSON, Time, You Old Gipsy Man.

<sup>5</sup> Alas, O Postumus, the years glide swiftly by!
No piety delays the wrinkles, nor advancing
age,

Nor the invincible hand of Death.

(Eheu fugaces, Postume, Postume,
Labuntur anni, nec pietas moram

Rugis et instanti senectæ

Adferet indomitæque morti.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 1.

What Horace says is, *Eheu fugaces,
Anni labuntur, Postume, Postume!*

Years glide away and are lost to me, lost to me!
R. H. BARHAM, Epigram: Eheu Fugaces.

<sup>6</sup> Even while we speak, envious Time has fled.
(Dum loquimur, fugerit invidia ætas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode ii, l. 7.

While I am speaking, the hour flies. (Dum loquor, hora fugit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 11, l. 15.

Time flies and draws us with it. The moment in which I am speaking is already far from me.

(Le temps fuit, et nous traîne avec soi:
Le moment où je parle est déjà loin de moi.)

BOILEAU, Épîtres. No. iii, l. 47.

Even now, while I write, time steals on our youth,

And a moment's cut off from thy friendship and truth.

JOHN HERVEY, To a Friend.

Just while we talk the jealous hours
Are bringing near the hearse and flowers.

ALBERT FOX, JR., Time.

<sup>7</sup> O, for an engine to keep back all clocks.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 4.

I never had a watch nor any other mode of keeping time in my possession, nor ever wish to learn how time goes. . . . When I am in a town, I can hear the clock; and when I am in the country, I can listen to the silence.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, On a Sun-Dial.

A handful of red sand from the hot clime
Of Arab deserts brought,

Within this glass becomes the spy of Time,
The minister of Thought.

LONGFELLOW, Sand of the Desert in an Hour-Glass. St. 1.

<sup>8</sup> The noiseless foot of Time steals swiftly by,
And, ere we dream of manhood, age is nigh!
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 182. (Gifford, tr.)

We are old, and on our quick'st decrees
The inaudible and noiseless foot of Time
Steals ere we can effect them.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 39.

Nought treads so silent as the foot of Time.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 497.

<sup>9</sup> Time's horses gallop down the lessening hill.
RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Time Flies.

<sup>10</sup> Time! what an empty vapor 'tis!
And days, how swift they are.
ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Time.

<sup>11</sup> But at my back I always hear Time's wingèd chariot hurrying near.
ANDREW MARVELL, To His Coy Mistress.

<sup>12</sup> However we pass Time, he passes still,
Passing away whatever the pastime,
And, whether we use him well or ill,
Some day he gives us the slip for the last
time.

OWEN MEREDITH, The Dead Pope.

<sup>13</sup> Ah, well! when time is flown, how it fled
It is better neither to ask nor tell.
Leave the dead moments to bury their dead.
OWEN MEREDITH, The Wanderer: Two Out of the Crowd. St. 17. See also under PAST.

<sup>14</sup> Time slips by, and we grow old with the silent years; there is no bridle can curb the flying days. (Tempora labuntur, tacitisque senes-cimus annis, Et fugiunt freno non remorante dies.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 771.

Mourn the swiftness of time. We sit and we sleep, toiling or taking our delight, and time is ever advancing, bringing to each the end of life.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 81.)

<sup>15</sup> The happier the time, the more quickly it passes. (Tanto brevius omne quanto felicius tempus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis.
14, sec. 4.

The clock does not strike for the happy. (Die Uhr schlägt keinem Glücklichen.)

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act iii, sc. 3.

1 Time, like a flurry of wild rain,
Shall drift across the darkened pane!
CHARLES G. D. ROBERTS, The Unsleeping.

2 Time flies on restless pinions—constant never.
Be constant—and thou chainest time forever.
SCHILLER, Epigram.

3 All past time is lost time; the very day which we are now spending is shared between ourselves and death. (Quicquid transit temporis, perit; hunc ipsum, quem agimus, diem cum morte dividimus.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiv, 20.

4 Infinitely swift is the flight of time, as they see who look back at it. (Infinita est velocitas temporis, quæ magis apparet respicientibus.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlix, 2.

Note the rapidity of Time—that swiftest of things. (Respice celeritatem rapidissimi temporis.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, 7.

5 Time rolls swiftly ahead, and rolls us with it.
(Agit nos agiturque velox dies.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, 24.

The wheel of time rolls downward through various changes. (Per varios præceps casus rota volvitur.)
SILIUS ITALICUS, Punica. Bk. vi, l. 121.

Time rolls his ceaseless course.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 1.

6 The inconstant hour flies on double wings.
(Volat ambiguus mobilis alis Hora.)
SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1141.

Time's fatal wings do ever forward fly;
To every day we live, a day we die.
THOMAS CAMPION, Come, Cheerful Day.

Time, as he passes us, has a dove's wing,
Unsoil'd, and swift, and of a silken sound.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 211.

7 See the minutes, how they run,
How many make the hour full complete;
How many hours bring about the day;
How many days will finish up the year;
How many years a mortal man may live.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 25.

So minutes, hours, days, months, and years,
Pass'd over to the end they were created,
Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave.
Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how lovely!
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 38.

8 Time is like a fashionable host
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,
And with his arms outstretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer: welcome ever smiles,

And farewell goes out sighing.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
3, l. 165.

9 Too late I staid, forgive the crime,—
Unheeded flew the hours;
How noiseless falls the foot of Time
That only treads on flow'rs! . . .
Ah! who to sober measurement
Time's happy swiftness brings,
When birds of Paradise have lent
Their plumage for his wings?
WILLIAM ROBERT SPENCER, To the Lady Anne Hamilton.

10 Go to my love, where she is careless laid
Yet in her winter's bower, not well awake;
Tell her the joyous time will not be staid,
Unless she do him by the forelock take.
SPENCER, Moretti. Sonnet lxx. See also under OPPORTUNITY.

11 I hate all times, because all times do fly
So fast away, and may not stay'd be,
But as a speedy post that passeth by.
EDMUND SPENCER, Daphnaida, l. 411.

12 Let us alone. Time driveth onward fast,
And in a little while our lips are dumb.
Let us alone. What is it that will last?
All things are taken from us, and become
Portions and parcels of the dreadful past.
Let us alone.
TENNYSON, The Lotos-Eaters, l. 43.

13 Our time is a very shadow that passeth away.
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 5.

14 God stands winding His lonely horn,
And time and the world are ever in flight;
And love is less kind than the grey twilight,
And hope is less clear than the dew of the morn.

W. B. YEATS, Into the Twilight.

15 How swift the shuttle flies, that weaves thy shroud!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 809.

16 Laurel-crowned Horatius,
True, how true thy saying:
Swift as wind flies over us
Time, devouring, slaying.
(Lauriger Horatius,
Quam dicisti verum:
Fugit Euro citius
Tempus edax rerum.)
UNKNOWN, Lauriger Horatius. (Symonds, tr.)

VII—Time: Its Delay

17 Time goes, you say? Ah no!
Alas, Time stays, we go.
AUSTIN DOBSON, The Paradox of Time.

1 One would think that time stood still, so slowly does it move. (Stare putes, adeo procedunt tempora tarde.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 10, l. 5.

2 The small intolerable drums
Of Time are like slow drops descending.

E. A. ROBINSON, The Poor Relation.

3 Threefold the stride of Time, from first to last:

Loitering slow, the Future creepeth—
Arrow-swift, the Present sweepeth—
And motionless forever stands the Past.
(Dreifach ist der Schritt der Zeit:
Zögernd kommt die Zukunft hergezogen,
Pfeilschnell ist das Jetzt entflohen,
Ewig still steht die Vergangenheit.)
SCHILLER, Sprüche des Confucius.

4 The lazy foot of Time.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 322.

5 Time travels in divers paces with divers persons. I'll tell you who Time ambles withal, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands still withal.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 326.

What a devil hast thou to do with the time of the day? Unless hours were cups of sack and minutes capons and clocks the tongues of bawds and dials the signs of leaping-houses and the blessed sun himself a fair hot wench in flame-coloured taffeta, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous to demand the time of the day.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 6.

6 Time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 82.

Time goes on crutches till love have all his rites.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 372.

7 Time has fallen asleep in the afternoon sunshine.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp.

8 For Time would, with us, 'stead of sand,
Put filings of steel in his glass,
To dry up the blots of his hand,
And spangle life's page as they pass.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, The Beautiful Incendiary. St. 12.

9 What a foolish thing is time! And how foolish is man, who would be as angry if time stopped, as if it passed!

SWIFT, Letter to Vanessa, 7 Aug., 1722.

Give me no changeless hours, for I know

Moments of earth are sweeter that they go.
HERVEY ALLEN, Moments.

VIII—Time: Its Value

10 The greatest of all sacrifices is the sacrifice of time.

ANTIPHON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Antony.)

11 Time is the measure of business, as money is of wares.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Despatch.

Time, O my friend, is money! Time wasted can never conduce to money well managed.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay 21.

Time is money.

BULWER-LYTTON, Money. Act iii, sc. 3.

Remember that time is money.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Advice to a Young Tradesman.

12 It [the value of time] is in everybody's mouth, but in few people's practice.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 11 Dec., 1747.

13 It is the wisest who grieve most at loss of time. (Che'l perder tempo a chi più sa più spiace.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto iii, l. 78.

14 Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for that's the stuff life is made of.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

15 Pick my left pocket of its silver dime,
But spare the right,—it holds my golden time!

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 324.

16 To the true teacher, time's hour-glass should still run gold-dust.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Time.

17 Nothing is so dear and precious as time.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 5.

18 Time is the one loan which even a grateful recipient cannot repay. (Qui tempus accepit, cum interum hoc unum est, quod ne gratus quidem potest reddere.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 3.

19 Save your time. (Tempori parce.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxviii, sec. 39. Quoted as an old saw.

20 Time is the most valuable thing a man can spend. (Συνεχές τε ἔλεγε πολυτέλες ἀνάλωμα εἶναι τὸν χρόνον.)

THEOPHRASTUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Theophrastus. Bk. v, sec. 40.)

IX—Time: Lost Time Never Returns

21 Well can Senek, and many a philosopher
Bewailen time, more than gold in coffre.

"For loss of cattle may recovered be,
But loss of time shendeth us," quoth he.

It will not come again, withouten drede,
No more than will Malkin's maidenhead.

CHAUCER, Introduction to the Man of Law's Prologue, l. 25. Shendeth: ruins. For "Malkin's maidenhead" see under MAID.

For time y-lost, this knowen ye,
By no way may recovered be.

CHAUCER, The Hous of Fame. Bk. iii, l. 167.

For time y-lost may not recovered be.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1283.

Men may recover loss of good,
But so wise man yet never stood
Which may recover time y-lore.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, Bk. iv, l. 1382. (c. 1390)

Time departed, again men may not call.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 2811. (c. 1440)

1
I hope you employ your whole time, which few people do . . . a thing so precious as time, and so irrecoverable when lost.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Dec., 1746.

2
Hours and days, and months and years go by, nor does past time ever return. (Horæ cedunt et dies et menses et anni, nec præteritum tempus unquam revertitur.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 69.

Neither will the wave which has passed be called back, nor can the hour which has gone return.
(Nec quæ præteriit, iterum revocabitur unda, Nec quæteriit, hora redire potest.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 63.

Remember that lost time does not return.
(Memento . . . perditum non redit tempus.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 25.

Time flies away, and cannot be restored. (Fugit inreparabile tempus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 284.

3
Lost time is never found again.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1748.

4
Man cannot call the brimming instant back;
Time's an affair of instants spun to days;
If man must make an instant gold, or black,
Let him, he may, but Time must go his ways.
Life may be duller for an instant's blaze.
Life's an affair of instants spun to years,
Instants are only cause of all these tears.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. v, st. 27.

Who can undo

What time hath done? who can win back the wind?

Beckon lost music from a broken lute?

Renew the redness of a last year's rose?

Or dig the sunken sunset from the deep?

OWEN MEREDITH, Orval. Epoch ii, sc. 1.

5
Would'st thou live long? keep Time in high esteem:

Whom gone, if thou canst not recall, redeem.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Hieroglyphics of the Life of Man. Epig. 6.

6
Onward the chariot of the Untarrying moves;
Nor day divulges him nor night conceals;
Thou hearest the echo of unreturning hooves
And thunder of irrevocable wheels.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Untarrying.

X—Time: Its Use

7
As good have no time, as make no good use
of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 686.

He that has most time has none to lose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2141.

8
He that hath time and looketh for a better time, loseth time. Time comes that he repents himself of time.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

By losing present time, we lose all time.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9
No person will have occasion to complain of the want of time who never loses any.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to His Daughter,
5 May, 1787.

10
Those who make the worst use of their time
most complain of its shortness.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Jugements.
See also under IDLENESS.

11
Take time in time, ere time be tint,
For time will not remain.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, Cherrie and Sloe.
St. 36.

Take time when time is, for time is ay mutable.
JOHN SKELTON, Works. Vol. i, p. 137.

12
Employ your time; Time glides on with speedy foot. (Utendum est ætate; cito pede labitur ætas.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 65.

Catch then, oh catch the transient hour;

Improve each moment as it flies!

Life's a short Summer, man a flower;

He dies—alas! how soon he dies!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Winter: An Ode.

The Seconds that tick as the clock moves along
Are Privates who march with a spirit so strong.
The Minutes are Captains. The Hours of the day
Are Officers brave, who lead on to the fray.

So, remember, when tempted to loiter and dream
You've an army at hand; your command is supreme;

And question yourself, as it goes on review—

Has it helped in the fight with the best it could do?

PHILANDER JOHNSON, Each Man's Army.

Selected by Admiral Samuel MacGowan to be distributed to the men under his command during the World War. (Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920, p. 36.)

1 He briskly and cheerfully asked him how a man should kill time.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 63.

2 Ordinary people think merely how they will spend their time; a man of intellect tries to use it.

SCHOPENHAUER, Aphorisms on the Wisdom of Life.

3 The clock upbraids me with a waste of time.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 141.

4 What greater crime than loss of time?

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: January's Abstract.

5 Ease from this noble miser of his time
No moment steals; pain narrows not his cares.

WORDSWORTH, Sonnet: Alfred.

6 We take no note of time But from its loss.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 55.

Spendthrifts of inestimable time.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 273.

7 Time wasted is existence, us'd is life.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 150.

Time destroy'd

Is suicide, where more than blood is spilt.

Time flies, death urges, knells call, heaven invites,

Hell threatens.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 290.

8 In time take time while time doth last,

For time is no time when time is past.

UNKNOWN. Written on the title page of his account book by Nicholas Stone, mason to James I.

XI—Time: Gather Ye Rosebuds

See Also Life and Living; Opportunity

9 Gather the roses, maiden, while the blooms are fresh and youth is fresh, and be mindful that in like fashion your lifetime hastes away. (Collige, virgo, rosas, dum flos novus et nova pubes, Et memor esto ævum sic properare tuum.)

AUSONIUS [?], De Rosis Nascentibus, l. 49.

And sport, sweet maid, in season of these years,
And learn to gather flowers before they wither.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. xlviii.

10 Gather roses while they bloom,
To-morrow is yet far away!

(Pflücke Rosen, weil sie blühn, Morgen ist nicht heut!)

JOHAN GLEIM, Benutzung der Zeit.

11 Gather ye Rose-buds while ye may,
Old Time is still a flying:

And this same flower that smiles to-day,
To-morrow will be dying.

ROBERT HERRICK, To the Virgins, To Make Much of Time.

Then be not coy, but use your time,

And while ye may, go marry:

For having lost but once your prime,
You may for ever tarry.

ROBERT HERRICK, To the Virgins, to Make Much of Time.

12 If you let slip time, like a neglected rose,
It withers on the stalk with languish'd head.

MILTON, Comus, l. 743.

13 Pluck the grapes hanging from the well-stocked vines. (Carpite de plenis pendentibus vitibus uvas.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 55.

Pluck the flower. (Carpite florem.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 79.

While you are upon earth, enjoy the good things that are here.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Pleasure.

14 Make haste nor wait the coming hours; he who is unready today will be more so to-morrow. (Sed propera, nec te venturas differ in horas; Qui non est hodie, cras minus aptus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 93.

15 Sweet lady mine! while yet 'tis time,
Requite my passion and my truth,

And gather in their blushing prime
The roses of your youth.

RONSARD, Lines to His Mistress. (Thackeray, tr.)

16 Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime,

Rot and consume themselves in little time.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 129.

17 Gather therefore the rose whilest yet in prime,
For soon comes age, that will her pride de-flower.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 12, st. 75.

18 Life let us cherish, while yet the taper glows,
And the fresh flow'ret pluck ere it close.

JOHANN USTERI, Life Let Us Cherish.

19 Let us crown ourselves with rose-buds, before they be withered.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 8.

20 Therefore fear not to assay
To gather, ye that may,

The flower that this day
Is fresher than the next.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, That the Season of Enjoyment Is Short.

XII—Time: The Consoler

1 Backward, turn backward, O Time, in your flight,

Make me a child again just for to-night!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Rock Me to Sleep.
Fraudulently claimed by Alexander M. W. Ball. (See Stevenson, Famous Single Poems.)

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years!
I am so weary of toil and of tears—
Toil without recompense, tears all in vain—
Take them and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay,
Weary of flinging my soul-wealth away,
Weary of sowing for others to reap;
Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep!

ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Rock Me to Sleep.

2 Time, so complain'd of,
Who to no one man
Shows partiality,
Brings round to all men
Some undimm'd hours.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Consolation, l. 71.

3 O Time! the beautifier of the dead,
Adorner of the ruin, comforter
And only healer when the heart hath bled—
Time! the corrector where our judgments err,
The test of truth, love,—sole philosopher,
For all beside are sophists, from thy thrift
Which never loses though it doth defer—
Time, the avenger! unto thee I lift
My hands, and eyes, and heart, and crave of thee a gift.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 130.

4 There is no remembrance which time does not obliterate, nor pain which death does not end. (No ay memoria à quien el tiempo no acabe, ni dolor que nuerte no le consuma.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. iii, ch. 1.

5 To things immortal, Time can do no wrong,
And that which never is to die, for ever must be young.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To Mr. Hobbes.

6 See! Time has touch'd me gently in his race,
And left no odious furrows in my face.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. xvii, st. 3.

Touch us gently, Time!
Let us glide down thy stream
Gently,—as we sometimes glide
Through a quiet dream.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Touch Us Gently.

I recognize that face,
Though Time has touched it in his flight.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, The Chapel, l. 11.

Time has laid his hand
Upon my heart, gently, not smiting it,
But as a harper lays his open palm
Upon his harp, to deaden its vibrations.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, The Cloisters, l. 77.

7 Softened by Time's consummate plush,
How sleek the woe appears
That threatened childhood's citadel
And undermined the years!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 138.

Look back on time with kindly eyes,
He doubtless did his best;
How softly sinks his trembling sun
In human nature's west!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iv, No. 8.

8 Time is a test of trouble,
But not a remedy.
If such it prove, it prove too
There was no malady.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iv, No. 85.

9 Time will bring healing. (Χρόνος μαλάξει.)
EURIPIDES, Alceste, l. 1085.

Time eases many a smart. (Multa vestutas Lenit.)

<sup>4</sup> How many noble thoughts,
How many precious feelings of man's heart,
How many loves, how many gratuities,
Do twenty years wear out, and see expire!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 177.

<sup>5</sup> Alas! how the soul sentimental it vexes,
That thus on our labours stern Chronos
should frown,

Should change our soft liquids to izzards and Xes,

And turn true-love's alphabet all upside down!

R. H. BARHAM, The Poplar.

<sup>6</sup> Out upon Time! it will leave no more
Of the things to come than the things before!
Out upon Time! who for ever will leave
But enough of the past for the future to grieve.

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 18.

<sup>7</sup> The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Ay, none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Happiest Heart.

<sup>8</sup> Time . . . with his silent sickle.

DRYDEN, Astræa Redux, l. 110.

You talk of the scythe of Time, and the tooth of Time: I tell you Time is scytheless and tooth-less; it is we who gnaw like the worm, we who smite like the scythe.

RUSKIN, A Joy Forever. Lecture ii, p. 83.

<sup>9</sup> Each passing year robs us of some possession.
(Singula de nobis anni prædantur euntes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 55.

The tooth of time.

EDWARD YOUNG, The Statesman's Creed.

<sup>14</sup> Time's the king of men,
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 45.

<sup>15</sup> Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's
snare;

Thou nursest all and murder'st all that are.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 925.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
To ruin proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 939.

<sup>16</sup> Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion,
A great-sized monster of ingratitude:
These scraps are good deeds past; which are devour'd

As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 145.

Beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 3, l. 171.

1
Unfathomable Sea, whose waves are years;
Ocean of Time, whose waters of deep woe
Are brackish with the salt of human tears!
Thou shoreless flood, which in thy ebb and flow

Claspest the limits of mortality!
And sick of prey, yet howling on for more,
Vomitest thy wrecks on its inhospitable shore;

Treacherous in calm, and terrible in storm,
Who shall put forth on thee,
Unfathomable Sea?

SHELLEY, Time.

In vain men tell us time can alter
Old loves or make old memories falter.
A. C. SWINBURNE, Age and Song.

XIV—Time and Eternity

4
He said, "What's time? Leave Now for dogs and apes!

Man has Forever."

ROBERT BROWNING, A Grammarian's Funeral.

Fool! All that is, at all,
Lasts ever, past recall;
Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure:
What entered into thee,
That was, is, and shall be:
Time's wheel runs back nor stops: Potter and clay endure.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 27.

5
Behind, he hears Time's iron gates close faintly, . . .

For he has reached the city of the saintly,
The New Jerusalem.

6
Mere by-blows are the world and we,
And time, within eternity,

A sheer anachronism.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Queen Elizabeth's Day.

7
Somewhat back from the village street
Stands the old-fashioned country seat.
Across its antique portico
Tall poplar-trees their shadows throw;
And from its station in the hall
An ancient timepiece says to all,—

"Forever—never!

Never—forever!"

LONGFELLOW, The Old Clock on the Stairs.

Time, Life, Death, The Future*. No. 8.

13
I dimly guess what Time in mists confounds;
Yet ever and anon a trumpet sounds
From the hid battlements of Eternity;
Those shaken mists a space unsettle, then Round the half-glimpsed turrets slowly wash
again.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Hound of Heaven, l. 143.

14
Time is eternity;
Pregnant with all eternity can give;
Pregnant with all that makes archangels smile.

Who murders Time, he crushes in the birth
A power ethereal, only not ador'd.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 107.

XV—Time and Man

15
When Time shall turn those amber locks to grey,

My verse again shall gild and make them gay.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey, to the Lady Geraldine, l. 123.

Time has . . . changed the auburn hair to white.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv, The Chapel, l. 12.

His golden locks Time hath to silver turn'd;
O Time too swift, O swiftness never ceasing!

GEORGE PEELE, Polyhymnia.

Time wastes too fast: . . . everything presses on—whilst thou art twisting that lock, see, it grows grey!

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ix, ch. 8.

Time flies, my pretty one! . . . Now, even as thou twinest that brown curl on that finger—see! it grows grey!

FREDERICK LOCKER-LAMPSON, My Confidences.

1 Alas! it is not till time, with reckless hand, has torn out half the leaves from the Book of Human Life, to light the fires of passion with, from day to day, that man begins to see that the leaves which remain are few in number.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

2 Time, eftsoon will tumble
All of us together like leaves in a gust,
Humbled indeed down into the dust.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Fallen Leaves. St. 5.

3 Let time that makes you homely, make you sage.

THOMAS PARNELL, Elegy to an Old Beauty. l. 35.

4 Years following years steal something ev'ry day.

At last they steal us from ourselves away.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 72.

5 Even such is Time, that takes in trust
Our youth, our joys, our all we have,
And pays us but with earth and dust;
Who in the dark and silent grave,
When we have wander'd all our ways,
Shuts up the story of our days;
But from this earth, this grave, this dust,
My God shall raise me up, I trust.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Conclusion. Written the night before his death. Found in his Bible in the Gate-house at Westminster.

6 Poets and kings are but the clerks of Time,
Tying the same dull webs of discontent,
Clipping the same sad alnage of the years.

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON, The Clerks.

7 Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lx.

8 O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,

When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?

Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?

13 Bashfulness is an ornament to youth, but a reproach to old age.

ARISTOTLE. (MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.)

Bashfulness and apathy are a tough husk in which a delicate organization is protected from premature ripening.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

14 I went darkling, and whistling to keep myself from being afraid.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 1.

15 He that observeth the wind shall not sow;
and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 4.

11 All titles terminate in prescription.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Richard Burke.

Prescription is the most solid of all titles.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, 7 May, 1782.

12 I have henceforward the privilege of adding to my name the honourable title of A double S.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir-at-Law. Act i, sc. 1.

There was one also for me from Mr. Blackburne; who with his own hand superscribes it to S. P., Esq., of which God knows I was not a little proud.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 25 March, 1660.

The College has konfired upon me the honery title of T. K., of which I'm suffishuntly proud.

ARTEMUS WARD, Artemus Ward His Book: Oberlin.

13 Rank is a great beautifier.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act ii,
sc. 1.

Oh! a Baronet's rank is exceedingly nice,
But the title's uncommonly dear at the price!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act ii.

14 Princes and lords are but the breath of kings.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night, l. 165.

A prince can mak a belted knight,

A marquis, duke, and a' that;

But an honest man's aboon his might,

Guid faith, he maunna fa' that!

BURNS, For a' That and a' That. See also under GENTLEMAN.

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,

The Man's the gowd for a' that.

BURNS, For a' That and a' That.

Honours, like impressions upon coin, may give an ideal and local value to a bit of base metal;
but gold and silver will pass all the world over without any other recommendation than their own weight.

LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy: Bk. ix,
Dedication. The sentence which is said to have inspired Burns's lines.

15 To lead or brass, or some such bad
Metal, a prince's stamp may add

That value, which it never had;

But to the pure refined ore

The stamp of kings imparts no more

Worth than the metal held before.

THOMAS CAREW, To T. H., A Lady Resembling My Mistress.

16 Proud of the title, as the Living Skeleton said
ven they showed him.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 15.

Such is their [the monarchs of Europe] passion for a long list of these splendid trifles, that I have known a German Prince with more titles than subjects, and a Spanish nobleman with more names than shirts.
GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. Letter cxx.

3
A king may spill, a king may save;
A king may make of lord a knave;
And of a knave a lord also.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vii, l. 1895.

4
Empty phrases and frivolities,
As common as gold lace upon the collar
Of an obsequious lackey.
LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. i, sec. 2.

5
For titles do not reflect honor on men, but rather men on their titles. (Perchè non i titoli illustrano gli uomini, ma gli uomini i titoli.)
MACHIAVELLI, Dei Discorsi. Pt. iii, sec. 38.

Titles of honour add not to his worth,
Who is himself an honour to his titles.
JOHN FORD, The Lady's Trial. Act i, sc. 3, l. 30.
He being pure and tried gold; and any stamp
Of grace, to make him current to the world,
The duke is pleased to give him, will add honour
To the great bestower.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act i, sc. 1.

6

who makes a count, ne'er made a man.
THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Sir Anthony Love. Act
ii, sc. 1.

11
Virtue is honour, and the noblest titles
Are but the public stamps set on the ore
To ascertain its value to mankind.
GILBERT WEST, Institution of the Garter, l. 335.
I weigh the man, not his title; 'tis not the king's stamp can make the metal better or heavier.
WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1.

12
Rank is a farce: if people Fools will be,
A Scavenger and King 's the same to me.
JOHN WOLCOT, Peter's Prophecy. Title page.

Titles are marks of honest men, and wise;
The fool, or knave, that wears a title, lies.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 145.

TOBACCO

I—Tobacco: Its Delights

14
By thee protected, and thy sister beer,
Poets rejoice, nor think the bailiff near.
ISAAC H. BROWNE, The Oxford Sausage.

15
The man who smokes, thinks like a sage and acts like a Samaritan!
BULWER-LYTTON, Night and Morning. Bk. i,
ch. 6.

He who doth not smoke hath either known no great griefs, or refuseth himself the softest consolation, next to that which comes from heaven.
BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. i, ch. 6.

16
Tobacco, divine, rare, superexcellent tobacco, which goes far beyond all the panaceas, potable gold, and philosopher's stones, a sovereign remedy to all diseases; . . . but as it is commonly abused by most men, which take it as tinkers do ale, 'tis a plague, a mischief, a violent purger of goods, lands, health;
hellish, devilish and damned tobacco, the ruin and overthrow of body and soul.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
ii, sec. iv, mem. 2, subs. 1.

17
I have a liking old
For thee, though manifold
Stories, I know, are told,
Not to thy credit;
How one (or two at most)
Drops make a cat a ghost—
Useless, except to roast—
Doctors have said it. . . .

Cats may have had their goose
Cooked by tobacco juice;
Still why deny its use
Thoughtfully taken?
We're not as tabbies are:

Smith, take a fresh cigar!

Jones, the tobacco-jar!

Here's to thee, Bacon!

C. S. CALVERLEY, Ode to Tobacco.

1
I smoke like a furnace.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

A German, Who smoked like a chimney.

R. H. BARHAM, The Lay of St. Odille. St. 3.

2
What a blessing this smoking is! perhaps the greatest that we owe to the discovery of America.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Ser. ii, ch. 1.

3
Tobacco is a dirty weed: I like it.

It satisfies no normal need: I like it.

It makes you thin, it makes you lean,

It takes the hair right off your bean;

It's the worst darn stuff I've ever seen:

I like it.

G. L. HEMMINGER, This Smoking World.

4
When all things were made none was made better than this; to be a lone man's companion, a bachelor's friend, a hungry man's food, a sad man's cordial, a wakeful man's sleep, and a chilly man's fire, Sir; while for stanching of wounds, purging of rheum, and settling of the stomach, there's no herb like unto it under the canopy of heaven.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho. Ch. 7, second paragraph from end. Salvation Yeo's tribute to tobacco.

5
For I hate, yet love, thee so,
That, whichever thing I show,
The plain truth will seem to be
A constrain'd hyperbole,
And the passion to proceed
More from a mistress than a weed.

CHARLES LAMB, A Farewell to Tobacco, l. 11.

Thou in such a cloud dost bind us,
That our worst foes cannot find us,
And ill fortune, that would thwart us,
Shoots at rovers, shooting at us;
While each man, through thy height'ning steam,
Does like a smoking Etna seem.

CHARLES LAMB, A Farewell to Tobacco, l. 28.

Thou through such a mist dost show us,
That our best friends do not know us.

CHARLES LAMB, A Farewell to Tobacco, l. 37.

For thy sake, Tobacco, I
Would do anything but die.

CHARLES LAMB, A Farewell to Tobacco, l. 122.

6
Tobacco has been my evening comfort and my morning curse for these five years.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Wordsworth, 28 Sept., 1805.

7
Hold on with a bulldog grip, and chew and smoke as much as possible.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Telegram to General Grant, 17 Aug., 1864.

8
Tobacco, charmer of my mind,

When like the meteor's transient gleam,
Thy substance gone to air I find,

I think, alas! my life's the same.

(Tabac! dont mon âme est ravie,

Lorsque je te vois te perdre en l'air,

Aussi promptement qu'un éclair,

Je vois l'image de ma vie.)

MISSON, Memoirs of Travels in England. (Ozell, tr.)

9
When smoking began to go out of fashion,
learning began to go out of fashion also.

RICHARD PORSON. (Watson, Life.)

The Elizabethan age might be better named the beginning of the smoking era.

J. M. BARRIE, My Lady Nicotine. Ch. 14.

10
Divine tobacco.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto v, st. 32.

11
It is not for nothing that this "ignoble tabagie," as Michelet calls it, spreads over all the world. Michelet rails against it because it renders you happy apart from thought or work; to provident women this will seem no evil influence in married life. Whatever keeps a man in the front garden, whatever checks wandering fancy and all inordinate ambition, whatever makes for lounging and contentment, makes just so surely for domestic happiness.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Pt. i.

The Indian weed now withered quite;
Green at morn, cut down at night;
Shows thy decay: all flesh is hay:

Thus think, then drink Tobacco.

ROBERT WISDOM [?], A Religious Use of Tobacco. (1560) "Drink tobacco" means to drink in, or smoke.

And when the smoke ascends on high,
Think thou behold'st the vanity

Of worldly stuff, gone with a puff,

Thus think, then drink Tobacco.

JOHN ERSKINE, Gospel Sonnets: Meditations on Tobacco. (Two Broad-sides Against Tobacco, 1672.)

And when the pipe is foul within,
Think how the soul's defiled with sin;

To purge with fire it does require,

Thus think, and drink tobacco.

UNKNOWN, GEORGE WITHER [?], Tobacco. (D'URFFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, 1699.)
The verses were signed "G. W."

The ashes that are left behind,
May serve to put thee still in mind
That unto dust return thou must:

Thus think, then drink Tobacco.

GEORGE WITHER [?], Tobacco.

Tobacco's but an Indian weed,
Grows green at morn, cut down at eve;
It shows our decay, we are but clay.

Think on this when you smoak Tobacco.
SCOTT, Rob Roy. Quoted as an old song.

UNKNOWN. (Smoker's Guide. Ch. 4.)

II—Tobacco: Its Faults

<sup>2</sup> It's all one thing—both tend into one scope—
To live upon Tobacco and on Hope,
The one's but smoke, the other is but wind.
SIR ROBERT AYTOUN, Sonnet on Tobacco.

<sup>3</sup> Pernicious weed! whose scent the fair annoys,
Unfriendly to society's chief joys,
Thy worst effect is banishing for hours
The sex whose presence civilizes ours.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 251.

Tobacco, an outlandish weed,
Doth in the land strange wonders breed;
It taints the breath, the blood it dries,
It burns the head, it blinds the eyes;
It dries the lungs, scourgeth the lights,
It 'numbs the soul, it dulls the sprites;
It brings a man into a maze,
And makes him sit for others' gaze;
It mars a man, it mars a purse,
A lean one fat, a fat one worse;
A white man black, a black man white,
A night a day, a day a night;
It turns the brain like cat in pan,
And makes a Jack a gentleman.

FREDERICK WILLIAM FAIRHOLT, Tobacco.

Neither do thou lust after that tawney weed tobacco.

T. S. ELIOT, Portrait of a Lady.

<sup>6</sup> The scatterbrain, Tobacco. Yet a man of no conversation should smoke.

EMERSON, Journals, 1866.

<sup>7</sup> A branch of the sin of drunkenness, which is the root of all sins.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, A Counterblast to Tobacco.

Herein is not only a great vanity, but a great contempt of God's good gifts, that the sweetness of man's breath, being a good gift of God, should be wilfully corrupted by this stinking smoke.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, A Counterblast to Tobacco.

A custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black, stinking fume thereof nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, A Counterblast to Tobacco.

<sup>8</sup> The tobacco business is a conspiracy against womanhood and manhood. It owes its origin to that scoundrel, Sir Walter Raleigh, who was likewise the founder of American slavery.
JOHN H. KELLOG, Tobacco.

<sup>9</sup> Tobacco hic,
If a man be well it will make him sick.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 296. (1678)

Tobacco hic,
Will make you well if you be sick.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes, 180.

<sup>10</sup> By Gods me, I mar'le what pleasure or felicity they have in taking this roguish tobacco!
it's good for nothing but to choke a man, and fill him full of smoke and embers.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
iii, sc. 2.

<sup>11</sup> I have a faint recollection of pleasure derived from smoking dried lily-stems, before I was a man. I have never smoked anything more noxious.

H. D. THOREAU. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

III—Tobacco: The Pipe

<sup>12</sup> For this you've my word, and I never yet broke it.

So put that in your pipe, my Lord Otto, and smoke it.

R. H. BARHAM, The Lay of St. Odille. St. 14.

<sup>13</sup> Little tube of mighty pow'r,
Charmer of an idle hour.

ISAAC HAWKINS BROWNE, A Pipe of Tobacco.

<sup>14</sup> The pipe, with solemn interposing puff,
Makes half a sentence at a time enough;
The dozing sages drop the drowsy strain,
Then pause, and puff—and speak, and pause
again.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 245.

<sup>15</sup> With what a genius for administration
We rearrange the rumbling universe,
And map the course of man's regeneration,
Over a pipe.

WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY, Inter Sodales.

<sup>16</sup> Tobacco is a traveler,
Come from the Indies hither;
It passed sea and land
Ere it came to my hand,
And 'scaped the wind and weather.

Tobacco's a musician,
And in a pipe delighteth;
It descends in a close,

Through the organ of the nose,
With a relish that inviteth.

BARTEN HOLIDAY, Texnotamia. (1630)

1
Certain things are good for nothing until they have been kept a long while; and some are good for nothing until they have been long kept and used. Of the first, wine is the illustrious and immortal example. Of those which must be kept and used I will name three,—meerschaum pipes, violins, and poems. The meerschaum is but a poor affair until it has burned a thousand offerings to the cloud-compelling deities. . . . The fire is lighted in its central shrine, and gradually the juices which the broad leaves of the Great Vegetable had sucked up from an acre and curdled into a drachm are diffused through its thirsting pores.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5.

May be the truth is, that one pipe is wholesome, two pipes toothsome, three pipes noisome, four pipes fulsome, five pipes quarrelsome; and that's the sum on't.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Coleridge, 13 April, 1803.

3
With pipe and book at close of day,
Oh, what is sweeter? mortal say.

It matters not what book on knee,
Old Isaak or the Odyssey,

It matters not meerschaum or clay.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, With Pipe and Book.

4
Still let us puff, puff; be life smooth, be it rough,

Such enjoyment we'er ever in lack o':

The more peace and good-will will abound as we fill

A jolly good pipe of Tobacco!

JOHN USHER, The Pipe of Tobacco.

5
Contented I sit with my pint and my pipe,
Puffing sorrow and care far away,
And surely the brow of grief nothing can wipe,

Like smoking and moist'ning our clay; . . .
For tho' at my simile many may joke,
Man is but a pipe—and his life but smoke.

UNKNOWN, Content and a Pipe.

IV—Tobacco: Cigar and Cigarette

6
The sweet post-prandial cigar.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, De Berney.

7
Sublime tobacco! which from east to west,
Cheers the tar's labour or the Turkman's rest;

Which on the Moslem's ottoman divides
His hours, and rivals opium and his brides;
Magnificent in Stamboul, but less grand,

Though not less loved, in Wapping or the Strand;

Divine in hookas, glorious in a pipe,
When tipp'd with amber, mellow, rich, and ripe;

Like other charmers, wooing the caress,
More dazzlingly when daring in full dress;
Yet thy true lovers more admire by far
Thy naked beauties—Give me a cigar!

BYRON, The Island. Canto ii, st. 19.

8
Some sigh for this and that,
My wishes don't go far,

The world may wag at will,
So I have my cigar.

THOMAS HOOD, The Cigar. St. 1.

my choice between
The wee little whimpering Love and the great god Nick o' Teen.

KIPLING, The Betrothed.

A million surplus Maggies are willing to bear the yoke;

And a woman is only a woman, but a good Cigar is a Smoke.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Betrothed.

Woman in this scale, the weed in that, Jupiter, hang out thy balance, and weigh them both; and if thou give the preference to woman, all I can say is, the next time Juno ruffles thee—O Jupiter, try the weed.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. i, ch. 6.

A maid unto her lover sternly said:

"Forego the Indian weed before we wed,
For smoke take flame; I'll be that flame's bright fanner;

To have your Anna, give up your Havana."

The wretch, when thus she brought him to the scratch,

Lit the cigar and threw away the match.

Look to this Day, for it is Life—
The very Life of Life!

In its brief course lie all the Verities
And Realities of your Existence:

The Bliss of Growth,
The Glory of Action,
The Splendor of Beauty;

For Yesterday is but a Dream,
And To-morrow is only a Vision;
But To-day well lived

Makes every Yesterday a Dream of Happiness,

And every To-morrow a Vision of Hope.

Look well, therefore, to this day!

xxx.

5 The tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil.

New Testament: James, iii, 8.

The tongue is a wild beast; once let loose it is difficult to chain.

GRACIAN.

I should think your tongue had broken its chain!

δ' ἀνεμῶλια βάζειν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 837. (Pope, tr.)

II—Tongue: Its Use

16 My son, keep well thy tongue and keep thy friend.

A wicked tongue is worse than a fiend. . . .

The first virtue, son, if thou wilt learn,

Is to restrain and keep well thy tongue.

CHAUCER, The Maunciples Tale, l. 215.

17 A quiet tongue makes a wise head.

THOMAS COGAN, John Bunclie, Junior, i, 238.

18 It hurteth not the tongue to give fair words.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9.

Fair words never hurt the tongue.

BEN JONSON, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1.

19 Sweet Benjamin, since thou art young,
And hast not yet the use of tongue,

Make it thy slave, while thou art free;

Imprison it, lest it do thee.

JOHN HOSKINS, To His Son, from the Tower.

20 Since word is thrall, and thought is free,
Keep well thy tongue, I counsel thee.

JAMES I OF SCOTLAND, Ballad of Good Counsel.

Quoted by Scott, Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 25.

21 Keep thy tongue from evil, and thy lips from speaking guile.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiv, 13.

Give not thy tongue too great a liberty, lest it take thee prisoner. A word unspoken is, like the sword in thy scabbard, thine: if vented, thy sword is in another's hand; if thou desire to be held wise, be so wise as to hold thy tongue.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iii, 32.

22 My tongue will tell the anger of my heart:
Or else my heart concealing it will break.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 77.

The heart hath treble wrong
When it is bair'd the aidance of the tongue.

I choose to chat where'er I come,
Whate'er the subject be that starts;
But if I get among the glum
I hold my tongue to tell the troth
And keep my breath to cool my broth.

JOHN BYROM, Careless Content. St. 3.

15 Regard it as the first of virtues to restrain the tongue; he is nearest to a God who knows how to be silent when occasion requires.

16 I prefer tongue-tied knowledge to ignorant loquacity. (Malim equidem indisertam pru-dentiam quam stultam loquacitatem.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, sec. 142.

17 Men are born with two eyes, but with one tongue, in order that they should see twice as much as they say; but, from their conduct, one would suppose that they were born with two tongues and one eye; for those talk the most who have observed the least.

3 "They are fools who kiss and tell"—
Wisely has the poet sung.

Man may hold all sorts of posts

If he 'll only hold his tongue.

RUDYARD KIPPLING, Pink Dominoes.

4 Whatsoever else shall hap to-night.
Give it an understanding, but no tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 249.

Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 214.

5 Sweet, bid me hold my tongue,
For in this rapture I shall surely speak
The thing I shall repent.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 137.

6 You possess also the art of holding your tongue! Ah, you have all the talents for pleasing!

(Vous possédez aussi l'art de vous taire!
Ah! vous avez tous les talents de plaire.)

VOLTAIRE, La Prude. Act iii, sc. 2.

7 I shall keep my tongue between my teeth.

WALKER, Paræmiologia, 18. (1672)

If he does not keep his tongue between his teeth,
I'll give him a chuck o' the chin.

COLLEY CIBBER, Rival Fools. Act ii.

Keep tongue betwixt teeth!

SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 7.

TOOTH

I—Tooth: Apothegms

8 I hope you take great care of your mouth and teeth, and that you clean them well every morning with a sponge and tepid water, with a few drops of arquebusade water dropped into it; besides washing your mouth carefully after every meal, I do insist upon your never using any of those sticks, or any hard substance whatsoever, which always rub away the gums, and destroy the varnish of the teeth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Feb., 1754.

9 Some ask'd how pearls did grow, and where?

Then spoke I to my girl,

To part her lips, and show'd them there

The quarelets of pearl.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Rock of Rubies.

Delicate little pearl-white wedges,
All transparent at the edges.

BAILEY, Festus: A Large Party.

Those cherries fairly do enclose
Of orient pearl a double row,
Which, when her lovely laughter shows,
They look like rosebuds fill'd with snow.

UNKNOWN. (An Howre's Recreation in Musike.)

10 The best of friends fall out, and so
His teeth had done some years ago.

THOMAS HOOD, A True Story, l. 17.

11 What a word has passed the barrier of your teeth. (Ποῖόν σε ἔπος φέγγεν ἔρκος ὀδόντων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 350.

The teeth form a barrier to check wanton words.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 3. Quoting Homer.

It was excellently said of that philosopher, that there was a wall or parapet of teeth set in our mouth, to restrain the petulancy of our words.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Lingua Sapientis.

12 There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.
New Testament: Matthew, xxii, 13.

13 I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.

Old Testament: Job, xix, 20. Often incorrectly quoted, "I have escaped by the skin of my teeth."

14 Thais has black, Læcania white teeth; what is the reason? Thais has her own, Læcania ones she bought.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 43.

Thais her teeth are black and nought,

Lecania's white are grown:

But what's the reason? these are bought,

The other wears her own.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, 43. (Fletcher, tr.)

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 2.

II—Tooth: The Aching Tooth

18 An aching tooth is better out than in,

To lose a rotten member is a gain.
 RICHARD BAXTER, Hypocrisy.

1 My curse upon your venom'd stang,
 That shoots my tortur'd gooms along,
 An' thro' my lug gies monie a twang

Wi' gnawing vengeance,
 Tearing my nerves wi' bitter pang,
 Like racking engines!

BURNS, Address to the Toothache. St. 1.

2 The tongue is ever turning to the aching tooth.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4796.
 FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

3 Of all our pains, since man was curst,
 I mean of body, not the mental,
 To name the worst, among the worst,
 The dental sure is transcendental;
 Some bit of masticating bone,
 That ought to help to clear a shelf:
 But lets its proper work alone,
 And only seems to gnaw itself.

THOMAS HOOD, A True Story, l. 1.

One tooth he had with many fangs,
 That shot at once as many pangs, . . .
 One touch of that extatic stump
 Could jerk his limbs, and make him jump.

THOMAS HOOD, A True Story, l. 27.

4 Who hath aching teeth hath ill tenants.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 26.

5 What! sigh for the toothache?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 23.

For there was never yet philosopher
 That could endure the toothache patiently.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 35.

Being troubled with a raging tooth,
 I could not sleep.

9 I have been a stranger in a strange land.
Old Testament: Exodus, ii, 22.

10 If you will be a traveller, have always the eyes of a falcon, the ears of an ass, the face of an ape, the mouth of a hog, the shoulder of a camel, the legs of a stag, and see that you never want two bags very full, that is one of patience and another of money.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes. Fo. 93. (1591)

A traveller must have the back of an ass to bear all, a tongue like the tail of a dog to flatter all, the mouth of a hog to eat what is set before him, the ear of a merchant to hear all and say nothing.

THOMAS NASHE, Works, v, 141. There are many variations of this saying, which is included in most of the collections of proverbs.

11 Know most of the rooms of thy native country before thou goest over the threshold thereof.

Old Testament: Judges, xx, 1.

13 For my part, I travel not to go anywhere, but to go. I travel for travel's sake. The great affair is to move.

R. L. STEVENSON, Travels With a Donkey.

To travel hopefully is a better thing than to arrive.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: El Dorado.

14 I always like to begin a journey on Sundays, because I shall have the prayers of the Church to preserve all that travel by land or by water.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

15 As light and the day are free to all men, so nature has left all lands open to brave men. (Quomodo lucem diemque omnibus hominibus, ita omnes terras fortibus viris natura aperuit.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 64.

II—Travel: Its Wisdom

16 The traveled mind is the catholic mind educated from exclusiveness and egotism.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Travel.

Traveling is no fool's errand to him who carries his eyes and itinerary along with him.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Travel.

17 Travel, in the younger sort, is a part of education; in the elder, a part of experience. He that travelleth into a country, before he hath some entrance into the language, goeth to school, and not to travel.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Travel.

Let him sequester himself from the company of his countrymen, and diet in such places where there is good company of the nation where he travelleth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Travel.

1 Young men should travel, if but to amuse Themselves.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 16.

2 If a shower approach,
You find safe shelter in the next stage-coach.
There, prison'd in a parlour snug and small,
Like bottled wasps upon a southern wall,
The man of bus'ness and his friends compress'd,
Forget their labours.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 491.

3 Travel teaches toleration.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. v, ch. 7.

Virtue and vice, happiness and misery, are much more equally distributed to nations than those are permitted to suppose who have never been from home, and who believe, like the Chinese, that their residence is the center of the world, of light, of privilege, and of enjoyment.

AMASSA DELANO, Narrative of Voyages, p. 256.

Go far—too far you cannot, still the farther
The more experience finds you: And go sparing;—

One meal a week will serve you, and one suit,
Through all your travels; for you'll find it certain,

The poorer and the baser you appear,
The more you look through still.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Woman's Prize. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 199.

4 He that travels much knows much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2335.

He who never leaves his country is full of prejudices. (Chi non esce dal suo paese, vive pieno di pregiudizi.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i.

5 Travelling makes a man wiser, but less happy.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 31.

6 The use of travelling is to regulate imagination by reality, and instead of thinking how things may be, to see them as they are.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (PIOZZI, Johnsoniana, p. 154.)

7 The country, your companions, and the length of your journey will afford a hundred compensations for your toil. (Centum solatia curæ Et rus, et comites, et via longa dabit.)

11 Crowns in my purse I have and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 57.

12 Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits. . . .

I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad
Than, living dully sluggardized at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 1, l. 2.

13 Mankind are always happier for having been happy. . . . A man is the happier for life from having made once an agreeable tour.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 22.

III—Travel: Its Folly

14 And men go abroad to admire the heights of mountains, the mighty billows of the sea, the long courses of rivers, the vast compass of the ocean, and the circular motion of the stars, and yet pass themselves by.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. x, sec. 15.

Why seek Italy,

Who cannot circumnavigate the sea
Of thoughts and things at home?

EMERSON, The Day's Ration.

15 Travelling is the ruin of all happiness. There's no looking at a building here, after seeing Italy.

FANNY BURNEY, Cecilia. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

16 Those who travel heedlessly from place to place, observing only their distance from each other, and attending only to their accommodation at the inn at night, set out fools, and will certainly return so.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Oct., 1747.

How much a dunce that has been sent to roam,
Excels a dunce that has been left at home.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 415.

If an ass goes travelling, he'll not come home a horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2668.

The fool that far is sent,
Some wisdom to attain,
Returns an idiot, as he went,
And brings the fool again.

GEOFFREY WHITNEY, Emblems, 178. (1586)

1 In travelling
I shape myself betimes to idleness
And take fools' pleasure.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

2 There are three wants which can never be satisfied: that of the rich, who wants something more; that of the sick, who wants something different; and that of the traveller, who says, "Anywhere but here."

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

It is for want of self-culture that the superstition of Travelling, whose idols are Italy, England,
Egypt, retains its fascination for all educated Americans. They who made England, Italy, or Greece venerable in the imagination, did so by sticking fast where they were. . . . The soul is no traveller; the wise man stays at home. . . .
Travelling is a fool's paradise.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

3 Some minds improve by travel, others, rather,
Resemble copper wire, or brass,
Which get the narrower by going farther!

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 229.

4 They change their clime, not their disposition, who run beyond the sea. (Cælum, non animam mutant, qui trans mare currunt.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 11, l. 27.

If a goose flies across the sea, there comes back a quack-quack.

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.

5 Each blames the place he lives in; but the mind
Is most in fault, which ne'er leaves self behind.

(Stultus uterque locum immeritum causatur
iniquè:

In culpa est animus, qui se non effugit umquam.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 12. (Coning-ton, tr.)

It serves you right! You travelled with yourself.
(Non immerito hoc tibi evenit; tecum enim peregrinaberis.)

SOCRATES, to a man who complained that he had received no benefit from his travels.
(SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ,
sec. 7.)

6 Your land, and home, and pleasant wife must be left behind. (Linquenda tellus, et domus, et placens Uxor.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 21.

His house, his home, his heritage, his lands,
The laughing dames in whom he did delight,
Whose large blue eyes, fair locks, and snowy hands,

Might shake the saintship of an anchorite,
And long had fed his youthful appetite;
His goblets brimm'd with every costly wine,
And all that mote to luxury invite,
Without a sigh he left, to cross the brine,
And traverse Paynim shores, and pass earth's central line.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 11.

7 Why do we in our short term of life strive with might and main for so many things?
Why do we change for lands warmed by another sun? (Quid brevi fortes jaculamur ævo Multa? Quid terras alio calentes Sole mutamus?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 17.

8 Fools are aye fond o' flittin', and wise men o' sittin'.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

9 Everywhere is nowhere. When a person spends all his time in foreign travel, he ends by having many acquaintances, but no friends. (Nusquam est, qui ubique est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 2.

What profit is there in crossing the sea and in going from one city to another? If you would escape your troubles, you need not another place but another personality. Perhaps you have reached Athens, or perhaps Rhodes; choose any state you fancy, how does it matter what its character may be? You will be bringing to it your own.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 8.

What benefit has travel of itself ever been able to give anyone? . . . Travelling cannot give us judgment, or shake off our errors; it merely holds our attention for a moment by a certain novelty.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 13.

10 Ay, now am I in Arden: the more fool I;
when I was at home, I was in a better place:
but travellers must be content.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 15.

11 See one promontory, one mountain, one sea,
one river, and see all.

SOCRATES. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 7.)

What canst thou see elsewhere which thou seest not here? Behold the heavens and the earth, and all the elements; for of these are all things made.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
i, ch. 20.

12 There's nothing under heav'n so blue
That's fairly worth the travelling to.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Song of the Road.

1 He need not go away from home for instruction. (Domi habuit unde disceret.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 413. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

2 It is not worth while to go round the world to count the cats in Zanzibar.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

3 He travelled here, he travelled there;—

But not the value of a hair

Was head or heart the better.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell. Pt. i, l. 238.

IV—Travel: Travellers' Tales

4 There three sorts be Of people lying, which may themselves defend In lying, for they have authority to lie: the first is pilgrims that have great wonders seen In strange countries; such may say what they will.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Ship of Fools, ii, 68. (1508)

Travellers, poets and liars are three words all of one signification.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentleman, p. 77.

5 Travellers . . . have liberty to utter what lies they list.

THOMAS DELONEY, Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (c. 1598)

If he has been a traveller, he certainly says true, for he may lie by authority.

DRYDEN AND LEE, Duke of Guise. Act iv, sc. 4.

6 The sundry contemplation of my travels, in which my often rumination wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 18.

Farewell, Monsieur Traveller: look you lisp and wear strange suits, disable all the benefits of your own country, be out of love with your nativity and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are, or I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 32.

7 My travels' history:
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads
touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak; . . .
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
And Anthropophagi and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 139.

8 Travellers ne'er did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 26.

9 They told of prodigies, as one who has returned from far countries, the force of whirlwinds, and unheard-of birds, monsters of the deep, uncertain combinations of men and beasts—things seen, or believed through fear. (Ut quis ex longinquo revererat, miracula narrabant, vim turbinum, et inauditas volucres, monstra maris, ambiguas hominum et beluarum formas; visa, sive ex metu credita.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 24.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.

12 Such protection as vultures give to lambs.

SHERIDAN, Pizarro. Act ii, sc. 2.

13 Betrayers are hated even by those whom they benefit. (Proditores, etiam iis quos antepontunt, invisi sunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. i, l. 58.

TREASON

I—Treason: Apothegms

14 And to talk treason for his daily bread.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 351.

15 Treason is not own'd when 'tis descried; Successful crimes alone are justified.

DRYDEN, The Medal, l. 207.

16 Rebellion must be managed by many swords; treason to his prince's person may be with one knife.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and the Profane State: The Traitor.

17 Treason doth never prosper, what's the reason?

For if it prosper, none dare call it Treason.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of Treason. (Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 259.)

18 Cæsar had his Brutus; Charles the First, his Cromwell; and George the Third ["Treason!" cried the Speaker]—may profit by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech in the Virginia Convention, 1765.

I first drew in New England's air, and from her hardy breast

Sucked in the tyrant-hating milk that will not let me rest;

And if my words seem treason to the dullard and the tame,

'Tis but my Bay-State dialect,—our fathers spake the same.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Fugitive Slaves near Washington. St. 2.

19 The labyrinths of treason.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene.

20 I think lightly of what is called treason against a government. That may be your duty today, or mine. But treason against the people, against mankind, against God, is a great sin not lightly to be spoken of.

THEODORE PARKER, Speech on the Mexican War, 1846.

Treason is but trusted like the fox,
Who, ne'er so tame, so cherish'd and lock'd up,
Will have a wild trick of his ancestors.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 9.

Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yoke-devils sworn to either's purpose,
Working so grossly in a natural cause,
That admiration did not hoop at them.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 105.

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 122.

2
Some guard these traitors to the block of
death,

Treason's true bed and yielder up of breath.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 122.

3
The purest spring is not so free from mud,
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 101.

II—Treason: To Hate the Traitor but Love
the Treason

4
Princes in this case
Do hate the traitor, though they love the treason.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedy of Cleopatra.
Act iv, sc. 1.

This principle is old, but true as fate,
Kings may love treason, but the traitor hate.

THOMAS DEKKER, I The Honest Whore. Act
iv, sc. 4.

5
Hate then the traitor, but yet love the treason.

DRYDEN AND LEE, Duke of Guise. Act iii, sc. 1.

Treason is loved of many, but the traitor is hated of all.

ROBERT GREENE, Pandosto.

6
For while the treason I detest,
The traitor still I love.

JOHN HOOLE, Metastasio. Act i, sc. 5.

Though I love the treason, I hate the traitor.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 7 March, 1667.

7
He loved treachery but hated a traitor. (Φιλεῖν μὲν προδοσίαν, προδότην δὲ μισεῖν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Romulus. Ch. 17, sec. 3. Of Cæsar. See also under SEN.

III—Treason: The Traitor

8
Is there not some chosen curse,
Some hidden thunder in the stores of heaven,
Red with uncommon wrath, to blast the man
Who owes his greatness to his country's ruin?

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1.

Oh for a tongue to curse the slave
Whose treason, like a deadly blight,
Comes o'er the councils of the brave
And blasts them in their hour of might!
MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.
Pt. ii, l. 476.

9
A traitor to his country commits equal treason against mankind.

JOHN A. ANDREW, Address, Massachusetts Legislature, 3 Jan., 1862.

10
For pantisocracy he once had cried Aloud, a scheme less moral than 't was clever;

Then grew a hearty anti-jacobin—
Had turn'd his coat—and would have turn'd his skin.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 97. Referring to Robert Southey.

Just for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Leader. Referring to Wordsworth.

The nation looked upon him as a deserter, and he shrunk into insignificance and an Earldom.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Character of Pulteney.

No wise man ever thought that a traitor should be trusted. (Nemo unquam sapiens proditori credendum putavit.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. ii, ch. 1, sec. 15.

12
The man who pauses on the paths of treason,
Halts on a quicksand; the first step engulfs
him.

AARON HILL, Henry V. Act i, sc. 1.

13
The unsuccessful strugglers against tyranny have been the chief martyrs of treason laws in all countries.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. viii, p. 332.

14
No religion binds men to be traitors.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 2.

15
The traitor to Humanity is the traitor most accursed;

Man is more than Constitutions; better rot
beneath the sod,

Than be true to Church and State while we are doubly false to God!

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves near Washington. St. 5.

Write on my gravestone: "Infidel, Traitor."—infidel to every church that compromises with wrong; traitor to every government that op-presses the people.

WENDELL PHILLIPS.

16
He looked upon his people, and a tear was in his eye.

He looked upon the traitors, and his glance was stern and high.

MACAULAY, Ivry.

1 Though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 87.

2 An arrant traitor as any is in the universal world, or in France, or in England!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 8, l. 10.

A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 1, l. 191.

A kind of puppy To the old dam, treason.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 175.

A giant traitor.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 2, l. 199.

3 Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune,

Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor; . . .

And, from the extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 131.

Son: What is a traitor?

Lady Macduff: Why, one that swears and lies.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 46.

4 Live loathed and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek
bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 6,
l. 103.

5 It [traitor] does not mean in England what it does in France. In your language traitor means betrayer. . . . In our country it means simply one who is not wholly devoted to our English interests.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan. Sc. 4.

6 Your sweet faces make good fellows fools
And traitors.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 399.

12 For if they do these things in a green tree, what shall be done in the dry?

New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 31.

13 The tree is known by his fruit.

New Testament: Matthew, xii, 33.

You shall know that fruit by the tree.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Dialogue, 86. (1564)

A tree is known by the fruit, and not by the leaves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11.

Only at trees bearing fruit do people throw stones.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

He is a fool who looks at the fruit of lofty trees, but does not measure their height. (Stultus est qui fructus magnarum arborum spectat, altitudi-nem non metitur.)

2, sec. 1. See also GREATNESS: ITS PENALTIES.

15 Jock, when ye hae naething else to do, ye may be aye sticking in a tree; it will be growing, Jock, when ye're sleeping.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 8.

16 But, poor old man, thou prunest a rotten tree,

That cannot so much as a blossom yield

In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 63.

17 Trees do not delight all persons. (Non om-nes arbusta juvant.)

II—Tree: As the Twig Is Bent

1 As long as the twig is gentle and pliant . . .
With small force and strength it may be bent.

THOMAS INGELEND, The Disobedient Child, 56.

I will bend the tree while it is a wand.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, 18.

Young twigs are sooner bent than old trees.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues and His England.

Tender twigs are bent with ease,

Aged trees do break with bending.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 150.

4 An old tree is hard to straighten. (Vieil arbre est mal à redresser.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

III—Tree: Planting the Tree

5 What do we plant when we plant the tree?
We plant the ship that will cross the sea,
We plant the mast to carry the sails,
We plant the planks to withstand the gales—
The keel, the keelson, and beam and knee—
We plant the ship when we plant the tree.

HENRY ABBEY, What Do We Plant?

What do we plant when we plant the tree?

A thousand things that we daily see.

We plant the spire that out-towers the crag,

We plant the staff for our country's flag,

We plant the shade from the hot sun free;

We plant all these when we plant the tree.

HENRY ABBEY, What Do We Plant?

6 Come, let us plant the apple-tree.

Cleave the tough greensward with the spade;

Wide let its hollow bed be made;

There gently lay the roots, and there

Sift the dark mould with kindly care.

BRYANT, The Planting of the Apple-Tree.

What plant we in this apple-tree?

Buds, which the breath of summer days

Shall lengthen into leafy sprays;

Boughs where the thrush, with crimson breast,

Shall haunt, and sing, and hide her nest;

We plant, upon the sunny lea,

A shadow for the noontide hour,

A shelter from the summer shower,

When we plant the apple-tree.

BRYANT, The Planting of the Apple-Tree.

7 What does he plant who plants a tree?

He plants the friend of sun and sky;

He plants the flag of breezes free;

The shaft of beauty, towering high;

He plants a home to heaven anigh

For song and mother-croon of bird
In hushed and happy twilight heard—
The treble of heaven's harmony—
These things he plants who plants a tree.

H. C. BUNNER, The Heart of the Tree.

8 He who plants a tree Plants a hope.

Rootlets up through fibres blindly grope; . . .

So man's life must climb

From the clods of time

Unto heavens sublime.

Canst thou prophesy, thou little tree,
What the glory of thy boughs shall be?

LUCY LARCOM, Plant a Tree.

He who plants a tree, He plants love.

Tents of coolness spreading out above

Wayfarers he may not live to see.

Gifts that grow are best;

Hands that bless are blest;

Plant: Life does the rest!

Heaven and earth help him who plants a tree,
And his work its own reward shall be.

LUCY LARCOM, Plant a Tree.

9 He that planteth a tree is the servant of God,
He provideth a kindness for many generations,

And faces that he hath not seen shall bless
him.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Friendly Trees.

IV—Tree: Its Fall

10 The tree will wither long before it fall.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 32.

Trees do not die of age: they only spread

Their branches still more proudly—and are dead.

MARION STROBEL, Trees.

11 O leave this barren spot to me!

Spare, woodman, spare the beechen tree.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Beech-Tree's Petition.

Woodman, spare that tree!

Touch not a single bough!

In youth it sheltered me,

And I'll protect it now.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, Woodman, Spare That Tree.

12 In the place where the tree falleth, there it shall be.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 3.

Whosoever the tree falleth . . . there it shall reest.

HUGH LATIMER, Seven Sermons, 118.

When the tree is fallen all go with their hatchets.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

13 And garnished with trees that a man might cut down,

Instead of his own expenses.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Honeymoon.

1 Ancient trees falling while all was still
Before the storm, in the long interval
Between the gathering clouds and that light breeze

Which Germans call the Wind's bride.

C. G. LELAND, The Fall of the Trees.

2 The ax is laid unto the root of the trees.

New Testament: Matthew, iii, 10; Luke, iii, 9.

The tree falls not at the first stroke.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

V—Trees: Their Beauty

3 To-day I have grown taller from walking with the trees.

KARLE WILSON BAKER, Good Company.

4 I'll lie here and learn How, over their ground,
Trees make a long shadow And a light sound.

LOUISE BOGAN, Knowledge.

5 They say that trees were 'only practice work
When God made sure his hand
Before he passed to cows and men.
I cannot think that true,
Else there would surely sometimes be
An ugly tree.

AVIS D. CARLSON, Trees.

6 The very leaves live for love and in his season every happy tree experiences love's power. (Vivunt in Venerem frondes omnisque vicissim Felix arbor amat.)

CLAUDIAN, De Nuptiis Honorii Augusti, l. 65.

7 No tree in all the grove but has its charms,
Though each its hue peculiar.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 307.

8 I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree.

A tree whose hungry mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet flowing breast. . . .

Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

JOYCE KILMER, Trees.

I think that I shall never see

A billboard lovely as a tree.

Perhaps, unless the billboards fall,

I'll never see a tree at all.

OGDEN NASH, Song of the Open Road.

Then I filled the hole with mellow earth and planted a small spray,

Which in God's time shall grow to be a burning bush some day,

Where I shall come and talk with God and He will question me!

"Now, did you ever see a poem as lovely as this tree?"

ADDIE M. PROCTOR, Helping God to Make a Tree.

9 And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall.

Old Testament: I Kings, iv, 33.

10 Fair trees! where'er your barks I wound,
No name shall but your own be found.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

11 Cedar, and pine, and fir, and branching palm,
A sylvan scene, and as the ranks ascend
Shade above shade, a woody theatre
Of stateliest view.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 139.

12 A tree is a nobler object than a prince in his coronation robes.

ALEXANDER POPE, Table-Talk.

13 Under the greenwood tree
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 1.

14 The trees were gazing up into the sky,
Their bare arms stretched in prayer for the SNOWS.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life-Drama. Sc. 2.

15 Much can they praise the trees so straight and high,

The sailing pine, the cedar proud and tall,
The vine-prop elm, the poplar never dry,
The builder oak, sole king of forests all,
The aspin good for staves, the cypress
funeral,

The laurel, meed of mighty conquerors
And poets sage, the fir that weepeth still,
The willow worn of forlorn paramours,
The yew obedient to the bender's will,
The birch for shafts, the saw for the mill,
The myrrh sweet-bleeding in the bitter wound,

The warlike beech, the ash for nothing ill,
The fruitful olive, and the platane round,
The carver holme, the maple seldom inward sound.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 8.

16 Many a tree is found in the wood,
And every tree for its use is good;
Some for the strength of the gnarled root,
Some for the sweetness of flower or fruit.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Salute the Trees.

17 A brotherhood of venerable trees.

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Scotland. No. 12.

VI—Trees: Aspen to Poplar

See also Oak, Orange, Pine

1 Right as an aspen leaf she gan to quake.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1201.

And the wind, full of wantonness, woos like a lover

The young aspen-trees till they tremble all over.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Light of the Harem.

Beneath a shivering canopy reclined,
Of aspen leaves that wave without a wind,
I love to lie, when lulling breezes stir
The spiry cones that tremble on the fir.

JOHN LEYDEN, Noontide.

How I shake. . . In very truth do I, an 'twere an aspen leaf.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 116.

2 Spreading himself like a green bay tree.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 35.

3 No tree has so fair a bole and so handsome an instep as the beech.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

4 The birch, most shy and ladylike of trees.

J. R. LOWELL, An Indian-Summer Reverie. St. 8.

5 Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough,
And stands about the woodland ride
Wearing white for Eastertide.

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad, p. 3.

Sweet is the air with the budding haws, and the valley stretching for miles below
Is white with blossoming cherry-trees, as if just covered with lightest snow.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

My faith is all a doubtful thing,
Wove on a doubtful loom,
Until there comes each showery Spring
A cherry tree in bloom.

DAVID MORTON, Symbol.

6 The chestnuts, lavish of their long-hid gold,
To the faint Summer, beggared now and old,
Pour back the sunshine hoarded 'neath her favoring eye.

J. R. LOWELL, An Indian-Summer Reverie. St. 10.

7 Dark tree! still sad when others' grief is fled,
The only constant mourner o'er the dead!

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 286. The cypress.

8 And the great elms o'erhead
Dark shadows wove on their aerial looms
Shot through with golden thread.

LONGFELLOW, Hawthorne. St. 2.

Under the shady roof
Of branching elm star-proof.

MILTON, Arcades, l. 88.

9 I remember, I remember
The fir-trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

In a drear-nighted December,
Too happy, happy tree,
Thy branches ne'er remember
Their green felicity.

KEATS, Stanzas, l. 1.

10 The hemlock's nature thrives on cold;
The gnash of northern winds
Is sweetest nutriment to him,
His best Norwegian wines.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. ii, No. 81.

11 O Reader! hast thou ever stood to see
The Holly Tree?
The eye that contemplates it well perceives
Its glossy leaves
Order'd by an intelligence so wise
As might confound the Atheist's sophistries.

SOUTHEY, The Holly Tree. St. 1.

12 The laurel-tree grew large and strong,
Its roots went searching deeply down;
It split the marble walls of Wrong,
And blossomed o'er the Despot's crown.

RICHARD HENGIST HORNE, The Laurel Seed.

13 The chestnut's proud, and the lilac's pretty,
The poplar's gentle and tall,
But the plane tree's kind to the poor dull city—

I love him best of all!

EDITH NESBIT, Child's Song in Spring.

14 God wrote his loveliest poem on the day
He made the first tall silver poplar tree.

GRACE NOLL CROWELL, Silver Poplars.

How gently rock yon poplars high
Against the reach of primrose sky
With heaven's pale candles stored.

JEAN INGELOW, Supper at the Mill: Song.

I resemble a poplar, that tree which, even when old, still looks young. (Je ressemble au peuplier, cet arbre qui a toujours l'air jeune, même quand il est vieux.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 9.

TRICKERY

See also Deceit, Treachery

15 She had a thousand jadish tricks,
Worse than a mule that flings and kicks.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 331.

16 In trickery, evasion, procrastination, spoliation, botheration, under false pretenses of all sorts, there are influences that can never come to good.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 1.

I know their tricks and their manners.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

Which I wish to remark—
And my language is plain,—

That for ways that are dark

And for tricks that are vain,

The heathen Chinnee is peculiar.

BRET HARTE, Plain Language from Truthful James.

Boy of a hundred tricks. (Centum puer artium.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 1, l. 15.

Remember that all tricks are either knavish or childish.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1779.)

A trick to catch the old one.

THOMAS MIDDLETON. Title of play, 1608.

You fear some trick. (Captiones metuis.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 790. (Act iv, sc. 1.)

He hath as many tricks as a dancing bear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 163.

You have more tricks than a dancing bear.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

I know a trick worth two of that.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 41.

At this instant He bores me with some trick.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 27.

He coasts

And hedges his own way. But in this point

All his tricks founder.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 38.

These are unsightly tricks.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 159.

I have within my mind
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging
Jacks,

Which I will practise.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 76.

If I be served such another trick, I'll have my brains ta'en out and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new-year's gift.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 7.

TRIFLES

I—Trifles: Apothegms

Always the gods give small things to the small.
(Αὐτοῖς τοῖς μικροῖς μικὰ δίδουσι θεοί.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragmenta Incertæ. No. 47.

For the proverb saith that many small maken a great.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 21. (1386)

Many littles make a much. (Muchos pocos hacen un Mucho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

Many a little, by little and little maketh a mickle.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 311. (1593)

Many a little makes a mickle.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Within a while, great heaps grow of a little.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Ovid's Elegies. No. viii, l. 90.

Many little things will make a mighty heap.
(De multis grandis acervus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 424.

There will grow from straws a mighty heap.
(Postmodo de stipula grandis acervus erit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 90.

See also under THIEFT.

Practise yourself in little things. (Ἀπὸ τῶν μικροτάτων.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 111.

Small things are best: Grief and unrest

To rank and wealth are given;

But little things On little wings

Bear little souls to Heaven.

F. W. FABER, Written in a Little Lady's Little Album.

If we take a farthing from a thousand pounds, it will be a thousand pounds no longer.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 27.

To a philosopher no circumstance, however trifling, is too minute.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 30.

There is nothing, Sir, too little for so little a creature as man. It is by studying little things that we attain the great art of having as little misery and as much happiness as possible.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, i, 433.)

A little Saint best fits a little Shrine,
A little Prop best fits a little Vine,
As my small Cruse best fits my little Wine.

ROBERT HERRICK, A Ternarie of Littles.

I see day at this little hole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

I perceive you can spy day at a little hole.

THOMAS DELONEY, Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 2.

As daylight can be seen through very small holes, so little things will illustrate a person's character.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 391.

The journey of a thousand miles begins with one step.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 64.

All difficult things have their origin in that which is easy, and great things in that which is small.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way.

1 For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 10.

2 These are small things, but it was by not despising those small things that our ancestors accomplished this very great thing. (Parva sunt hæc; sed parva ista non contemnendo majores nostri maximam hanc rem fecerunt.)

Livy, History. Bk. vi, sec. 41.

3 If great things are simple to understand and easy to explain, little things demand an elaboration of detail.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions.

4 Men are led by trifles.

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

5 Things which are not of value singly, are useful collectively. (Quæ non prosunt singula, multa juvant.)

6 Trifles console us because trifles distress us. (Peu de chose nous consol, parce que peu de chose nous afflige.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Ch. xxiv, No. 11.

7 And trifles I alike pursue,
Because they're old, because they're new.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 362.

8 Trifles, light as air.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 322.

A snapper-up of unconsidered trifles.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 26.

9 Little live, great pass.

Jesus Christ and Barabbas

Were found the same day.

This died, that went his way.

C. H. SORLEY, All the Hills and Vales Along.

10 For who hath despised the day of small things?

Old Testament: Zechariah, iv, 10.

II—Trifles: Pin-Pricks

11 Strokes of the sword, gentlemen, strokes of the sword! Not pin-pricks! (Des coups d'épée, messieurs, des coups d'épée! Mais pas de coups d'épingle!)

ALPHONSE DAUDET, Tartarin de Tarascon. Pt. i, ch. 11.

12 I love to dream, but do not wish
To have a pin prick rouse me.

(J'aime à rêver, mais ne veux pas Qu'à coups d'épingle on me réveille.)

JACQUES DELILLE, La Conversation.

13 Policy of pin pricks. (Coups d'épingle.)

LOUIS MARIE DE LA HAYE, Lettres.

14 For the maintenance of peace, nations should avoid the pin-pricks which forerun cannon-shots.

NAPOLÉON to Czar Alexander, Interview, Tilsit, 22 June, 1807.

We are tortured to death by pin-point wounds.

NAPOLÉON. (LADY MALCOLM, Diary of St. Helena.)

15 It is never the pin pricks which decide the fortune of states. (Ce ne sont jamais les coups d'épingle qui décident de la fortune des États.)

DE VERGENNES, Letter to D'Angiviller, 11 Aug., 1777.

III—Trifles: Their Importance

16 Small matters win great commendation.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies.

17 Oh, the little more, and how much it is!
And the little less, and what worlds away!

ROBERT BROWNING, By the Fireside.

18 We find great things are made of little things,
And little things go lessening, till at last
Comes God behind them.

ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium," l. 1141.

Say not "a small event"! Why "small"?

Costs it more pain than this, ye call

A "great event" should come to pass

From that?

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Introduction.

19 Little drops of water, little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean and the pleasant
land;

So the little moments, humble though they
be,

Make the mighty ages of Eternity.

So our little errors lead the soul away
From the path of virtue, far in sin to stray.
Little deeds of kindness, little words of love,
Help to make earth happy like the heaven
above.

JULIA FLETCHER CARNEY, Little Things. This poem has been erroneously attributed to Ebenezer Cobham Brewer, Daniel Clement Colesworthy, Charles Mackay, and Mrs. Frances S. Osgood.

Little drops of water poured into the milk, give the milkman's daughter lovely gowns of silk.
Little grains of sugar mingled with the sand,
make the grocer's assets swell to beat the band.

WALT MASON, Little Things.

20 He that shuns trifles must shun the world.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Hero and Leander: Epistle Dedicatory.

1
Alas! by what slight means are great affairs brought to destruction. (Eheu quam brevibus pereunt ingentia fati!)

The lofty oak from a small acorn grows.

LEWIS DUNCOMBE, De Minimis Maxima.

Large streams from little fountains flow,

Tall oaks from little acorns grow.

DAVID EVERETT, Lines Written for a School Declamation.

The mighty oak from an acorn towers;

A tiny seed can fill a field with flowers;

One bell alone tolls out the death of kings;

In every Sussex skylark Shelley sings.

CHARLES DALMON, Much in Little.

3
From little spark may burst a mighty flame.

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto i, l. 34.

From small fires comes oft not small mishap.

Little strokes fell great Oaks.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

Many strokes, though with a little axe,

Hew down and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 54.

By conscientious indentation

The beaver bevels down the tree.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, The Epigram.

6
It's just the little homely things,

The unobtrusive friendly things,

The "won't-you-let-me-help-you" things

That make our pathway light.

GRACE HAINES, Those Little Things.

7
For want of a nail the shoe is lost, for want of a shoe the horse is lost, for want of a horse the rider is lost.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

For the want of a nail the shoe was lost,

For the want of a shoe the horse was lost,

For the want of a horse the rider was lost,
For the want of a rider the battle was lost,
For the want of a battle the kingdom was lost—
And all for want of a horseshoe-nail.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

8
Great businesses turn on a little pin.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Great engines turn on small pivots.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 366.

The massive gates of Circumstance

Are turned upon the smallest hinge,

And thus some seeming pettiest chance

Oft gives our life its after-tinge.

The trifles of our daily lives,

The common things scarce worth recall,

Whereof no visible trace survives,

These are the mainsprings, after all.

UNKNOWN, Trifles. (Harper's Weekly, 30 May, 1863.)

9
Even by small things are great ends helped.
(Parvis quoque rebus magna juvari.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 125.

There is naught that may not serve the need of mortal men, and in adversity despised things help us. (Nam nihil est, quod non mortalibus afferat usum; Rebus in adversis quæ jacuere juvant.)

13
Alas, how easily things go wrong!

A sigh too much, or a kiss too long,

And there follows a mist and a weeping rain,

And life is never the same again.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Phantastes: Down the Lane.

One dark cloud can hide the sunlight;

Loose one string, the pearls are scattered;

Think one thought, a soul may perish;

Say one word, a heart may break.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Philip and Mildred.

Since trifles make the sum of human things,
And half our misery from our foibles springs;
Since life's best joys consist in peace and ease;
And though but few can serve yet all may please;
O! let th' ungentle spirit learn from hence,
A small unkindness is a great offence.
To spread large bounties though we wish in vain
Yet all may shun the guilt of giving pain.
HANNAE MORE, Sensibility, l. 293.

At ev'ry trifle scorn to take offence;

That always shows great pride or little sense.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 186.

13 Small to greater matters must give way.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 11.

14 By great efforts obtain great trifles. (Magno jam conatu magnas nugas.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 621. (Act
iv, sc. 1.)

15 The discovery of the little planet beyond
Neptune is interesting, but is of the same relative importance that a dime found in the vest pocket of last year's winter suit bears to the French national debt.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, *Editorial, Emporia
Gazette*.

16 Don't make tragedies of trifles,

Don't shoot butterflies with rifles—

Laugh it off!

UNKNOWN, Laugh It Off.

TROUBLE

I—Trouble: Apothegms

17 Pack up your troubles in your old kit-bag,
And smile, smile, smile.

GEORGE ASAF. Title and refrain of song written in 1915, and popular with the British soldiers during the World War.

Build for yourself a strong-box,

Fashion each part with care;

Fit it with hasp and padlock;

Put all your troubles there.

Hide therein all your failures,
And each bitter cup you quaff,
Lock all your heartaches within it,
Then sit on the lid and laugh.
J. V. DANNER, Sit on the Lid and Laugh.

Wink and shut their apprehensions up.
JOHN MARSTON, Antonio's Revenge: Prologue.

1
Trouble rides behind and gallops with him.
(Le chagrin monte en croupe et galope avec lui.)

This peck of troubles.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 53.

5
You will soon be delivered from all your troubles.

CLEONICE, to Cimon, the enigmatic prophecy of his spirit foretelling his death. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cimon.)

Oh, a trouble's a ton, or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,

But only how did you take it?

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, How Did You Die?

7
In trouble to be troubled
Is to have your trouble doubled.

DANIEL DEFOE, Further Adventures of Robinson Crusoe.

8
Sweet is the remembrance of troubles when you are in safety. ('Ἡδὺ τοι σωθέντα μνησθαι πόνων.)

'longer me; I'm de man w'at kin show yer trouble," sezee.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 17.

12
The troubles of our proud and angry dust
Are from eternity, and shall not fail.
Bear them we can, and if we can we must.
Shoulder the sky, my lad, and drink your ale.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems. No. 9.

13
Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upward.

Old Testament: Job, v, 7. (Home nascitur ad laborem et avis ad volatum.—Vulgate.)

14
He [an old servant] saves me trouble, and that is a saving I would rather buy dear than any other. Beyond meat and drink, it is the only use I have ever discovered for money.

J. R. LOWELL, Letter, 1873.

Be merry, think upon the lives of men,
And with what troubles threescore years and ten

Are crowded oft, yea, even unto him
Who sits at home, nor fears for life and limb.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. x, l. 101.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3200.

Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you.
UNKNOWN, (Folk-Lore Journal, ii, 280.)

Better never trouble Trouble
Until Trouble troubles you;
For you only make your trouble
Double-trouble when you do;
And the trouble—like a bubble—
That you're troubling about,
May be nothing but a cipher
With its rim rubbed out.

DAVID KEPPEL, Trouble.

Don't you trouble trouble till trouble troubles you.

Don't you look for trouble, let trouble look for you.

MARK GUY PEARSE, Don't Trouble.

<sup>8</sup> If pleasures are greatest in anticipation, just remember that this is also true of trouble.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

From a distance it is something; and nearby it is nothing. (De loin, c'est quelque chose; et de près, ce n'est rien.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 10.

Sorrows are like thunderclouds—in the distance they look black, over our heads scarcely gray. (Die Leiden sind wie die Gewitterwolken; in der Ferne sehen sie schwarz aus, über uns kaum grau.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 14.

Trouble has a trick of coming butt end first;
Viewed approaching, then you've seen it at its worst.

Once surmounted, straight it waxes ever small,
And it tapers till there's nothing left at all.

So, when'er a difficulty may impend,
Just remember you are facing the butt end;
And that, looking back upon it, like as not,
You will marvel at beholding just a dot!

EDWIN L. SABIN, Trouble's Strong Front.

<sup>9</sup> Don't cross the bridge till you come to it,
Is a proverb old, and of excellent wit.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. vi.

TERENCE, Andria. Act v, sc. 5, l. 38. A proverb.

<sup>11</sup> What does it avail to run out to meet your suffering? (Quid juvat dolori suo occurrere?)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xiii, 10.

Peace, brother, be not over-exquisite
To cast the fashion of uncertain evils;
For grant they be so, while they rest unknown,
What need a man forestall his date of grief,
And run to meet what he would most avoid?

MILTON, Comus, l. 359.

<sup>12</sup> It is indeed foolish to be unhappy now because you may be unhappy at some future time. (Est sine dubio stultum, quia quandoque sis futurus miser, esse jam miserum.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiv, 1. Full of misery is the mind anxious about the future and wretched in anticipation of wretchedness. (Calamitosus est animus futuri anxius et ante miserias miser.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 6. What madness to anticipate one's troubles. . . . He suffers more than is necessary, who suffers before it is necessary. (Quæ ista dementia est malum suum antecedere? . . . Plus dolet quam necesse est, qui ante dolet quam necesse est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 8.

<sup>13</sup> You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 92.

III—Trouble and Imagination

See also Worry

<sup>14</sup> Why wilt thou add to all the griefs I suffer Imaginary ills, and fancy'd tortures?

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 1.

Were a man's sorrows and disquietudes summed up at the end of his life, it would generally be found that he had suffered more from the apprehension of such evils as never happened to him, than from those evils which had really befallen him.

TRUST

I—Trust: Apothegms

8 The greatest trust between man and man is the trust of giving counsel.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Counsel.

9 Do not trust all men, but trust men of worth;
the former course is silly, the latter a mark of prudence.

DEMOCRITUS, Ethica. Frag. 224.

It is equally an error to trust all men or no man. (Utrumque enim vitium est, et omnibus credere et nulli.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iii, sec. 4.

10 Cast the spear and leave the rest to Jove.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 622. (Bryant, tr.)

11 We are inclined to believe those whom we do not know, because they have never deceived us.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 8.

12 Men are able to trust one another, knowing the exact degree of dishonesty they are entitled to expect.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, The Woman Question.

13 To be trusted is a greater compliment than to be loved.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 4.

Those who trust us, educate us.

IV—Trust: The Trusts

17 Trust.

SAMUEL C. T. DODD introduced this word, as referring to a combination of capital, into the language in 1882, while acting as attorney for John D. Rockefeller.

This is the original trust.

UNKNOWN, Report of Committee, N. Y. State
Senate, after investigation of the Standard Oil Company, in 1888.

We declare our opposition to all combinations of capital, organized as trusts or otherwise.
Republican Platform, 1888.

The interests of the people are betrayed when Trusts and combinations are permitted to exist.
Democratic Platform, 1888.

Earnest attention should be given to those combinations of capital commonly called Trusts.

BENJAMIN HARRISON, Message to Congress, 3 Dec., 1889.

Trusts are largely private affairs.

JAMES G. BLAINE, Speech, Portland, Me., opening Harrison campaign in 1888.

Undigested securities.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN, Interview, N. Y. Times, 30 March, 1903, referring to a mass of securities issued to inflate and water the capitalization of trusts and combinations, promoted and floated in 1901.

An indefinable something is to be done, in a way nobody knows how, at a time nobody knows when, that will accomplish nobody knows what. That, as I understand it, is the program against the trusts.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

The System.

LINCOLN STEFFENS. A term invented to describe the super-community of interest which he found between trusts.

The Octopus.

FRANK NORRIS. Title of novel describing the workings of "the system."

Special privilege.

ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE, Speech, U. S. Senate, referring to the trusts.

The mother of trusts.

WOODROW WILSON, in 1898, referring to New Jersey, because her laws authorized the creation of "holding-corporations."

The Mother of Trusts.

JESSE HARDESTY. Title of book. Mr. Hardesty named railroad rebates as the maternal parent.

The mother of all trusts is the customs tariff law. HENRY O. HAVEMEYER, while testifying before the industrial commission in 1899.

I made the first speech in favor of organizing industrial consolidations in the eighties. Later the Chicago newspapers gave me the title of "Father of Trusts."

CHARLES R. FLINT, Memories of an Active Life.

Monopolies are odious, contrary to the spirit of free government and the principles of commerce and ought not to be suffered.

Maryland Declaration of 1776, referring to grants of monopoly by royal decree.

A power has risen up in the government greater than the people themselves, consisting of many and various and powerful interests . . . held together by the cohesive power of the vast surplus in the banks.

J. C. CALHOUN, Speech, U. S. Senate, 27 May, 1836.

The Seven Sisters.

Seven laws drawn up by Woodrow Wilson, as Governor of New Jersey, to end the state's statutory benevolence to the trusts.

New Jersey was regularly in the business of selling not only indulgence but absolution.

LINCOLN STEFFENS, New Jersey and the Trusts.

TRUTH

I—Truth: Definitions

Truth is inclusive of all the virtues, is older than sects or schools, and, like charity, more ancient than mankind.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Table Talk: Discourse.

Yet the deepest truths are best read between the lines, and, for the most part, refuse to be written.

AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Concord Days: June.

Truth is the secret of eloquence and of virtue, the basis of moral authority; it is the highest summit of art and life.

AMEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1854.

Another poet, whose name I have forgotten, called Truth the daughter of Time. (Veritatem Temporis filiam.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xii, ch. 11.

'Tis not antiquity, nor author, That makes truth Truth, altho' Time's daughter.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 663.

Truth is within ourselves: it takes no rise From outward things, whate'er you may believe.

There is an inmost centre in us all, Where truth abides in fulness.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. i.

Truth makes on the ocean of nature no one track of light—every eye looking on finds its own.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay xiv.

Truth is the shattered mirror strown In myriad bits; while each believes his little bit the whole to own.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. vi, st. 1.

Truth in person doth appear Like words congeal'd in northern air.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 147.

Truth ever lovely—since the world began The foe of tyrants, and the friend of man.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 347.

Truth is the highest thing that man may keep.

CHAUCEER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 751.

Truth is man's proper good, and the only immortal thing was given to our mortality to use.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Veritas Proprium Hominis.

1 Truth is the object of philosophy, but not always of philosophers.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms, 102.

2 Truth is truest poesy.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dauides. Bk. i, l. 41.

It's deadly commonplace, but, after all, the commonplaces are the great poetic truths.

R. L. STEVENSON, Weir of Hermiston.

3 "It is," says Chadband, "the ray of rays, the sun of suns, the moon of moons, the star of stars. It is the light of Terewth."

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 25.

4 Truth is the summit of being; justice is the application of it to affairs.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

Truth, whose centre is everywhere and its circumference nowhere, whose existence we cannot disimagine; the soundness and health of things, against which no blow can be struck but it recoils on the striker.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

5 Truth, sir, is a profound sea, and few there be who dare wade deep enough to find out the bottom on't.

FARQUEAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act v, sc. 1.

6 Truth is for other worlds, and hope for this; The cheating future lends the present's bliss.

O. W. HOLMES, The Old Player.

Veracity is a plant of paradise, and the seeds have never flourished beyond the walls.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola.

7 History warns us that it is the customary fate of new truths to begin as heresies and to end as superstitions.

THOMAS HENRY HUXLEY, Science and Culture: Origin of Species.

All great truths begin as blasphemies.

BERNARD SHAW, Annajanska.

What everybody echoes . . . as true today, may turn out to be falsehood tomorrow, mere smoke of opinion.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

8 Veracity is the heart of morality.

T. H. HUXLEY, Universities Actual and Ideal.

9 Truth, sir, is a cow, which will yield skeptics no more milk; so they have gone to milk the bull.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

10 Teach it to the simple, the learned know it well:

Truth is treasure, the best tried on earth.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. ii.

When all treasures are tried, Truth is the best. . . .

For he who is True with his tongue, True with his hands

Working True works therewith, and wishing ill to none,

He is a god, the gospel says, in earth and heaven.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. ii.

11 Truth is the strong compost in which beauty may sometimes germinate.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Inward Ho.

Truth is not a diet But a condiment.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Veritas vos Damnabit.

12 Truth is a fair and durable thing. (Καλὸν μὲν ἡ ἀλήθεια καὶ μόνιμον.)

PLATO, Laws, 663. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 40.)

Truth is the pleasantest of sounds. (Εἶναι τε ἥδιον τῶν ἀκουσμάτων τὴν ἀλήθειαν.)

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 40.)

13 Truth is a jewel which should not be painted over; but it may be set to advantage and shown in a good light.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Life of Reason, iv, 105.

14 Truth is eternal, and the son of heaven.

SWIFT, Ode: Dr. Wm. Sancroft.

15 Truth is that which a man throweth.

JOHN HORNE TOOKE, Diversions of Purley.

16 There are truths which are not for all men, nor for all times.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Cardinal de Bernis, 23 April, 1764.

Truths are fruits which should only be plucked when quite ripe.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to the Countess de Barcewitz, 24 Dec., 1761.

17 Pure truth hath no man seen nor e'er shall know. (Καὶ τὸ μὲν σαφὲς οὐτὶς ἀνὴρ ἵδεν οὐδέ τις ἔσται εἰδώς.)

XENOPHANES, Fragments. No. 34.

Pure truth cannot be assimilated by the crowd; it must be communicated by contagion.

AMIEL, Journal, 26 Oct., 1875.

If God should hold enclosed in his right hand all truth, and in his left hand only the ever-active impulse after truth, although with the condition that I must always and forever err, I would with humility turn to his left hand and say, "Father, give me this: pure truth is for thee alone."

LESSING, Anti-Götze.

No human being is constituted to know the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; and even the best of men must be content with fragments, with partial glimpses, never the full fruition.

WILLIAM OSLER, The Student Life.

II—Truth: Apothegms

- 1 Truth has not such an urgent air. (La vérité n'a point cet air impétueux.)
BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. i, l. 198.
- 2 A man may be in as just possession of truth as of a city, and yet be forced to surrender.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 6.
- 3 Why with old truth needs new truth disagree?
ROBERT BROWNING, Red Cotton Night-cap Country. Bk. ii.
- 4 The Truth may stretch but will not break. (La Verdad adelgaza y no quiebra.)

- 10 He who sees the truth, let him proclaim it, without asking who is for it or who is against it.
HENRY GEORGE, The Land Question. Ch. 3.
- 11 Truth like a torch, the more 'tis shook, it shines.
SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON, Discussions on Philosophy: Title Page.
When by night the frogs are croaking, kindle but a torch's fire;
Ha! how soon they all are silent! Thus Truth silences the liar.
FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Truth. (Longfellow, tr.)
- 12 Truth, when witty, is the wittiest of all things.
J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.
The well of true wit is truth itself.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 1.

- 13 In fact, there's nothing that keeps its youth, So far as I know, but a tree and truth.
O. W. HOLMES, The Deacon's Masterpiece.
- 14 Truth is tough. It will not break, like a bubble, at a touch; nay, you may kick it about all day, like a foot-ball, and it will be round and full at evening.
O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. v.
You know what that witty and eloquent old Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said. He said, "You needn't fear to handle the truth roughly; she is no invalid." The truth is the most robust and indestructible and formidable thing in the world.
WOODROW WILSON, Address, Tacoma, Wash., 13 Sept., 1919.
- 15 When speculation has done its worst, two and two still make four.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler, No. 36.
- 16 The dignity of truth is lost
With much protesting.
BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 2.
Truth often suffers more by the heat of its defenders than from the arguments of its opposers.
WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.
- 17 What is true by lamplight is not always true by sunlight. (Ce qui est vrai à la lampe n'est pas toujours vrai au soleil.)
JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 152.
It is even easier to be mistaken about the true than the beautiful. (Il est encore plus facile de se tromper sur le vrai que sur le beau.)

Reality, however, has a sliding floor.
EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 365.
- 21 As true as I live.
MIDDLETON, The Family of Love. Act v, sc. 3.
- 22 Truth needs not the foil of rhetoric.
MIDDLETON, The Family of Love. Act v, sc. 3.
- 23 Truth is as impossible to be soiled by any outward touch as the sunbeam.
MILTON, The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce. See also under SUN.

1 Truth for authority, not authority for truth.
 LUCRETIA MOTT. Her motto. (HIBBEN, The Peerless Leader. p. 100).

2 Truth alone wounds.
 NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile, 14 March, 1817.)

3 Let others write for glory or reward;
 Truth is well paid when she is sung and heard.
 SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Elegy on Lord Efigham.

4 We know the truth, not only by the reason,
 but also by the heart.
 BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. iv, No. 282.

 BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Sermons.

16 Truths that wake, to perish never.
 WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. Pt. ix.

III—Truth: The Naked Truth

17 Craft must have clothes, but truth loves to go naked.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1200.

Truth's best ornament is nakedness.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5314.

18 The naked truth. (Nuda Veritas.)
 HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 24, l. 7.

19 The truth, naked and unashamed, is always unpleasant.
 JAMES HUNEKER, Iconoclasts, p. 188.

20 Naked Truth needs no shift.
 WILLIAM PENN. Title of a Broadside. (1674)

21 Mere white truth in simple nakedness.
 TENNYSON, Balin and Balan, l. 509.

22 Because a cold rage seizes one at whiles
 To show the bitter old and wrinkled truth
 Stripped naked of all vesture that beguiles, False dreams, false hopes, false masks and modes of youth.
 JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night: Proem. St. 2.

IV—Truth Lies at the Bottom of a Well

23 Of truth we know nothing, for truth is in a well. (Ἐτεῖν δὲ οὐδὲν ἴδμεν· ἐν βυθῷ γὰρ ἡ ἀλήθεια.)

DEMOCRITUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec. 72.)

Nature has buried truth deep at the bottom of the sea.

DEMOCRITUS. (CICERO, Academicarum Quaestionum. Bk. ii, sec. 10.)

Democritus quasi in puteo quodam sic alta, ut fundus sit nullus, veritatem jacere demersam.

LACTANTIUS, Institutes, iii, 28.

We are born to inquire after truth; it belongs to a greater power to possess it. It is not, as Democritus said, hid in the bottom of the deeps, but rather elevated to an infinite height in the divine knowledge.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

Let us seek the solution of these doubts at the bottom of the inexhaustible well, where Heraclitus says that truth is hidden.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 18.

Truth, which wise men say, doth lie in a well.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica, i, 5.

It is an old saying that Truth lies in a well, but the misfortune is, that some men will use no chain to draw her up.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

Truth keeps the bottom of her well.

JOAQUIN MILLER, A Song of the South. Sec. iii, pt. 2.

1 Truth is always at the bottom of a grave.

JAMES HUNEKER, Iconoclasts, p. 63.

2 Truth lies wrapped up and hidden in the depths. (Involuta veritas in alto latet.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 1.

3 Truth, they say, lies in a well,
Why, I vow, I ne'er could see;
Let the water-drinkers tell,

There it always lay for me.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act iii, sc. 1.

4 Whilst the unlearned . . . were all busied in getting down to the bottom of the well, where Truth keeps her little court.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iv, pt. 1.

5 The sages say, Dame Truth delights to dwell (Strange Mansion!) in the bottom of a well: Questions are then the Windlass and the Rope That pull the grave old Gentlewoman up.

JOHN WOLCOT, Birthday Ode.

We never see the stars

Till we can see naught but them. So with truth. And yet if one would look down a deep well, Even at noon, we might see those same stars.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Water and Wood.

Truth, after all, wears a different face to everybody, and it would be too tedious to wait till all were agreed. She is said to lie at the bottom of a well, for the very reason, perhaps, that whoever looks down in search of her sees his own image at the bottom, and is persuaded not only that he has seen the Goddess, but that she is far better-looking than he had imagined.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy.

V—Truth Is Mighty and Will Prevail

6 Great is Truth, and mighty above all things.
Apocrypha: I Esdras, iv, 41.

Great is truth and it prevaieth. (Magna est veritas et prævalet.)

Biblia Sacra Vulgatæ Editionis: III Esdras, iv, 41. (Mazarin Bible, c. 1456; Douai version, 1609); Apocrypha: I Esdras, iv, 41. (1611). SAMUEL PURCHAS, Microcosmus. (1620). Popular usage has substituted the future, prævalebit, "will prevail," for prævalet.

Truth, by its own sinews, will prevail.

DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 349.

Truth in the end shall prevail.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi. E 4. (c. 1580)

Truth will prevail.

UNKNOWN, Beryn, 63. (c. 1400)

7 And fierce though the fiends may fight, and long though the angels hide,
I know that truth and right have the universe on their side.

WASHINGTON GLADDEN, Ultima Veritas.

8 The truth is great, and shall prevail,
When none cares whether it prevail or not.

COVENTRY PATMORE, Magna Est Veritas.

9 Truth will ultimately prevail where there is pains taken to bring it to light.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Maxims.

VI—Truth Shall Make You Free

10 Where Truth deigns to come,
Her sister Liberty will not be far.
MARK AKENSIDE, Pleasures of the Imagination. Bk. i, l. 23.

11 He is the freeman whom the truth makes free,
And all are slaves beside.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 733.

12 Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

New Testament: John, viii, 32.

13 Truth and, by consequence, liberty, will always be the chief power of honest men.

MADAME DE STAËL, Letter to General Moreau.

14 If the truth shall have made thee free, thou shalt not care for the vain words of men.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

VII—Truth: Its Power

15 What governs men is the fear of truth.

AMIEL, Journal, 1 March, 1869.

16 Words, phrases, fashions pass away;
But truth and nature live through all.

BERNARD BARTON, Stanzas on Bloomfield.

17 Truth is the strong thing. Let man's life be true!

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony, l. 233.

18 Truth tramples on the lie as oil on water.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

Truth and oil are even above.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

1 Great is the power of truth. (A magna vis veritas.)

CICERO, Pro Cælio Rufo. Sec. 26.

I am conquered by truth. (Vincer veris.)

ERASMUS, Diluculum.

2 Above all things truth beareth away the victory.

Apocrypha: I Esdras, iii, 12.

As for the truth, it endureth, and is always strong; it liveth and conquereth for evermore.

Apocrypha: I Esdras, iv, 38.

3 It is right to yield to the truth. (Liceat concedere veris.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 305.

4 You show that truth can ne'er decay,

Whatever fate befalls;

I, that the myrtle and the bay

Shoot fresh on ruined walls.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, In After Time.

5 No power can die that ever wrought for Truth;

Thereby a law of Nature it became,

And lives unwithered in its blithesome youth,

When he who called it forth is but a name.

J. R. LOWELL, Elegy on the Death of Dr. Channing. Inscribed beneath Lowell's bust in the Hall of Fame.

Get but the truth once uttered, and 't is like
A star new-born, that drops into its place,
And which, once circling in its placid round,
Not all the tumult of the earth can shake.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain, l. 173.

Put golden padlocks on Truth's lips, be callous
as ye will,

From soul to soul, o'er all the world, leaps one electric thrill.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Certain Fugitive Slaves Near Washington.

6 Methinks the truth should live from age to
age,

As 'twere retail'd to all posterity,

Even to the general all-ending day.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 76.

7 The truth is always the strongest argument

SOPHOCLES, Phædra. Frag. 737.

VIII—Truth: Love of Truth

8 Though both [Plato and truth] are dear to me, it is a sacred duty to put truth first.
(Ἀμφότεν γὰρ ὕπαινον φίλον ὅσον προτιμᾶν τὴν ἀλήθειαν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 6,
sec. 1.

Plato is dear to me, but dearer still is truth.
(Amicus Plato, sed magis amica veritas.)

ARISTOTLE. (CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51.)

Socrates is dear to me, but dearer still is truth.

ARISTOTLE. (AMMONIUS, Aristotelis Vita, 399.)

If you will take my advice, you will think little of Socrates, and a great deal more of truth.

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Phædo. Sec. 40.)

9 Arm thyself for the truth!

BULWER-LYTTON, The Lady of Lyons. Act v,
sc. 1.

Wherever the truth is injured, defend it.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 269.

Stake life upon the truth. (Vitam inpendere vero.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 91. The motto of Rousseau.

10 Truth! though the Heavens crush me for following her.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 7.

11 Remember, then, as long as you live, that nothing but strict truth can carry you through the world, with either your conscience or your honour unwounded.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

12 For truth has such a face and such a mien
As to be lov'd needs only to be seen.

DRYDEN, The Hind and Panther. Pt. i, l. 33.

13 He that feeds men serveth few;
He serves all who dares be true.

EMERSON, The Celestial Love.

14 Nothing shall warp me from the belief that every man is a lover of truth.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

15 In proportion as we perceive and embrace the truth do we become just, heroic, magnanimous, divine.

WILLIAM LLOYD GARRISON, Free Speech and Free Inquiry.

16 The contemplation of truth and beauty is the proper object for which we were created, which calls forth the most intense desires of the soul, and of which it never tires.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Criticisms on Art. Vol. i,
p. 2.

To love truth for truth's sake is the principal part of human perfection in this world, and the seed-plot of all other virtues.

JOHN LOCKE, Letter to Anthony Collins, Esq.,
29 Oct., 1703.

17 I do not fear to follow out the truth,
Albeit along the precipice's edge.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance behind the Curtain,
l. 251.

They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of Truth.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis, l. 87.

<sup>1</sup> Servant of God, well done! well hast thou fought

The better fight, who single hast maintain'd
Against revolted multitudes the cause
Of truth.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 29.

Gentlest and bravest in the battle-brunt—
The Champion of the Truth.

JAMES RYDER RANDALL, John Pelham.

Who never sold the truth to serve the hour,
Nor palter'd with Eternal God for power.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 179.

<sup>2</sup> When truth or virtue an affront endures,
Th' affront is mine, my friend, and should be yours.

POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. i, l. 199.

<sup>3</sup> Farewell then, verse, and love, and ev'ry toy,
The rhymes and rattles of the man or boy;
What right, what true, what fit, we justly call,
Let this be all my care—for this is all.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 17.

And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me
live!

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty, l. 56.

<sup>4</sup> Who tells me true, though in his tale lie
death,

I hear him as he flatter'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 2, l. 102.

<sup>5</sup> All fear of the world or consequence is swallowed up in a manly anxiety to do Truth justice.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 Feb., 1838.

<sup>6</sup> Truth before peace. That is my watchword.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 138.

<sup>7</sup> It is one thing to wish to have truth on our side, and another to wish sincerely to be on the side of truth.

RICHARD WHATELY, On the Love of Truth.

It is a dangerous grieving of the Spirit when, instead of drawing ourselves to the Spirit, we labour to draw the Spirit to us.

RICHARD SIBBES, Fountain Sealed. (c. 1630)

<sup>8</sup> Or shall we say That, like the Red-cross Knight, they urge their way,
To lead in memorable triumph home
Truth, their immortal Una?

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 25.

IX—Truth: Its Virtues

<sup>9</sup> No pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage-ground of Truth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

Certainly it is heaven upon earth to have a man's mind . . . turn upon the poles of truth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

Is truth ever barren?

BACON, Cogitationes de Scientia Humana.

<sup>10</sup> For truth is precious and divine;
Too rich a pearl for carnal swine.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 257.

All truth is precious, if not all divine.

COWPER, Charity, l. 331.

For truth is unwelcome, however divine.

COWPER, The Flattering Mill, l. 23.

Time is precious, but truth is more precious than
time.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, Aylesbury, 11
Sept., 1865.

<sup>11</sup> Truth shall restore the light by Nature given,
And, like Prometheus, bring the fire of Heaven! . . .

What! are thy triumphs, sacred Truth, belied?

Why then hath Plato lived—or Sidney died?

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 415.

<sup>12</sup> Individuals may perish; but truth is eternal.

JOSEPH GERRALD, Speech, when under arrest,
Jan., 1794.

<sup>13</sup> But there are seven sisters ever serving
Truth,

Porters of the Posterns; one called Abstinence,

Humility, Charity, Chastity be the chief maidens there;

Patience and Peace help many a one;

Lady Almsgiving lets in full many.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. viii.

<sup>14</sup> There is no veil like light—no adamantine armour against hurt like the truth.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 71.

Truth, a constant mistress, that Ever protects her servants.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>15</sup> In the mountains of truth, you never climb in vain.

NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra.

<sup>16</sup> Truth never yet fell dead in the streets; it has such affinity with the soul of man, the seed however broadcast will catch somewhere and produce its hundredfold.

THEODORE PARKER, A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.

1 If I had a device, it would be the True, the True only, leaving the Beautiful and the Good to settle matters afterwards as best they could.

SAINTE-BEUVE, Letter to Duruy, 9 Dec., 1865.

2 Truth hath a quiet breast.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 96.

Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
But best is best, if never intermix'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. ci.

X—Truth: Its Dangers

3 Truth is often attended with danger. (Petricula veritatis sæpe contigua.)

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS, History. Bk. xxvi, sec. 1.

4 Truth breeds hatred. (Veritas odium parit.)

BIAS. (AUSONIUS [?], Ludus Septem Sapientum. Sec. 8, l. 3.) Quoted by Terence, Andria, l. 68.

Truth is a narrow lane all full of quags,
Leading to broken heads, abuse, and rags.

JOHN WOLCOT, More Lyric Odes. No. 9.

5 The artlessness of unadorned truth, however sure in theory of extorting admiration, rarely in practice fails inflicting pain and mortification.

FANNY BURNEY, Camilla. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

6 I never saw any good that came of telling truth.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon. Act. iii, sc. 1.

7 God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose. Take which you please,—you can never have both.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Intellect.

Truth stood on one side and Ease on the other; it has often been so.

THEODORE PARKER, A Discourse of Matters Pertaining to Religion.

8 Follow not truth too near the heels, lest it dash out thy teeth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

9 Nobody has a right to put another under such a difficulty, that he must either hurt the person by telling the truth, or hurt himself by telling what is not true.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)

Every man has a right to utter what he thinks truth, and every man has a right to knock him down for it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

10 Now comes the pain of truth, to whom 't is pain;

O folly! for to bear all naked truths,

And to envisage circumstance, all calm,
That is the top of sovereignty.

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. ii, l. 202.

11 Not a truth has to art or to science been given,

But brows have ached for it, and souls toil'd and striven;

And many have striven, and many have fail'd,

And many died, slain by the truth they assail'd.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto 6, st. 1.

The smallest atom of truth represents some man's bitter toil and agony; for every ponderable chunk of it there is a brave truth-seeker's grave upon some lonely ash-dump and a soul roasting in hell.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 274.

12 Truth . . . never comes into the world but like a bastard, to the ignominy of him that brought her forth.

JOHN MILTON, Works. Vol. i, p. 276.

Still rule those minds on earth

At whom sage Milton's wormwood words were hurled:

Truth like a bastard comes into the world
Never without ill-fame to him who gives her birth.

THOMAS HARDY, Lausanne: In Gibbon's Old Garden.

13 Hard are the ways of truth, and rough to walk.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 478.

14 And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray 's
In deepest consequence.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 123.

15 I am very fond of truth, but not at all of martyrdom.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to d'Alembert, Feb., 1776.

XI—Truth: The Search for Truth

16 And much they grope for Truth, but never hit, . . .

Yet deem they darkness light and their vain blunders wit.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, st. 51.

17 It is the modest, not the presumptuous, inquirer who makes a real and safe progress in the discovery of divine truths.

VISCOUNT BOLINGBROKE, Letter to Mr. Pope.

18 I promised, if you'd watch a dinner out,
We'd see truth dawn together?—truth that peeps

Over the glasses' edge when dinner's done,
And body gets its sop and holds its noise

And leaves soul free a little.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

1 Every man seeks for truth, but God only knows who has found it.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Sept., 1747.

And diff'ring judgments serve but to declare,
That Truth lies somewhere, if we knew but where.

COWPER, Hope, l. 423.

Who dares

To say that he alone has found the truth?

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act ii, sc. 3.

2 The search after truth, and its eager pursuit, are peculiar to man. (Hominis est propria veri inquisitio atque investigatio.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 4, sec. 13.

Nature has planted in our minds an insatiable longing to see truth. (Natura inest in mentibus nostris insatiabilis quædam cupiditas veri vendendi.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 44.

3 Truths that the learn'd pursue with eager thought

Are not important always as dear-bought.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 73.

4 One truth discovered is immortal, and entitles its author to be so: for, like a new substance in nature, it cannot be destroyed.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Spirit of the Age: Jeremy Bentham.

The man who finds a truth lights a torch.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Truth.

5 Truth and seemliness are my study and pursuit, and to that am I wholly given. (Quid verum atque decens curo et rogo et omnis in hoc sum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 11.

To seek for truth in the groves of Academe. (Inter silvas Academi quærere verum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 45.

6 Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews.

New Testament: John, xviii, 38.

Pilate asked, Quid est veritas? And then some other matter took him in the head, and so up he rose and went his way before he had his answer.

LANCELOT ANDREWES, BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, Sermons: Of the Resurrection. (1613)

What is truth? said jesting Pilate; and would not stay for an answer.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

But what is truth? 'twas Pilate's question, put To Truth itself, that deign'd him no reply.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 270.

7 There are great truths that pitch their shining tents

Outside our walls, and though but dimly seen In the gray dawn, they will be manifest When the light widens into perfect day.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo: Pt. iv, In the Coliseum.

8 I seek the truth, whereby no man was ever harmed. (Ζητῶ γὰρ τὴν ἀλήθειαν, ὅφ' ἥς οὐδεὶς πώποτε ἐβλάβη.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vi, sec. 21.

9 Man with his burning soul
Has but an hour of breath
To build a ship of Truth
In which his soul may sail,
Sail on the sea of death;
For death takes toll
Of beauty, courage, youth,
Of all but Truth.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Truth. St. 1.

10 O sir, the truth, the truth! is 't in the skies,
Or in the grass, or in this heart of ours?
But O the truth, the truth! the many eyes
That look on it! the diverse things they see,
According to their thirst for fruit or flowers!
Pass on: it is the truth seek we.

GEORGE MEREDITH, A Ballad of Fair Ladies in Revolt. St. 16.

Truths which transcend the searching schoolmen's vein

And half had staggered that stout Stagirite.

CHARLES LAMB, Written at Cambridge. Stagirite, i.e. Aristotle, born at Stagira.

11 Truths would you teach, or save a sinking land?

All fear, none aid you, and few understand.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 265.

12 While we are examining into everything, we sometimes find truth where we least expect it. (Dum omnia quærimus, aliquando ad verum, ubi minime expectavimus, pervenimus.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, ch. 8, sec. 3.

13 As painfully to pore upon a book,
To seek the light of truth; while truth the while

Doth falsely blind the eyesight of his look.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 74.

But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 129.

14 The golden guess

Is morning-star to the full round of truth.

TENNYSON, Columbus, l. 42.

<sup>1</sup> Who seeks for truth should be of no country.
VOLTAIRE, Réponse, à un Académicien.

XII—Truth: Truth-telling

ÆSCHYLUS, Ælon Krisis. Frag. 92.

The language of truth is simple. ('Απλοὺς ὁ μῦθος τῆς ἀληθείας ἐπν.)

EURIPIDES, Phænissæ, l. 469. Quoted by Seneca (Epistulæ ad Lucilium, xlix, 4): Veritatis simplex oratio est.

The words of truth are always paradoxical.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 78.

The language of truth is unadorned and always simple. (Veritatis absolutus sermo ac semper est simplex.)

AMMIANUS MARCELLINUS, History. Bk. xiv, 10.

<sup>3</sup> Truth can never be told so as to be understood, and not be believ'd.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

<sup>4</sup> Think truly, and thy thoughts
Shall the world's famine feed.
Speak truly, and each word of thine
Shall be a fruitful seed.

Live truly, and thy life shall be
A great and noble creed.
HORATIUS BONAR, Be True.

<sup>5</sup> Truth never hurts the teller.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fifine at the Fair. Sec. 32.

<sup>6</sup> For fools and mad men tell commonly truth.
ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. 3, mem. 8.

Wilt thou be my fool? for fools, they say, will tell truth.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Very Woman. Act iii, sc. 1.

Children and fools speak true.

JOHN LYLY, Endymion, iv, 2.

Fools and babes tell true.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, More Knaves Yet, 36.

<sup>7</sup> The fewer the voices on the side of truth, the more distinct and strong must be your own.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING, Charge on Ordination of Rev. J. S. Dwight.

Then to side with Truth is noble when we share her wretched crust,

Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 't is prosperous to be just;

Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands aside,

Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 11.

<sup>8</sup> No man speaks the truth or lives a true life two minutes together.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 455.

When what should be the greatest truths flat out into shallow truisms, then we are all sick.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 30.

<sup>9</sup> Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbour.

New Testament: Ephesians, iv, 25.

The highest compact we can make with our fellow is,—Let there be truth between us two forevermore.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

<sup>10</sup> Her taste exact For faultless fact Amounts to a disease.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

<sup>11</sup> "Did I say so?" replied he, coolly; "to be sure, if I said so, it was so."

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 54.

<sup>12</sup> An honest man speaks the truth, though it may give offence; a vain man, in order that it may.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 387.

<sup>13</sup> What forbids one to speak truth laughingly? (Quamquam ridentem dicere verum Quid vetat?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 24.

My way of joking is to tell the truth. It's the funniest joke in the world.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act ii.

<sup>14</sup> You have no business with consequences; you are to tell the truth.

<sup>15</sup> Say the truth and shame the devil.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 506. (1552)

I will tell the truth and shame the fiend.

BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act v, sc. 1.

Speak the truth and shame the Devil.

RABELAIS, Works: Bk. v, Author's Prologue.

O, while you live, tell truth and shame the devil!
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 62.

What, can the devil speak true?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 107.

<sup>16</sup> 'Tis always best to tell the truth. ('Αεὶ κρᾶτιστόν ἐστι τἀληθὴ λέγειν.)

MENANDER, Upobolimaïos. Frag. 487.

The truth is ever best. ('Ορθὸν ἀλήθει' ἀεὶ.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1195.

It is always the best policy to speak the truth, unless of course you are an exceptionally good liar.

JEROME K. JEROME, The Idler, Feb., 1892.

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY, see under HONESTY.

<sup>17</sup> When affection only speaks,
Truth is not always there.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act iv, sc. 2.

<sup>1</sup> You shall hear from me nothing but the truth.
(Πᾶσαν τὴν ἀλήθειαν.)

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates. Sec. 1.

I have learned to tell the truth. (Vera didici dicere.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 686. (Act i, sc. 2.)

I speak truth, not so much as I would, but as much as I dare; and I dare a little the more as I grow older.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

Speaking truth is like writing fair, and only comes by practice.

JOHN RUSKIN, Seven Lamps of Architecture. Ch. ii, sec. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Twirling my wit as it were my mustache,
The while I pass among the crowd, I make
Bold truths ring out like spurs.

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act i, sc. 4.

<sup>3</sup> O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 375.

We will answer all things faithfully.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 299.

<sup>4</sup> Truth-teller was our England's Alfred named.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 188.

<sup>5</sup> It takes two to speak truth—one to speak and another to hear.

THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Wednesday.

<sup>6</sup> A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation.

New Testament: I Timothy, i, 15.

<sup>7</sup> There was things which he stretched, but mainly he told the truth.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 1.

<sup>8</sup> When in doubt, tell the truth.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

Tell the truth or trump—but get the trick.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

XIII—Truth: Not Always to Be Told

<sup>9</sup> All things to all men only fools will tell,
Truth profits none but those that use it well.

J. S. BLACKIE, The Wise Men of Greece: Pythagoras.

<sup>10</sup> 'Tis real humanity and kindness to hide strong truths from tender eyes.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. i, 63.

So, minds at first must be spoon-fed with truth.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Death in the Desert.

<sup>11</sup> That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 110.

Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must be whipped out, when Lady the brach may stand by the fire and stink.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 124.

<sup>12</sup> Truth telling is not compatible with the defence of the realm.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House: Preface.

<sup>13</sup> All soothes be not to say.

THOMAS USK, Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

All truths are not to be told.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

For truth itself has not the privilege to be spoken at all times and in all sorts.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

XIV—Truth and Falsehood

See also Error and Truth

<sup>14</sup> Use not to lie, for that is dishonest; speak not every truth, for that is unneedful; yes, in time and place, a harmless lie is a great deal better than a hurtful truth.

ROGER ASCHAM, Letter to Mr. Howe. (1550)

'T is not enough your counsel still be true:
Blunt truths more mischief than nice falsehoods do.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 13.

A truth that's told with bad intent
Beats all the lies you can invent.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

<sup>15</sup> Truth may perhaps come to the price of a pearl, that sheweth best by day; but it will not rise to the price of a diamond, or carbuncle, that sheweth best in varied lights. A mixture of a lie doth ever add pleasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Truth.

<sup>16</sup> Be so true to thyself, as thou be not false to others.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Wisdom for a Man's Self. (1597)

To thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 78. (1600)

The first great work, task perform'd by few,
Is, that yourself may to yourself be true.

WENTWORTH DILLON, An Essay on Translated Verse, l. 71.

<sup>17</sup> Sow truth, if thou the truth wouldst reap:
Who sows the false shall reap the vain.

HORATIUS BONAR, He Liveth Long Who Liveth Well.

1 There is truth in falsehood, falsehood in truth.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act ii.

What does the world, told truth, but lie the more?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. x, l. 673.

2 And, after all, what is a lie? 'Tis but The truth in masquerade.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 37.

Truth is only falsehood well disguised.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple. Act iii, sc. 4.

3 The truth is bitter and disagreeable to fools; but falsehood is sweet and acceptable. (Τὸ μὲν ἀληθὲς πικρὸν ἐστὶ καὶ ἀηδὲς τοῖς ἀνόητοις· τὸ δὲ ψεῦδος γλυκὺ καὶ προσηνές.)

ST. CHRYSOSTOM, Adagia.

4 Falsehood is so near to truth that a wise man would do well not to trust himself on the narrow edge. (Ita enim finitima sunt falsa veris ut in præcipitem locum non debeat se sapiens committere.)

CICERO, Academicarum Quæstionum. Bk. ii, sec. 21.

He who has once deviated from the truth, usually commits perjury with as little scruple as he would tell a lie.

CICERO, Pro Quinto Roscio Comædo. Sec. 20.

5 Ever to that truth, Which but the semblance of a falsehood wears,

A man, if possible, should bar his lip. (Sempre a quel ver ch' ha faccia di menzogna De' l' uom chiuder le labbra.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xvi, l. 124.

6 For how can that be false, which every tongue

Of every mortal man affirms for true?

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 32, st. 55.

7 Some truth there was, but dashed and brewed with lies,

To please the fools, and puzzle all the wise. Succeeding times did equal folly call, Believing nothing, or believing all.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 114.

8 Falsehood is so easy, truth so difficult.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 17.

9 Truth is beautiful. Without doubt; and so are lies.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iii, p. 437.

10 Half the truth is often a great lie.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Half-truths to which men are accustomed are so much easier to pass than the golden mintage they rarely encounter!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Religio Journalistici, p. 32.

Truths would be tales
Where now half truths be truths.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 136.

That a lie which is half a truth is ever the blackest of lies,

That a lie which is all a lie may be met and fought with outright,

But a lie which is part a truth is a harder matter to fight.

TENNYSON, The Grandmother. St. 8.

11 Lying is the strongest acknowledgment of the force of truth.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Pt. ii, ser. ii, essay 31.

12 He that trusts in a lie shall perish in truth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Gnomologia.

13 We know how to speak many things which are false as if they were true. (Ἴδμεν ψεύδεα πολλὰ λέγειν ἐτύμοισιν ὁμοῖα.)

HESIOD, Theogony, l. 27.

14 Urge him with truth to frame his fair replies; And sure he will; for Wisdom never lies.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 25. (Pope, tr.)

15 Telling the truth to people who misunderstand you is generally promoting falsehood.

ANTHONY HOPE, Dolly Dialogues. No. 14.

16 To distinguish the false from the true. (Vero distinguere falsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 10, l. 29.

I would I could as easily discover the true as I can expose the false. (Utinam tam facile vera invenire possim, quam falsa convincere.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 32, sec. 91.

17 A man had rather have a hundred lies told of him, than one truth which he does not wish should be told.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. 1773.)

18 I reckon there's more things told than are true,

And more things true than are told!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Rewards and Fairies: The Ballad of Minepit Shaw.

19 Man is ice for truth, fire for falsehood.

(L'homme est de glace aux vérités;

Il est de feu pour les mensonges.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables.

20 Some falsehood mingles with all truth.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.

21

The nimble lie

Is like the second-hand upon a clock;
We see it fly, while the hour-hand of truth
Seems to stand still, and yet it moves unseen,
And wins at last, for the clock will not strike
Till it has reached the goal.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. iii, sec. 5.

But a lie, whatever the guise it wears,
Is a lie, as it was of yore.
And a truth that has lasted a million years
Is good for a million more!

TED OLSON, Things That Endure.

1 Who speaks the truth stabs Falsehood to the heart,
And his mere word makes despots tremble
more
Than ever Brutus with his dagger could.

J. R. LOWELL, L'Envoi, l. 100.

2 Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 5.

3 Against truth falsehood hath no might.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Story of Thebes. Pt. ii.
Let Truth and Falsehood grapple: who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter?

MILTON, Areopagitica.

4 An innocent truth can never stand in need
Of a guilty lie.

MASSINGER, Emperor of the East. Act v, sc. 3.

Truth never was indebted to a lie.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 587.

5 For lying is thy sustenance, thy food;
Yet thou pretend'st to truth.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 429.

6 For oh, 't was nuts to the Father of Lies,
(As this wily fiend is nam'd in the Bible)
To find it settled by laws so wise
That the greater the truth, the worse the libel!

THOMAS MOORE, A Case of Libel, l. 61.

The greater the truth the greater the libel.
LORD ELLENBOROUGH seems to have originated this saying, about 1789. Robert Burns, in some lines written at Stirling, attributed it to Lord Mansfield.

7 I love the truth and wish to have it always spoken to me: I hate a liar. (Ego verum amo, verum volo mihi dici; mendacem odi.)
PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 181. (Act i, sc. 3.)

8 The dull flat falsehood serves for policy;
And in the cunning truth itself 's a lie.
ALEXANDER POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 67.

9 Tell a lie, and find the truth.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 75.

10 False things may be imagined, and false things composed; but only truth can be invented.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. i, pt. 8,
ch. 4, sec. 23.

11 They spake truth once—but all the rest was lies,
Lived for an hour—then for all time were
dead.

MARGARET SACKVILLE, Resurrection.

12 I pull in resolution, and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 42.

13 Falsehood flies and truth comes limping after it, so that when men come to be undeceived it is too late.

SWIFT, The Examiner. No. 15.

A lie travels round the world while Truth is putting on her boots.

C. H. SPURGEON, Truth and Falsehood.

A lie travels by the Marconi route, while Truth goes by slow freight and is often ditched at the first water-tank.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

14 Truth is strengthened by observation and delay, falsehood by haste and uncertainty.
(Veritas visu et mora, falsa festinatione et incertis valescunt.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 39.

15 Falsehoods which we spurn to-day
Were the truths of long ago.

WHITTIER, Calef in Boston. St. 4.

XV—Truth and Fiction

16 Fiction lags after truth, invention is un-fruitful, and imagination cold and barren.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

17 'Tis strange—but true; for truth is always strange,—
Stranger than fiction.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 101.

Truth is stranger than fiction—to some people,
but I am measurably familiar with it.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

18 Truth, fact, is the life of all things; falsity,
"fiction," or whatever it may call itself, is certain to be the death.

CARLYLE, Later-Day Pamphlets. No. 8.

19 When fiction rises pleasing to the eye,
Men will believe, because they love the lie;
But Truth herself, if clouded with a frown,

Must have some solemn proof to pass her down.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Epistle to Hogarth, l. 291.

1 I love truth. I believe humanity has need of it. But assuredly it has much greater need still of the untruth which flatters it, consoles it, gives it infinite hopes. (J'aime la vérité. Je crois que l'humanité en a besoin; mais, certes, elle a bien plus grand besoin encore du mensonge qui la flatte, la console, lui donne des espérances infinies.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, La Vie en Fleur.

2 Never will the imagination approach the improbabilities and the antitheses of truth.

EDMOND AND JULES DE GONCOURT, Journal. Vol. ii, p. 9.

At times truth may not seem probable. (Le vrai peut quelquefois n'être pas vraisemblable.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. iii, l. 48.

4 Fictions meant to please should be very close to truth. (Ficta voluptatis causa sint proxima veris.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 338.

5 If this were played upon a stage now, I could condemn it as an improbable fiction.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 140.

6 There is nothing so powerful as truth, and often nothing so strange.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech: Murder of Captain White.

7 Nothing can satisfy, but what confounds; Nothing, but what astonishes, is true.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 836.

TURKEY AND THE TURKS

8 Know ye the land where the cypress and myrtle

Are emblems of deeds that are done in their clime,

Where the rage of the vulture, the love of the turtle

Now melt into sorrow, now madden to crime? . . .

Where the virgins are soft as the roses they twine,

And all save the spirit of man is divine?

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 1.

9 The unspeakable Turk should be immediately struck out of the question.

CARLYLE, Letter to a Meeting at St. James's Hall, 1876.

10

Let the Turks carry away their abuses in the only possible manner, namely by carrying off themselves. Their zaptiehs and their mudirs, their bimbashes and their yuzbashis, their kaimekans and their pashas,—one and all, bag and baggage, shall, I hope, clear out from the province they have desolated and profaned.

GLADSTONE, Speech, 7 May, 1877, on the occupation of Bulgaria by Turkey.

Come, shepherd, let us make an honourable retreat; though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 169.

11

One of that saintly murderous brood To carnage and the Koran given.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

12

[The Ottoman Empire] has the body of a sick old man, who tried to appear healthy, although his end was near.

SIR THOMAS ROE, Ambassador to Constantinople, 1621. (BUCHANAN, Letters, p. 375.)

[The Ottoman Empire] whose sick body was not supported by a mild and regular diet, but by a powerful treatment, which continually exhausted it.

MONTESQUIEU, Persian Letters. Bk. i, No. 19. We have on our hands a sick man,—a very sick man.

NICHOLAS I OF RUSSIA, Conversation with Sir George Hamilton Seymour, 1853. (Blue Book, 1854.) Hence "The sick man of Europe," as referring to the Turk.

13

I would send them to the Turk, to make eunuchs of.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 94.

Go to Constantinople and take the Turk by the beard.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 222.

In woman, out-paramoured the Turk.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 94.

An you be not turned Turk, there's no more sailing by the star.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 57.

14

The Sublime Porte. (Bab-i-ali.)

The official title of the central office of the Ottoman empire under the sultans.

The lofty gate of the royal tent.

MAHOMET II, referring to the ancient place of audience. The Italians translated the phrase "La porte sublima." (CREASY, History of the Ottoman Turks, p. 96.)

TWILIGHT

15

Whilst twilight's curtain, spreading far,

Was pinned with a single star.

MACDONALD CLARKE, Death in Disguise, l. 227.

Now twilight lets her curtain down

And pins it with a star.

LYDIA MARIA CHILD. When Macdonald Clarke died in 1842, Mrs. Child wrote an appreciation of his work, in which she misquoted his lines as above, and the misquotation became the more widely accepted rendering.

Day hath put on his jacket, and around

His burning bosom buttoned it with stars.

O. W. HOLMES, Evening: By a Tailor, l. 1.

Night was drawing and closing her curtain.

RICHTER, Flower, Fruit, and Thorn Pieces. Bk. i, ch. 2.

1
How lovely are the portals of the night,
When stars come out to watch the daylight die.

THOMAS COLE, Twilight.

The lengthening shadows wait

The first pale stars of twilight.

O. W. HOLMES, Even-Song. St. 6.

2
Parlour twilight: such a gloom
Suits well the thoughtful or unthinking mind.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 278.

3
Spirit of Twilight, through your folded wings
I catch a glimpse of your averted face,
And rapturous on a sudden, my soul sings
"Is not this common earth a holy place?"

OLIVE CUSTANCE, Twilight.

4
From that high mount of God, whence light

chang'd

To grateful twilight.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 640.

Disastrous twilight.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 597.

5
Our lady of the twilight,
She hath such gentle hands,
So lovely are the gifts she brings
From out the sunset-lands,
So bountiful, so merciful,
So sweet of soul is she;
And over all the world she draws
Her cloak of charity.

ALFRED NOYES, Our Lady of the Twilight.

6
When I was young the twilight seemed too
long.

A. MARY F. ROBINSON, Twilight.

7
Twilight's soft dewes steal o'er the village-green,

With magic tints to harmonize the scene.
Still'd is the hum that thro' the hamlet broke,
When round the ruins of their ancient oak
The peasants flock'd to hear the minstrel play,

And games and carols closed the busy day.
SAMUEL ROGERS, The Pleasures of Memory.
Pt. i, l. 1.

8
Twilight, a timid fawn, went glimmering by,
And Night, the dark-blue hunter, followed
fast.

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL, Refuge.

Dusk wraps the village in its dim caress;
Each chimney's vapour, like a thin grey rod,
Mounting aloft through miles of quietness,
Pillars the skies of God.

GEORGE WILLIAM RUSSELL, Dusk.

9
Twilight, ascending slowly from the east,
Entwined in duskier wreaths her braided locks

O'er the fair front and radiant eyes of day:
Night followed, clad with stars.

SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 337.

TYRANNY

10
Of all the tyrants that the world affords,
Our own affections are the fiercest lords.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Julius Cæsar.

Think'st thou there is no tyranny but that
Of blood and chains? The despotism of vice,
The weakness and the wickedness of luxury,
The negligence, the apathy, the evils
Of sensual sloth—produce ten thousand tyrants,
Whose delegated cruelty surpasses
The worst acts of one energetic master,
However harsh and hard in his own bearing.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 113.

The worst tyrants are those which establish themselves in our own breasts.

W. E. CHANNING, Spiritual Freedom.

11
A usurper always distrusts the whole world.
(Usurpator diffida Di tutti sempre.)

ALFIERI, Polinice. Act iii, sc. 2.

The tyrant now
Trusts not to men: nightly within his chamber
The watch-dog guards his couch, the only friend
He now dare trust.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Ethwald. Pt. ii, act v, sc. 3.

Only tyrants need always be in fear. (Il n'appartient qu'aux tyrans d'être toujours en crainte.)

HENRY IV OF FRANCE. (HARDOUIN DE PERE-FIXE.)

Fear, that reigns with the tyrant.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i, l. 35.

Tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 2, l. 84.

12
For tyrants make man good beyond himself:
Hate to their rule, which else would die
away,

Their daily-practis'd chafings keep alive.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Merope, l. 42.

13
All oppressors . . . attribute the frustration of their desires to the want of sufficient rig-

our. Then they redouble the efforts of their impotent cruelty.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings, 16 Feb., 1788.

I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trodden under foot, and whose country he has turned into a desert. Lastly, in the name of human nature itself, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age, in the name of every rank, I impeach the common enemy and oppressor of all.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren Hastings: Peroration. This is the version given by Macaulay in his essay on Warren Hastings. It is much swifter and more brilliant than the original, and hence has become more familiar.

1 The tyranny of a multitude is a multiplied tyranny.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Thomas Mercer, 26 Feb., 1790. See also under PEOPLE.

2 A tyrant is the best sacrifice to Jupiter, as the ancients held.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 1.

3 Can despots compass aught that hails their sway?

Or call with truth one span of earth their own,

Save that wherein at last they crumble bone by bone?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 42.

Here all the mighty troublers of the earth,
Who swam to sov'reign rule through seas of blood;

Th' oppressive, sturdy, man-destroying villains,
Who ravag'd kingdoms, and laid empires waste. . . .

Now, like a storm that's spent, Lie hush'd.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 208.

4 Tyranny Is far the worst of treasons.

BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act ii, sc. 1.

5 Is there no tyrant but the crowned one?
(N'est-on jamais tyran qu'avec un diadème?)

ANDRÉ CHÉNIER, Cainus Gracchus.

6 I deem the tyrant happy who dies a natural death.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Sec. 5.)

Tremble, ye tyrants, for ye can not die. (Tremblez, tyrans, vous êtes immortels.)

JACQUES DELILLE, L'Immortalité de l'Âme.

How hard the tyrants die!

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

The strangest thing I ever saw was an aged tyrant.

THALES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Thales. Sec. 36.)

7 Tyrant, step from the throne, and give place to thy master. (Tyran, descends du trône et fais place à ton maître.)

CORNEILLE, Heraclius. Act i, sc. 2.

8

He who allows oppression shares the crime.

ERASMUS DARWIN, The Botanic Garden. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 458.

Nature has left this tincture in the blood,
That all men would be tyrants if they could.

DANIEL DEFOE, The Kentish Petition: Addenda, l. 11.

Slaves would be tyrants if the chance were theirs.

VICTOR HUGO, The Vanished City.

There are few minds to which tyranny is not delightful.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 110.

10

O slavish man! will you not bear with your own brother, who has God for his Father, as being a son from the same stock, and of the same high descent? But if you chance to be placed in some superior station, will you presently set yourself up for a tyrant?

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 3.

11

A state has no worse foe than a tyrant, under whom can be no common laws; but one ruler, keeping the law in his own hands, so that equality perishes.

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 429.

Where law ends, tyranny begins.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, 9 Jan., 1770.

To live by one man's will became the cause of all men's misery.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Polity. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 5.

12

Tyrants commonly cut off the stairs by which they climb unto their thrones . . . for fear that, if they still be left standing, others will get up the same way.

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 7.

Oppression, and Sword-law.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 668.

2 Resistance to tyrants is obedience to God.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Epigram, found among his papers after his death.

The time to guard against corruption and tyranny is before they shall have gotten hold of us. It is better to keep the wolf out of the fold than to trust to drawing his teeth and claws after he shall have entered.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 163.

3 I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. x, p. 173.

He who endeavors to control the mind by force is a tyrant, and he who submits is a slave.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Some Mistakes of Moses.

Whatever crushes individuality is despotism, by whatever name it may be called.

ALGERNON SIDNEY. Written in the album of the University of Copenhagen. The first line, at least, was not original. (Notes and Queries, 10 March, 1866.) The second line is the motto of the State of Massachusetts.

This hand, to tyrants ever sworn the foe,
For Freedom only deals the deadly blow;
Then sheathes in calm repose the vengeful blade
For gentle peace in Freedom's hallowed shade.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Written in an Album,
1842. A free translation of Sidney's lines.

With reasonable men, I will reason; with humane men I will plead; but to tyrants I will give no quarter, nor waste arguments where they will certainly be lost.

Observe how system into system runs,
What other planets circle other suns.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 21.

8 The universe, as far as we can observe it, is a wonderful and immense engine; its extent, its order, its beauty, its cruelty, make it alike impressive. If we dramatize its life and conceive its spirit, we are filled with wonder, terror, and amusement, so magnificent is that spirit, so prolific, inexorable, grammatical and dull.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 85.

Great is this organism of mud and fire, terrible this vast, painful, glorious experiment.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 86.

9 The universe is a thought of God.

SCHILLER, Essays: Aesthetic and Philosophical. Letter 4.

10 This goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestic roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 310.

11 When I view the universe as a whole, I admit that it is a marvelous structure; and what is more, I insist that it is of what I may call an intelligent design. . . . There is really very little difference between my own thoughts about the matter and the thoughts of a Fundamentalist.

UNIVERSITY

15 Universities incline wits to sophistry and affectation.

BACON, Interpretation of Nature. Ch. 26.

They learn nothing there [at the universities of Europe] but to believe; first, to believe that others know that which they know not; and after, that themselves know that which they know not.

BACON, Cogitationes de Scientia Humana.

16 Universities where individualism is dreaded as nothing else, wherein manufactories of patent drama, business schools and courses for the propagation of fine embroidery are established on the order of the monied.

THOMAS BEER, The Mauve Decade, p. 207.

17 The true University of these days is a Collection of Books.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

18 And solid learning never falls

Without the verge of College walls.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 83.

19 A university should be a place of light, of liberty, and of learning.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 11 March, 1873.

1 Ye can lade a man up to th' university, but ye can't make him think.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Mr. Carnegie's Gift.

2 Colleges hate geniuses, just as convents hate saints.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education.

3 A university—an institution consciously devoted to the pursuit of knowledge, the solution of problems, the critical appreciation of achievement, and the training of men at a really high level.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 42.

The pursuit of science and scholarship belongs to the university. What else belongs there? Assuredly neither secondary, technical, vocational, nor popular education.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 27.

There are Babbitts in all countries, but "Babbittry" in the presidency of great universities is an exclusively American phenomenon.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 151.

4 It is in universities that . . . the soul of a people mirrors itself.

VISCOUNT HALDANE, Universities and National Life, p. 29.

5 The ideal college consists of a log of wood with an instructor at one end and a student at the other.

MARK HOPKINS. (FLEXNER, Universities, p. 151.)

6 A college degree does not lessen the length of your ears: it only conceals it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

7 Colleges are places where pebbles are polished and diamonds are dimmed.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Abraham Lincoln.

8 He is piping hot from the university. He smells of buttered loaves yet.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Your Five Gallants.

9 Die, and endow a College, or a Cat.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 96.

10 I am undone! while I play the good husband at home, my son and my servant spend all at the university.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act v, sc. 1, l. 71.

11 A fool's brain digests philosophy into folly, science into superstition, and art into pedantry. Hence University education.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

12 The King, observing with judicious eyes The state of both his universities, To one he sent a regiment; for why? That learned body wanted loyalty:

To th' other he sent books, as well discerning How much that loyal body wanted learning.

DR. JOSEPH TRAPP, Epigram, when George I, in 1715, sent a regiment to Oxford, and donated Bishop Ely's library to Cambridge University.

The King to Oxford sent a troop of horse,
For Tories own no argument but force;
With equal skill to Cambridge books he sent,
For Whigs admit no force but argument.

SIR WILLIAM BROWNE, Riposte to Dr. Trapp.

Isis and Cam, to patient science dear!

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 42.

13 It is . . . a small college, and yet there are those that love it.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument, when presenting the Dartmouth College case to the Supreme Court. Quoted by Chauncey A. Goodrich in a letter to Rufus Choate. (QUINT, Story of Dartmouth.)

14 We have let the idea of freedom under self-respect go to seed in our colleges and are turning out too many hard-boiled, hard-hearted, hard-headed dumb-bells.

WILLIAM ALLEN WHITE, Editorial, Emporia Gazette.

15 Alma mater. (Bounteous, or fostering, mother.)

A name given by the Romans to Ceres and Cybele, and applied in England and America to universities in their relation to their students.

A stony-hearted step-mother.

MILTON, referring to the university. (BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta. Ser. ii.) De Quincey (Confessions of an English Opium Eater. Pt. i) uses the same phrase with reference to Oxford Street, London.

UNKINDNESS

We have searched the centuries through,
In flaming pride, we have fought and died,
To keep its memory true.

We fight and die, but our hopes beat high,
In spite of the toil and tears,
For we catch the gleam of our vanished dream
Down the path of the Untrod Years.

WILMA KATE MCFARLAND, The Untrod Years.

O canny sons of Jacob, to fret and toiling tied,
We grudge you not the birthright for which your father lied;

We own the right of roaming, and the world is

VALENTINE

5 How different from our dreary fashion
Of playing little games with passion,
The flippant and ironic mode
Of using love as episode,
Of chinning to the fourteenth line
To make a trivial valentine.

JOSEPH AUSLANDER, Letter to Emily Dickinson.

6 For this was on St. Valentine's day,
When every fowl cometh there to choose his mate.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 309.

When you hear the birds call for their mates,
Ask if it be St. Valentine, their coupling day.

BAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Thierry and Theo-doret. Act iii, sc. 1.

Saint Valentine is past;
Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 143.

Upon Friday is Saint Valentine's Day, and every bird chooseth him a mate.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters, iii, 169.

7 Muse, bid the Morn awake!
Sad Winter now declines,

Each bird doth choose a mate;
This day's Saint Valentine's.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, To His Valentine.

8 Last Valentine, the day when birds of kind
Their paramours with mutual chirpings find.

JOHN GAY, Shepherd's Week: Thursday, l. 37.

9 Oft have I heard both youths and virgins say, Birds choose their mates, and couple too, this
day:

But by their flight I never can devine
When I shall couple with my Valentine.

ROBERT HERRICK, To His Valentine.

10 Oh, if it be to choose and call thee mine,
Love, thou art every day my Valentine!

THOMAS HOOD, For the Fourteenth of February.

11 Hail to thy returning festival, old Bishop Valentine! Great is thy name in the rubric, thou venerable Archflamen of Hymen! Immortal Go-between; who and what manner of person art thou? Art thou but a name, typifying the restless principle which impels poor humans to seek perfection in union? or wert thou indeed a mortal prelate, with thy tippet and thy rochet, thy apron on, and decent lawn sleeves? Mysterious personage!
like unto thee, assuredly, there is no other mitred father in the calendar.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Valentine's
Day*.

Thou comest attended with thousands and ten thousands of little Loves. . . . Singing Cupids are thy choristers and thy precentors; and instead of the crosier, the mystical arrow is borne before
thee.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Valentine's
Day*.

This is the day on which those charming little missives, ycleped Valentines, cross and inter-cross each other at every street and turning. The weary and all forespent twopenny postman sinks beneath a load of delicate embarrassments, not his own. . . . In these little visual interpretations, no emblem is so common as the heart—that little three-cornered exponent of all our hopes and fears,—the bestuck and bleeding heart.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Valentine's
Day*.

Good-morrow to my Valentine, sings poor Opelia, and no better wish, but with better auspices, we wish to all faithful lovers, who are not too wise to despise old legends, but are content to rank themselves humble diocesans of old Bishop
Valentine and his true church.

CHARLES LAMB, *Essays of Elia: Valentine's
Day*.

12 Called out in the morning by Mr. Moore, whose voice my wife hearing in my dressing-chamber with me, got herself ready, and came down and challenged him for her valentine.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 14 Feb., 1660. It was a common practice in England to choose a sweetheart or special friend for the ensuing year, on St. Valentine's day, and the lady in the case of course expected a gift. (See Paston Letters, ii, 24.)

Here Mrs. The. shewed me my name upon her breast as her Valentine, which will cost me 20s.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 3 March, 1663.

By and by comes Mrs. Pierce, with my name in her bosom for her Valentine, which will cost me money.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 15 Feb., 1666.

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime.

And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 48.

The rose is red, the violet's blue,
Pinks are sweet, and so are you.

UNKNOWN, A Rhyme for St. Valentine's Day.

The American version is usually, "Sugar is sweet, and so are you."

VALOR

See also Courage

Immod'rate valour swells into a fault.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 1.

Valour's a mouse-trap, wit a gin,
Which women oft are taken in.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 391.

He that is valiant, and dares fight,
Though drubbed, can lose no honour by 't.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 1041.

Never had valour, no not ours, before
Done aught like this upon the land or main:
Where not to be o'ercome was to do more
Than all the conquests former kings did gain.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 80.

Valor consists in the power of self-recovery.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

'Tis still observed those men most valiant are
Who are most modest ere they came to war.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.
Quoted.

Wherever valour true is found,
True modesty will there abound.

W. S. GILBERT, Yeomen of the Guard. Act i.

Our valours are our best gods.

JOHN FLETCHER, Bonduca.

A sad wise valour is the brave complexion,
That leads the van, and swallows up the cities.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 42.

Valour that parleys is near yielding.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

All honor to you in your valor, as says the godlike phrase of Cato. (Macte Virtute esto, inquit sententia diva Catonis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 2, l. 31.

Fear to do base unworthy things, is valour;
If they be done to us, to suffer them
Is valour too.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3.

I never thought an angry person valiant. . . .

No man is valiant by being angry,
But he that could not valiant be without.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3.

That valour lies in the eyes o' the lookers on,
And is called valour with a witness.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3.

The things true valour's exercised about
Are poverty, restraint, captivity,
Banishment, loss of children, long disease:
The least is death. . . . So a mind affecting
Or undertaking dangers for ambition, . . .
Deserves the name of daring, not of valour.
And over-daring is as great a vice
As over-fearing.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3.

A valiant man

Ought not to undergo, or tempt a danger,
But worthily, and by selected ways:
He undertakes with reason, not by chance.
His valour is the salt of his other virtues,
They are all unseasoned without it.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3.

Rivalry in valor spurred them on. (Stimulus dedit æmula virtus.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 120.

More childish valorous than manly wise.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Tamburlaine. Pt. i,
act iv, sc. 1.

Instead of rage
Deliberate valour breath'd, firm and unmov'd
With dread of death to flight or foul retreat.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 553.

No thought of flight,
None of retreat, no unbecoming deed
That argued fear; each on himself relied,
As only in his arm the moment lay
Of victory.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 236.

In vain doth valour bleed
While Avarice and Rapine share the land.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Lord General Fairfax.

Valor has its limits, like the other virtues.
(La vaillance a ses limites, comme les autres vertus.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 14.

You will find many men most unjust, most impious, most intemperate, and most ignorant, yet extremely valorous.

PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 349.

Valour, destitute of other virtues, cannot render a man worthy of any true esteem. . . . A man may be very valiant, and yet impious and vicious.

DRYDEN, Æneid: Dedication.

Valour grows by daring, fear by holding back. (Audendo virtus crescit, tardando timor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 43.

Mindful of the valor of former days. (Pristinæ virtutis memores.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 60, sec. 3.

When Prussia hurried to the field, And snatch'd the spear, but left the shield!

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto iii, Introduction, l. 63.

Then rush'd to meet the insulting foe:

They took the spear, but left the shield.

PHILIP FRENEAU, To the Memory of the Brave Americans Who Fell at Eutaw Springs.

When valour preys on reason,
It eats the sword it fights with.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 13, l. 199.

He that loves himself
Hath not essentially but by circumstance
The name of valour.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 38.

What valour were it, when a cur doth grin,
For one to thrust his hand between his teeth,
When he might spurn him with his foot
away?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 56.

He 's truly valiant that can suffer wisely
The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs

His outsides, to wear them like his raiment, carelessly;

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart
To bring it into danger.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 31.

Virtue is of so little regard in these coster-monger times that true valour is turned bear-herd.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 191.

My valour is certainly going!—it is sneaking off!—I feel it oozing out, as it were, at the palms of my hands.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act v, sc. 3.

Valor, gradually overpowered by the delicious poison of sloth, grows torpid. (Blandoque veneno Desidiæ virtus paullatim evicta senescit.)

SILIUS ITALICUS, Punica. Bk. iii, l. 580.

In valor there is hope. (Spes in virtute.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 20.

Valor is of no service, chance rules all, and the bravest often fall by the hands of cowards. (Nihil prodesse virtus, fors cuncta turbare, et ignavorum sæpe telis fortissimi cadere.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 29.

Sometimes valor returns even to the hearts of the conquered. (Quondam etiam victis redit in præcordia virtus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 367.

Now, Æneas, there is need of valor, and of a stout heart. (Nunc animis opus, Ænea, nunc pectore firmo.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 261.

The valiant to the valiant, the wise to the wise.
(ἄλκιμοι ἀλκίοντα, σοφοὶ σοφόν.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram on the Statue of an Athlete in the Hippodrome at Constantinople.

I—Vanity: Definitions

In heaven I yearn for knowledge, account all else inanity;

On earth I confess an itch for the praise of fools—that's vanity.

ROBERT BROWNING, Solomon and Balkis.

The sixth insatiable sense.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 2,
ch. 2. Quoting a proverb referring to vanity.

Vanity is the more odious and shocking to everybody, because everybody, without exception, has vanity; and two vanities can never love one another.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 14 Jan., 1766.

Vanity finds in self-love so powerful an ally that it storms, as it were by a coup de main, the citadel of our heads, where, having blinded the two watchmen, it readily descends into the heart.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

Vanity is the mother, and affectation is the darling daughter; vanity is the sin, and affectionation is the punishment; the first may be called the root of self-love, the other the fruit.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 38.

Vainglory's a worm which the very best action

Will taint, and its soundness eat through.

CHARLES AND MARY LAMB, Charity.

1 Triumph, that insulting vanity.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 138.

For men, with Roman pride, above
The conquest, do the triumph love:
Nor think a perfect victory gained,
Unless they through the streets their captive lead enchained.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dialogue.

2 Cruelty was the vice of the ancient, vanity is that of the modern world. Vanity is the last disease.

GEORGE MOORE, Impressions: Mummer-Worship.

3 We do not content ourselves with the life we have in ourselves; we desire to live an imaginary life in the minds of others, and for this purpose we endeavor to shine.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 147.

4 Verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxix, 5.

Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter than vanity.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxii, 9.

5 Vanity is the pride of Nature.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

6 The highest form of vanity is love of fame.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 22.

The meaning of the word vanity never crosses the vulgar heart.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 82.

7 It is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 8.

8 Vanity the puppet's part.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 39.

9 Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming means, soon preys upon itself.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 38.

10 Vanity bids all her sons be generous and brave, and her daughters chaste and courteous.

LAURENCE STERNE, Sermons. No. 17.

11 To be vain is rather a mark of humility than pride. . . . Whoever desires the character of a proud man ought to conceal his vanity.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Works. Vol. iii, p. 405.

II—Vanity: Apothegms

12 Pampered vanity is a better thing perhaps than starved pride.

JOANNA BAILLIE, The Election. Act ii, sc. 2.

13 It pleasures him to stoop for buttercups.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 212.

14 And the name of that town is Vanity; and at the town there is a fair kept, called Vanity Fair.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

It beareth the name of Vanity Fair, because the town where 'tis kept is "lighter than vanity."

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. Bunyan is quoting Psalm lxii, 9.

There is a great quantity of eating and drinking, making love and jilting, laughing and the contrary, smoking, cheating, fighting, dancing and fiddling; there are bullies pushing about, bucks ogling the women, knaves picking pockets. . . .
Yes, this is Vanity Fair; not a moral place certainly; nor a merry one, though very noisy.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair: Before the Curtain.
(1848)

15 There is no living in the world without a complaisant indulgence for people's weaknesses, and innocent, though ridiculous, vanities.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

You will easily discover every man's prevailing vanity by observing his favourite topic of conversation; for every man talks most of that which he has most a mind to be thought to excel in.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

16 It is not to be imagined in how many ways vanity defeats its own purpose.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 May, 1750.

17 Vanity, like murder, will out.

HANNAH COWLEY, The Belle's Stratagem. Act
i, sc. 4.

18 What dotage will not vanity maintain?

What web too weak to catch a modern brain?

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 628.

19 Vain men will speak well of him that does ill.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Letter to Richard Mayor,
July, 1651.

20 He that loveth silver shall not be satisfied with silver; nor he that loveth abundance with increase: this is also vanity.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 10.

21 Vanity is as ill at ease under indifference as tenderness is under a love which it cannot return.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. i, ch. 10.

22 Everybody hath not wit enough to act out of interest, but everybody hath little enough to do it out of vanity.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 241.

23 The vain man makes a merit of misfortune, and triumphs in his disgrace.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 113.

1 An ounce of vanity spoils a hundred weight of merit.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 467.

5 No vain man matures, he makes too much new wood;
His blooms are too thick for the fruit to be good;

'Tis the modest man ripens, 'tis he that achieves,
Just what's needed of sunshine and shade he receives.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 978.

6 And not a vanity is given in vain.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 290.

7 Ignobly vain and impotently great.
POPE, Prologue to Addison's Cato, l. 29.

8 Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity . . .
That is not quickly buzz'd into his ears?
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 24.

Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way!
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 137.

9 Vanity dies hard; in some obstinate cases it outlives the man.

R. L. STEVENSON, Prince Otto.

10 Life without vanity is almost impossible.
LEO TOLSTOY, The Kreutzer Sonata. Ch. 23.

Let us thank God for imparting to us poor weak mortals the inestimable blessing of vanity.
THACKERAY, The Artists.

11 He had only one vanity; he thought he could give advice better than any other person.
MARK TWAIN, The Man that Corrupted Hadleyburg. Ch. 1.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 420.

III—Vanity: Vanity of Vanities

14 Vanity of vanities; all is vanity.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 2; xii, 8. (Vanitas vanitatum et omnis vanitas.—Vulgate.)

All is vanity and vexation of spirit.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 14.

The pomps and vanity of this wicked world.
Book of Common Prayer: Catechism.

15 Ecclesiastes said that "all is vanity"—
Most modern preachers say the same, or show it

By their examples of true Christianity;
In short, all know, or very soon may know it.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 6.

16 At all times, but especially now, it is pertinent to say, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity."

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Vanity of Vanities. Vol. ii, p. 381.

17 "Vanitas vanitatum" has rung in the ears
Of gentle and simple for thousands of years;
The wail still is heard, yet its notes never scare

Either simple or gentle from Vanity Fair.
FREDERICK LOCKER-LAMPSON, Vanity Fair.

18 And the grasshopper
Shall be a burden, and desire shall fail,
Because man goeth unto his long home.
Vanity of Vanities, saith the Preacher; all
Is vanity.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. iii, sc. 2.

19 Oh, Vanity of Vanities!
How wayward the decrees of Fate are;
How very weak the very wise,
How very small the very great are!

THACKERAY, Vanitas Vanitatum.

IV—Vanity: In Women

20 And by my grave you'd pray to have me back

So I could see how well you looked in black.
MARCO CARSON, To Any Woman.

21 Feminine vanity; that divine gift which makes woman charming.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 8.

22 Vanity ruins more women than love.
MADAME DU DEFFAND, Letter to Voltaire.

23 Why does the blind man's wife paint herself?
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

1
How many saucy airs we meet,
From Temple Bar to Aldgate Street!
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Barley-Mow and the Dunghill, l. 1.

2
Vain? Let it be so! Nature was her teacher.
What if a lovely and unsistered creature
Loved her own harmless gift of pleasing feature?
O. W. HOLMES, Iris, Her Book.

3
"Odious! in woollen! 't would a saint provoke"

(Were the last words that poor Narcissa spoke);

"No, let a charming chintz and Brussels lace
Wrap my cold limbs, and shade my lifeless face:

One would not, sure, be frightful when one's dead—

And—Betty—give this cheek a little red."

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 245. Narcissa was Mrs. Oldfield, the actress.

Here files of pins extend their shining rows,
Puffs, powders, patches, bibles, billet-doux.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i, l. 137.

4
There was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 36.

5
Call in your black man, and titivate a bit.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 48. To spruce up, complete the toilette. Arnold Bennett was fond of the word.

6
She keeps on being queenly in her own room with the door shut.

EDITH WHARTON, The House of Mirth, p. 302.

VARIETY

7
Nothing is pleasant unless spiced with variety. (Jucundum nihil est, nisi quod reficit varietas.)

FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 19.

Variety's the very spice of life,
That gives it all its flavour.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 606.

8
Variety is the soul of pleasure.

APERA BEHN, The Rover. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

Enchanting spirit, dear Variety!

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Spring, l. 290.

Variety, which all the rest endears.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill, l. 228.

Variety is the mother of Enjoyment.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 4.

9
Variety is sweet in all things, (Μεταβολή πάντων γλυκύ.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 234,

10
Variety's the source of joy below,
From whence still fresh-revolving pleasures flow.

JOHN GAY, Epistles: To Bernard Lintot.

The great source of pleasure is variety.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Butler.

Variety alone gives joy;

The sweetest meats the soonest cloy.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Turtle and Sparrow, l. 234.

11
To make Uniformity amidst Variety the occasion of pleasure.

FRANCIS HUTCHESON THE ELDER, Inquiry into the Original of Our Ideas of Beauty. Treatise ii, sec. 8.

For variety of mere nothings gives more pleasure than uniformity of something. (Weil Verschiedenheit des Nichts mehr ergötzt, als Einerleiheit des Etwas.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Levana. Frag. 5.

12
Variety, that is my motto. (Diversité, c'est ma devise.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Paté d'Anguille.

13
To sing the same tune, as the saying is, is in everything cloying and offensive; but men are generally pleased with variety.

PLUTARCH, Of the Training of Children.

14
No pleasure endures unseasoned by variety. (Jucundum nil est, nisi quod reficit varietas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 406.

When our old Pleasures die,

Some new One still is nigh;

Oh! fair Variety!

NICHOLAS ROWE, Ode for the New Year.

15
They are the weakest-minded and the hardest hearted men, that most love variety and change.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. ii, pt. ii, ch. 6, sec. 7.

16
Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed; but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 240.

VENICE

17
The gods returned to earth when Venice broke

Like Venus from the dawn-encircled sea.

Wide laughed the skies with light when Venice woke Crowned of antiquity.

WILLIAM ROSE BENÉT, Gaspara Stampa.

18
I stood in Venice, on the Bridge of Sighs,

A palace and a prison on each hand;
I saw from out the wave her structures rise
As from the stroke of the enchanter's wand:
A thousand years their cloudy wings expand
Around me, and a dying Glory smiles
O'er the far times, when many a subject land
Look'd to the winged Lion's marble piles,
Where Venice sate in state, throned on her hundred isles!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 1.

She looks a sea Cybele, fresh from ocean,
Rising with her tiara of proud towers
At airy distance, with majestic motion,
A ruler of the waters and their powers.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 2.

In Venice Tasso's echoes are no more,
And silent rows the songless gondolier;
Her palaces are crumbling to the shore,
And music meets not always now the ear;
Those days are gone, but Beauty still is here;
States fall, arts fade, but Nature doth not die,
Nor yet forget how Venice once was dear,
The pleasant place of all festivity,
The revel of the earth, the masque of Italy!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 3.

O happy streets! to rumbling wheels unknown,
No carts, no coaches, shake the floating town!

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 99.

White swan of cities, slumbering in thy nest
So wonderfully built among the reeds
Of the lagoon, that fences thee and feeds,
As sayeth thy old historian and thy guest!
LONGFELLOW, Venice.

Be thou perpetual! (Esto perpetua!)
PIETRO SARPI, Dying Apostrophe to Venice, 15
Jan., 1623.

Many a time and oft
In the Rialto you have rated me.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 3, l. 108.

Once did She hold the gorgeous east in fee;
And was the safeguard of the west: the worth
Of Venice did not fall below her birth,
Venice, the eldest Child of Liberty.
She was a maiden City, bright and free;
No guile seduced, no force could violate;
And, when she took unto herself a Mate,
She must espouse the everlasting Sea. . . .
Men are we, and must grieve when even the Shade
Of that which once was great is passed away.
WORDSWORTH, On the Extinction of the Venetian Republic.

VENUS

Is Venus odious to brides? Or do they mock the joy of their parents with false tears?

(Estne novis nuptis odio Venus atque paren-tum Frustrantur falsis gaudia lacrimulis?)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. lxiv, l. 15.

Venus will not charm so much without her attendant Graces, as they will without her.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Nov., 1748.

Wot's the good o' callin' a young 'ooman a Wenus or a angel, Sammy?

CHARLES DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 33.

Creator Venus, genial pow'r of Love,
The bliss of men below, and gods above,
Beneath the sliding sun thou runn'st thy race,

Dost fairest shine, and best become thy place.
For thee the winds their eastern blasts for-
bear,

Thy month reveals the spring, and opens all the year.

Thee, Goddess, thee the storms of winter fly,
Earth smiles with flow'rs renewing; laughs
the sky.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. iii, l. 129.

Venus, thy eternal sway
All the race of men obey.

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia at Aulis, l. 545.

Venus . . . that made herself as common as a barber's chair.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, 66. (1579)

Venus, a notorious strumpet, as common as a barber's chair.

1 Venus smiles not in a house of tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act. iv, sc. 1, l. 8.

2 Lo, this is she that was the world's delight;
The old grey years were parcels of her might;
The strewings of the ways wherein she trod
Were the twain seasons of the day and night.

SWINBURNE, Laus Veneris. St. 3.

Lo, she was thus when her clear limbs enticed
All lips that now grow sad with kissing Christ.

SWINBURNE, Laus Veneris. St. 4.

Behold, my Venus, my soul's body, lies
With my love laid upon her garment-wise,
Feeling my love in all her limbs and hair
And shed between her eyelids through her eyes.

SWINBURNE, Laus Veneris. St. 8.

3 We make a ladder of our vices, if we trample those same vices underfoot. (De vitiis nostris scalam nobis facimus, si vitia ipsa calcamus.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Sermons: De Ascensione.

Saint Augustine! well hast thou said,
That of our vices we can frame
A ladder, if we will but tread
Beneath our feet each deed of shame!

LONGFELLOW, The Ladder of St. Augustine.

I hold it truth, with him who sings
To one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping-stones
Of their dead selves to higher things.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. i, st. 1. The reference is to Goethe.

It may be stated, on the highest authority, that the special passage alluded to cannot be identified, but it is Goethe's creed.

VICTORIA, QUEEN

12 'Ave you 'eard o' the Widow at Windsor
With a hairy gold crown on 'er 'ead?
She 'as ships on the foam—she 'as millions at 'ome,

An' she pays us poor beggars in red.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Widow at Windsor.

Walk wide o' the Widow at Windsor,

For 'alf o' Creation she owns:

We 'ave bought 'er the same with the sword an' the flame,

An' we've salted it down with our bones.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Widow at Windsor.

13 An oval, placid woman who assuaged men's lives;

Her comely hands wrought forth a century
Of oval, placid women who engaged, as wives,
In broderies and tea.

RUTH MASON RICE, Victoria.

14 Her court was pure; her life serene;

God gave her peace; her land reposed;

A thousand claims to reverence closed

In her as Mother, Wife, and Queen.

TENNYSON, To the Queen. St. 7.

An age wanting in moral grandeur and spiritual health.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Sohrab and Rustum: Preface.

Blessed period of peace and prosperity, port and progeny and domesticity in excelsis from Buckingham Palace to Bloomsbury Square and brand-new Bayswater. Despite its limitations, it was a good, solid, happy time of English life at its best.

S. M. ELLIS, Mainly Victorian. Referring to the Victorian era.

Westminster Abbey, or Victory.

ADMIRAL HORATIO NELSON, at the battle off Cape St. Vincent. (SOUTHEY, Life of Nelson. Vol. i, ch. 4.)

<sup>15</sup> Beware of rashness, but with energy and sleepless vigilance go forward and give us victories.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter to Major-General Joseph Hooker, 25 Jan., 1863.

<sup>16</sup> The victorious cause pleased the gods, but the victory pleased Cato. (Victrix causa Diis placuit, sed victa Catoni.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civilis. Bk. i, l. 118.

<sup>17</sup> Be ashamed to die until you have won some victory for humanity.

HORACE MANN, Commencement Address, Antioch College, 1859. This was the concluding sentence of his last commencement address. He died a few weeks later. (Dictionary of American Biog., xii, 243.)

<sup>18</sup> Odds blood, hammer and tongs, long as I've been to sea,

I've fought 'gainst every odds—but I've gained the victory.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The Captain Stood on the Carronade.

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1317. (Act v, sc. 2.) A proverbial saying since the day (c. 390 B. C.) when Brennus, leader of the Gauls, entered Rome, and consented to depart upon payment of 2000 talents, but when reproached with deceit, threw his sword into the scale with the cry of, "Væ victis!"

Woe to the conquer'ng, not the conquer'd host.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 25.

<sup>1</sup> Many a victory has been and will be suicidal to the victors.

PLATO, Laws. Sec. 641.

<sup>7</sup> Brings a victory in his pocket.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 135.

<sup>8</sup> To whom God will, there be the victory!

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 15.

Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are graced with wreaths of victory.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 1.

She shall give the day,
And kiss him with a glorious victory.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 294.

<sup>9</sup> Open your gates and give the victors way.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 324.

A victory is twice itself when the achiever brings home full numbers.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 8.

<sup>10</sup> "But what good came of it at last?"
Quoth little Peterkin.

"Why that I cannot tell," said he:
"But 't was a famous victory."

<sup>12</sup> As victory is silent, so is defeat.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 1.

<sup>13</sup> Not one of all the purple host
Who took the flag to-day

Can tell the definition
So clear, of victory,

As he, defeated, dying,
On whose forbidden ear

The distant strains of triumph
Break, agonized and clear.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 1.

<sup>14</sup> The greatest victory is defeat.

HENRIK IBSEN, Brand. Act iii.

Victory and defeat are each of the same price.

THOMAS JEFFERSON.

<sup>15</sup> Shout "Victory, victory, victory ho!"

I say, 'tis not always with the hosts that win!

I say that the victory, high or low,
Is given the hero who grapples with sin,

Or legion or single; just asking to know
When duty fronts death in his Alamo.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Defense of the Alamo.

The ground they gained; but we
The victory.

GEORGE H. CALVERT, Bunker Hill.

<sup>16</sup> There are some defeats more triumphant than victories.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 32.

<sup>17</sup> Why, victor, dost thou exult? This victory will be your ruin. (Quid, victor, gaudes? Hæc te victoria perdet.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 811.

<sup>18</sup> Speak, History! who are Life's victors? Un-roll thy long annals and say,

Are they those whom the world called the victors,—who won the success of a day?

The martyrs, or Nero? The Spartans, who fell at Thermopylæ's tryst,

Or the Persians and Xerxes? His judges, or Socrates? Pilate, or Christ?

WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, Io Victis.

They only the victory win
Who have fought the good fight and have vanquished the demon that tempts us within;

Who have held to their faith unseduced by the prize that the world holds on high;

Who have dared for a high cause to suffer, resist,
fight—if need be, to die.

WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, Io Victis.

alition can never succeed. (Victores victosque numquam solida fide coalescere.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. ii, sec. 7.

Victor from vanquish'd issues at the last,
And overthrower from being overthrown.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 1230.

1
O vanquisher, whosoever thou art, not long shalt thou exult, nor shall I be unavenged;
thee also a like fate awaits. (Non me, quicumque es, inulto Victor, nec longum lætābere: te quoque fata Prospectant paria.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 739.

Nothing except a battle lost can be half so melancholy as a battle won.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Despatch, 1815.

Madam, there is nothing so dreadful as a great victory—excepting a great defeat.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Remark, to a lady expressing passionate wish to see a great victory. Wellington borrowed it from D'Argenson. (See Grimm's Mémoires.)

dreamt of. (Hay mas mal en el aldegüela que se suena.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 46.

4
The villager, born humbly and bred hard,
Content his wealth, and poverty his guard.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. iii, l. 117.

5
If you would be known, and not know, vegetate in a village; if you would know, and not be known, live in a city.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 334.

6
Sweet Auburn! loveliest village of the plain,
Where health and plenty cheer'd the labouring swain,
Where smiling spring its earliest visit paid,
And parting summer's lingering blooms delay'd.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 1.

How often have I loiter'd o'er thy green,
Where humble happiness endear'd each scene;
How often have I paus'd on every charm,
The shelter'd cot, the cultivated farm,
The never-failing brook, the busy mill,
The decent church that topp'd the neighbouring hill,

The hawthorn bush, with seats beneath the shade,
For talking age and whisp'ring lovers made!

II—Villainy

6 Where villainy goes before, vengeance follows after.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5861.

And though the villain 'scape awhile, he feels
Slow vengeance, like a bloodhound at his heels.

SWIFT, Imitations of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 21.

7 Villainy was an object of wonder in that age.
(Improbis illo fuit admirabilis ævo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 53.

8 Ah, this thou should'st have done,
And not have spoke on 't! In me 't is villainy;
In thee, 't had been good service.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 79.

O villainy! Ho! let the door be lock'd:
Treachery! Seek it out.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 322.

The villainy you teach me, I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 74.

9 There 's nothing level in our cursed natures,
But direct villainy.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 19.

VIOLET

10 Deep violets, you liken to
The kindest eyes that look on you,
Without a thought disloyal.

E. B. BROWNING, A Flower in a Letter. St. 4.

11 Again the violet of our early days
Drinks beauteous azure from the golden sun,
And kindles into fragrance at his blaze.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Spring.

12 Cold blows the wind against the hill,
And cold upon the plain;

I sit me by the bank, until
The violets come again.

RICHARD GARNETT, Violets.

13 Welcome, maids of honour,
You do bring

In the Spring,
And wait upon her.

She has virgins many,
Fresh and fair;
Yet you are

More sweet than any
ROBERT HERRICK, To Violets.

14 Those veiled nuns, meek violets.

THOMAS HOOD, The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies, l. 318.

The violet is a nun.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers, l. 6.

15 Love dropp'd eyelids and a kiss,—
Such our breath and blueness is.

LEIGH HUNT, Violets.

16 Violets!—deep-blue violets!
April's loveliest coronets!

There are no flowers grow in the vale,
Kissed by the dew, wooed by the gale,—
None by the dew of the twilight wet,
So sweet as the deep-blue violet.

LETTITIA ELIZABETH LONDON, The Violet.

17 The violet of an unforgetten hour.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Adoration.

18 Violet! sweet violet!
Thine eyes are full of tears;

Are they wet
Even yet

With the thought of other years?
Or with gladness are they full,
For the night so beautiful?

J. R. LOWELL, Song.

Winds wander, and dews drip earthward;
Rain falls, suns rise and set,
Earth whirls, and all but to prosper
A poor little violet.

J. R. LOWELL, The Changeling. St. 6.

19 The violets were past their prime,
Yet their departing breath
Was sweeter, in the blast of death,
Than all the lavish fragrance of the time.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Adventure of a Star, l. 37.

1 Shrinking as violets do in summer's ray.
 THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet of Khorassan, l. 294.

2 The violet thinks, with her timid blue eye,
 To pass for a blossom enchantingly shy.
 FRANCES S. OSGOOD, Garden Gossip.

3 You are brief, and frail, and blue—
 Little sisters, I am, too.
 You are heaven's masterpieces—
 Little loves, the likeness ceases.
 DOROTHY PARKER, Sweet Violets.

4 You pretty daughters of the Earth and Sun.
 SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Shepherd to the Flowers.

5 A violet in the youth of primy nature,
 Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
 The perfume and suppliance of a minute.
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 7.

Lay her i' the earth:
 And from her fair and unpolluted flesh,
 May violets spring!
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 261.

And from his ashes may be made
 The violet of his native land.
 TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. xviii, st. 1.

7 Who are the violets now
 That strew the green lap of the new come spring?
 SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 2, l. 46.

8 Violets dim,
 But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
 Or Cytherea's breath.
 SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 120.

9 Oh! faint delicious spring-tide violet,
 Thine odor like a key,
 Turns noiselessly in memory's wards to let
 A thought of sorrow free.
 W. W. STORY, The Violet.

The smell of violets, hidden in the green,
 Pour'd back into my empty soul and frame
 The times when I remember to have been Joyful and free from blame.
 TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women. St. 20.

10 In this secluded shrine,
 O miracle of grace,
 No mortal eye but mine
 Hath looked upon thy face. . . .

Whereof—as shade to shade
 Is wedded in the sun—
 A moment's glance hath made
 Our souls forever one.
 JOHN BANISTER TABB, To a Wood-Violet.

11 Then let me to the valley go,
 This pretty flower to see,

That I may also learn to grow
 In sweet humility.
 JANE TAYLOR, The Violet.

12 Banks that slope to the southern sky,
 Where languid violets love to lie.
 SARAH H. WHITMAN, Wood Walks in Spring.

13 A violet, by a mossy stone
 Half hidden from the eye!
 Fair as a star, when only one
 Is shining in the sky.
 WORDSWORTH, She Dwelt Among the Untrod-den Ways.

I—Virtue: Definitions

18 Virtue and sense are one.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
 Bk. iv, l. 265.

One's outlook is a part of his virtue.
 AMOS BRONSON ALCOTT, Concord Days: April Outlook.

19 Virtue is like a rich stone, best plain set.
 FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty.

Virtue, being a transcendent gem, is better set without much gold and ornament.
 FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum.
 Pt. i, bk. 6.

Virtue is like precious odours,—most fragrant when they are incensed, or crushed.
 FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversity.

See also under ADVERSITY.

20 As in nature things move violently to their place, and calmly in their place, so virtue in ambition is violent, in authority settled and calm.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

1 Virtue has always been conceived of as victorious resistance to one's vital desire to do this, that or the other.

JAMES BRANCH CABELL, Beyond Life, p. 114.

2 In our dispositions the seeds of the virtues are implanted by nature. (Sunt enim ingeniis nostris semina innata virtutum.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

Does wisdom beget virtue, or is it a gift of Nature? (Virtutem doctrina paret Naturae donet?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 100.

Although virtue receives some of its excellencies from nature, yet it is perfected by education. (Virtus, etiamsi quosdam impetus a natura sumit, tamen perficienda doctrina est.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. xii, ch. 2, sec. 1.

3 Virtue is a habit of the mind, consistent with nature and moderation and reason.

CICERO, De Inventione Rhetorica. Bk. ii, sec. 53.

4 Is virtue a thing remote? I wish to be virtuous, and lo! virtue is at hand.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. i, ch. 4.

5 We fancy it rhetoric when we speak of eminent virtue. We do not yet see that virtue is Height.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Virtue is the adherence in action to the nature of things, and the nature of things makes it prevalent. It consists in a perpetual substitution of being for seeming, and with sublime propriety God is described as saying, I AM.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

6 Virtue is a mean between vices, remote from both extremes. (Virtus est medium vitiorum et utrumque reductum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 9.

7 Can you suppose that virtue consists of words merely? (Virtutem verba putas?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 31.

Virtue's but a word; Fortune rules all.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act iv, sc. 1.

8 Virtue is often merely local.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 53.

So much are the modes of excellence settled by time and place, that men may be heard boasting in one street of that which they would anxiously conceal in another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 201.

9 Wisdom is knowing what to do next; virtue is doing it.

DAVID STARR JORDAN, The Philosophy of Despair, p. 37.

10 Virtue is the health of the soul. It gives a flavor to the smallest leaves of life. (La vertu est la santé de l'âme. Elle fait trouver de la saveur aux moindres feuilles de la vie.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 131.

Virtue is to the soul what health is to the body. (La sagesse est à l'âme ce que la santé est pour le corps.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 541.

11 Virtue is an angel, but she is a blind one, and must ask of Knowledge to show her the pathway that leads to her goal.

HORACE MANN, A Few Thoughts for a Young Man.

12 Virtue is the fount whence honour springs.

MARLOWE, Tamburlaine. Pt. i, act v, sc. 2.

13 Virtue is harmony. (Τὴν τ' ἀρετὴν ἀρμονίαν.)

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 33.)

14 Virtue is beauty; but the beautiful evil Are empty trunks o'erflourish'd by the devil.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 403.

15 Virtue consists, not in abstaining from vice, but in not desiring it.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

16 Virtue, the greatest of all monarchies.

SWIFT, To the Hon. Sir William Temple.

17 What, what is virtue, but repose of mind? A pure ethereal calm that knows no storm, Above the reach of wild ambition's wind, Above those passions that this world deform.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 16.

18 Virtue's a stronger guard than brass.

EDMUND WALLER, Epigram Upon the Golden Medal, l. 14.

II—Virtue: Apothegms

19 It is not enough merely to possess virtue, as if it were an art; it should be practised. (Nec vero habere virtutem satis est, quasi artem aliquam, nisi utare.)

CICERO, De Republica. Ch. i, sec. 2.

Virtue is not left to stand alone. He who practices it will have neighbors.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 25.

Virtue, if not in action, is a vice; And when we move not forward, we go backward.

MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act i, sc. 1.

I cannot praise a fugitive and cloistered virtue, unexercised and unbreathed, that never sallies out and sees her adversary, but slinks out of the race where that immortal garland is to be run for, not without dust and heat.

MILTON, Areopagitica.

It is the stain and disgrace of the age to envy virtue. (Est hæc sæculi labes quædam et macula virtuti invidere.)

CICERO, Pro L. Cornelio Balbo. Sec. 6.

A man that hath no virtue in himself, ever envieth virtue in others.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Envy.

Virtue when concealed hath no value. (Vile latens virtus.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatui Honorii Augusti, l. 222.

Is it a world to hide virtues in?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 140.

Ye were not formed to live the life of brutes, But virtue to pursue, and knowledge high. (Fatti non foste a viver come bruti, Ma per seguir virtute e conoscenza.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvi, l. 119.

The highest virtue is always against the law.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

All the devils respect virtue.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

Hast thou virtue? acquire also the graces and beauties of virtue.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

Sell not virtue to purchase wealth, nor liberty to purchase power.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

The greatest offence against virtue is to speak ill of it.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On Cant.

Virtue best loves those children that she beats.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 822.

We hate Virtue while it lives, and mourn it only when it is snatched from sight. (Virtutem incolumem odimus, Sublatam ex oculis quærimus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode xxiv, l. 31.

Friendly to Virtue alone and to its friends. (Uni æquus Virtuti atque ejus amicis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 70.

Where does virtue go to lodge? (Où la vertu va-t-elle se nicher?)

MOLIÈRE, Remark, when shown the cots in a prison.

No way is barred to virtue. (Invia virtuti nulla est via.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiv, l. 113.

Nature has placed nothing so high that virtue can not reach it. (Nihil tam alte natura constituit quo virtus non possit eniti.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. vii, ch. 11, sec. 10.

The virtue which lies hidden unrecognized in times of prosperity, asserts itself in adversity. (Quæ latet inque bonis cessat non cognita rebus, Apparet virtus arguiturque malis.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 3, l. 79. See also PROSPERITY AND ADVERSITY.

Let them [the wicked] look on virtue and pine away because they have lost her. (Virtutem videant intabescantque relictæ.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 38.

Virtue, if she could be seen, would win great love and affection.

PLATO. (BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.)

Conquer by means of virtue. (Vincite Virtute vera.)

PLAUTUS, Casina: Prologue, l. 87.

Virtue, like a strong and hardy plant, takes root in any place, if she finds there a generous nature and a spirit that shuns no labor.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Sec. 1.

To virtue no way ever happens ill.

FRANCIS ROUS, Thule.

Assume a virtue, if you have it not.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 160.

Virtue may be gay, yet with dignity. (Hilarisque tamen cum pondere virtus.)

STATIUS, Sylvarum. Bk. ii, sec. 3, l. 65.

Stay, Worldling, stay; whither away so fast? Hark, hark awhile to Virtue's counsels current!

JOSHUA SYLVESTER, Spectacles.

Learn virtue and true labor from me, O youth; fortune from others. (Disce, puer, virtutem ex me, verumque laborum; Fortunam ex aliis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 435.

Virtue debases itself in justifying itself. (La vertu s'avilit à se justifier.)

VOLTAIRE, Cædipe. Act i, sc. 4.

III—Virtue: Its Beauty

The chief good is the exercise of virtue in a perfect life.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 30.)

Virtue alone is the unerring sign of a noble soul. (La vertu d'un cœur noble est la marque certaine.)

BOILEAU, Satires. No. v, l. 42.

<sup>1</sup> Virtue is not malicious; wrong done her
Is righted even when men grant they err.

CHAPMAN, Monsieur D'Olive. Act i, sc. 1, l. 127.

<sup>2</sup> Virtue loves herself, for she best knows herself and realizes how lovable she is. (Amans sui virtus, optime enim se ipsa novit quamque sit intellegit.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xxvi, sec. 98.

<sup>3</sup> The only amaranthine flower on earth
Is virtue.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 268.

<sup>4</sup> And virtue, tho' in rags, will keep me warm.
DRYDEN, Imitations of Horace. Bk. iii, 29, 87.

He is ill clothed who is bare of virtue.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

Rags are royal raiment when worn for virtue's sake.

BARTLEY T. CAMPBELL, The White Slave. Act iii.

<sup>5</sup> For virtue which alone is free, cannot be brought into subjection. (Virtus enim servire non potest, quæ sola libera est.)

JEROME OSORIUS, De Gloria. Bk. i, ch. 7.

<sup>6</sup> Virtue, dear friend, needs no defence,
The surest guard is innocence:
None knew, till guilt created fear,
What darts or poison'd arrows were.
(Integer vitæ scelerisque purus
Non eget Mauris jaculis neque arcu
Nec venenatis gravida sagittis,
Fusce, pharetra.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 22, st. 1. (Dillon, tr.)

<sup>7</sup> Though men may falter, it is Virtue's strength
To be indelible: our smallest good
By our worst evil cannot be undone.

R. U. JOHNSON, The Voice of Webster.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 45.

<sup>9</sup> Virtue could see to do what virtue would
By her own radiant light, though sun and moon

Were in the flat sea sunk.

MILTON, Comus, l. 373.

Virtue gives herself light, through darkness for to wade.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 12.

<sup>10</sup> Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report: if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 8.

<sup>11</sup> Divinity has three elements of superiority, incorruption, power, and virtue, and the most reverend and divinest of these is virtue; for in fundamental justice nothing participates except through the exercise of intelligent reasoning powers.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 6, sec. 2.

<sup>12</sup> Virtue, the most pleasing and valuable possession in the world. ('Αρετήν, ἥς κτήμα μείζον οὐδὲν οὐδ' ἥδιον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 7.

In virtue are riches. (In virtute divitiæ.)

CICERO, Paradoxa, vi, 2.

Silver and gold are not the only coin; virtue too passes current all over the world.

EURIPIDES, Œdipus. Frag. 546.

Of less worth than gold is silver, than virtue gold. (Vilius argentum est auro, virtutibus aurum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 52.

<sup>13</sup> Virtue is bold, and goodness never fearful.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 215.

<sup>14</sup> Virtue is doubly pleasing in one whose form is beautiful. (Gratior et pulchro veniens in corpore virtus.)

<sup>15</sup> Virtue, not rolling suns, the mind matures.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 772.

IV—Virtue: Its Difficulty

<sup>16</sup> There is no road or ready way to virtue.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 55.

<sup>17</sup> How far from easy is virtue! How difficult is even a continual pretence of virtue! (Quam non est facilis virtus! Quam vero difficilis ejus diuturna simulatio.)

EURIPIDES, Heraclidæ, l. 625.

Between us and Virtue the gods placed sweat: long and steep is the path that leads to her; but when a man has reached the top, then is she easy to reach.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 289.

The steep path of virtue. (Virtutis viam arduæ.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 24, l. 44.

<sup>19</sup> Virtue requires a rough and stormy passage; she will have either outward difficulties to wrestle with . . . or internal difficulties.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 11.

Virtue is the roughest way,
But proves at night a bed of down.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, On the Imprisonment of the Earl of Essex.

1
Virtue is nothing if not difficult. (Sed nulla, nisi ardua, virtus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 537.

2
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 38.

'T is but the fate of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 2, l. 75.

My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 13.

3
Virtue struggles after fame, regardless of the adverse heights. (Perque aspera dura Nititur ad laudem virtus interrita clivo.)

SILIUS ITALICUS, Punica. Pt. iv, l. 605.

4
It is easy enough to be prudent,
When nothing tempts you to stray;
When without or within no voice of sin
Is luring your soul away;
But it's only a negative virtue
Until it is tried by fire,
And the life that is worth the honor of earth,
Is the one that resists desire.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Worth While.

V—Virtue: Its Rewards

5 Virtue is its own reward. (Officii fructus sit ipsum officium.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, sec. 73.

Virtue is its own reward. (Ipsa quidem Virtus pretium sibi.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus Dictus Manlio Theodoro Consuli, l. 1.

Virtue, sir, is its own reward.

DRYDEN, The Assignation. Act iii, sc. 1. Also Tyrannic Love, ii, 3; HOME, Douglas, iii, 1;
PRIOR, Imitations of Horace, iii, 2; etc.

The only reward of virtue is virtue.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

Yet why should learning hope success at court?
Why should our patriots' virtues cause support?
Why to true merit should they have regard?
They know that virtue is its own reward.

JOHN GAY, Epistle to Paul Methuen, l. 39.

Virtue herself is her own fairest reward. (Ipsa quidem virtus sibi met pulcherrima merces.)

SILIUS ITALICUS, Punica. Bk. xiii, l. 663.

Virtue is its own reward. There's a pleasure in doing good which sufficiently pays itself.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse. Act v, sc. 1.

6
Honor is the reward of virtue. (Honor est præmium virtutis.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. iv, sec. 81.

In virtue there are many grades, and the highest glory is won by the highest virtue. (In virtute multi sunt adscensus, ut is gloria maxime excel-lat, qui virtute plurimum præstet.)

CICERO, Pro Cnæo Plancio. Ch. xxv, sec. 60.

Only virtue wins eternal Fame.

PETRARCHE, The Triumph of Fame. Pt. i, l. 183.

7
For blessings ever wait on virtuous deeds,
And though a late, a sure reward succeeds.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act v, sc. 12.

8
Either virtue is an empty name, or the wise man rightly seeks it as his glory and reward.
(Aut virtus nomen inane est, Aut decus et pretium recte petit experiens vir.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 41.

9
Virtue may be assail'd, but never hurt,
Surpris'd by unjust force, but not enthral'd,
Yea, even that which mischief meant most harm,

Shall in the happy trial prove most glory.

MILTON, Comus, l. 589.

10
Not among many thousands will you find
One man who considers virtue its own reward.
(Nec facile invenias multis in milibus unum, Virtutem pretium qui putet esse sui.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 11.

When the prizes fall to the lot of the wicked, you will not find many who are virtuous for virtue's sake.

SALLUST, History. Bk. i, frag.

11
Virtue will not be followed except for her own sake. (La vertu ne veult estre suyvie que pour elle mesme.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

12
In your opinion virtue requires no reward and is to be sought for itself. (Judice te mercede caret per seque petenda est.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 35.

Beauty, goodness, justice, and the like, each exists in and for itself.

PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Bk. iii, 13.)

O let us still the secret joy partake,
To follow virtue even for virtue's sake.

POPE, Temple of Fame, l. 364.

13
You ask what I seek from virtue? Itself. For virtue has nothing better to give; its value is in itself.

SENECA, De Vita Beata. Ch. ix, sec. 4.

14
One should seek virtue for its own sake, and not from hope or fear, or any external motive. It is in virtue that happiness consists, for virtue is the state of mind which tends to make the whole of life harmonious.

ZENO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, 89.)

VI—Virtue and Happiness

15
Here will I hold. If there's a Power above
(And that there is all nature cries aloud Through all her works), he must delight in virtue;

And that which he delights in must be happy.
ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1. Inscribed by Franklin on his book of virtues.

1
Virtue, the strength and beauty of the soul,
Is the best gift of Heaven: a happiness
That even above the smiles and frowns of fate
Exalts great Nature's favourites.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 284.

2
Neither can the virtues exist without happy life, nor happy life without the virtues. (Nec enim virtutes sine beata vita coherere possunt nec illa sine virtutibus.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 28, sec. 80.

3
Well may your hearts believe the truths I tell:

'Tis virtue makes the bliss, where'er we dwell.
WILLIAM COLLINS, Persian Eclogues. No. i, l. 5.

Virtue alone is happiness below.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter xvi.

4
You may be more happy than princes, if you will be more virtuous.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

Be in general virtuous, and you will be happy.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, On Early Marriages.

Virtue and Happiness are Mother and Daughter.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

5
Shall ignorance of good and ill
Dare to direct the eternal will?
Seek virtue, and, of that possess,
To Providence resign the rest.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Father and Jupiter.

6
You wish to live rightly (and who does not?);
since Virtue alone can achieve this, boldly drop trifles and scorn delights.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 6, l. 29.

Nor can you suppose that anyone is happy but the man who is wise and good. (Neve putes alium sapiente bonoque beatum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 20.

And if the Wise be the happy man, as these sages say, he must be virtuous too; for without virtue happiness cannot be.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 405.

7
Through virtue lies the one and only road to a life of peace. (Tranquillæ per virtutem patet unica vitæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 364.

8
Mortals that would follow me,
Love virtue; she alone is free;
She can teach ye how to climb
Higher than the spherical chime;
Or if virtue feeble were,
Heav'n itself would stoop to her.

MILTON, Comus, l. 1018.

9
Virtue of herself is sufficient for happiness.
PLATO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Bk. iii, 13.)

10
Virtue may choose the high or low degree,
'T is just alike to Virtue and to me;
Dwell in a monk, or light upon a king,
She's still the same belov'd, contented thing.

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. i, l. 137.

What nothing earthly gives or can destroy,
The soul's calm sunshine and the heartfelt joy,
Is Virtue's prize.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 167.

Know then this truth (enough for man to know),
"Virtue alone is happiness below."

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 309.

11
Be virtuous & you'll be happy!

ARTEMUS WARD, Fourth of July Oration.

Be virtuous and you will be eccentric.

MARK TWAIN, Mental Photographs.

Be good and you will be lonesome.

MARK TWAIN, Following the Equator. Caption of author's photograph used as frontispiece.

VII—Virtue and Immortality

12
Virtue never grows old.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

13
Virtue treads paths that end not in the grave;
No ban of endless night exiles the brave.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode.

14
He who dies for virtue does not perish. (Qui per virtutem perit, at non interit.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 690. (Act iii, sc. 5.)

For virtue will endure to posterity; envy will not reach them. (Ad posteros enim virtus durabit non perveniet invidia.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. iii,
ch. 1.

15
The renown which riches or beauty confer is fleeting and frail; virtue remains bright and eternal. (Divitiarum et formæ gloria fluxa atque fragile est; virtus clara æternaque habetur.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. i, sec. 4.

16 Virtue lives beyond the grave. (Vivit post funera virtus.)

TIBERIUS CÆSAR. (BORBONIUS, Lives: Tiberius.)

Virtue shall live even after the funeral.

(Vivet etiam post funera virtus.)

SIR DAVID LINDSAY, Works: Motto on Title-page, 1578. Inscribed on monument of Thomas Linacre, Old Saint Paul's Church,
London, 1557.

17
Glory's voice is impotent to pierce
The silence of the tomb; but virtue blooms
Even on the wreck of life, and mounts the skies.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Inscription for a Monument to the Memory of Cowper, l. 20.

<sup>1</sup> Virtue alone outbuilds the Pyramids;
Her monuments shall last, when Egypt's fall.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 312.

<sup>2</sup> Blood is an inheritance, virtue an acquisition.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 42.

<sup>3</sup> 'Tis virtue, and not birth, that makes us noble;
Great actions speak great minds, and such should govern.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act ii, sc. 3.

<sup>4</sup> Virtue and a trade are the best inheritance for children.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 20.

Oh! might we all our lineage prove,
Give and forgive, do good and love.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday after Trinity.

<sup>6</sup> Birth is nothing where virtue is not. (La naissance n'est rien où la vertu n'est pas.)

MOLIÈRE, Don Juan. Act iv, sc. 6.

<sup>7</sup> When we are planning for posterity, we ought to remember that virtue is not hereditary.

THOMAS PAINE, Common Sense. Ch. 4.

If there be no nobility of descent, all the more indispensable is it that there should be nobility of ascent—a character in them that bear rule, so fine and high and pure, that as men come within the circle of its influence they involuntarily pay homage to that which is the one preëminent distinction, the Royalty of Virtue.

HENRY CODMAN POTTER, Address, 30 April, 1889.

<sup>8</sup> To virtue's humblest son let none prefer
Vice, though descended from the Conqueror.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 141.

IX—Virtue: The Virtuous Man

<sup>9</sup> Virtuous and wise he was, but not severe;
He still remembered that he once was young.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Bk. iv, l. 226.

His virtues were his arts.

The temple of virtue was she.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 220.

<sup>11</sup> What to one man is the virtue which he has sunk below the possibility of aspiring to, is to another the backsliding by which he forfeits his spiritual crown.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt.

<sup>12</sup> Speak to his heart, and the man becomes suddenly virtuous.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

<sup>13</sup> I wrap myself in my virtue. (Mea virtute me involvo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 55.

<sup>14</sup> His virtues walk'd their narrow round,
Nor made a pause, nor left a void;

And sure th' Eternal Master found

The single talent well employ'd.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Mr. Robert Levett.

<sup>15</sup> Men of most renowned virtue have sometimes by transgressing most truly kept the law.

MILTON, Tetrachordon.

<sup>16</sup> 'T is thus the mercury of man is fix'd,
Strong grows the virtue with his nature mix'd.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 177.

<sup>17</sup> Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;

Most choice, forsaken; and most loved, despised!

Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 253.

<sup>18</sup> His virtues

Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, against

The deep damnation of his taking-off.

Our Lady of Pain.

SWINBURNE, Dolores.

XI—Virtue: Its Rarity

<sup>12</sup> Many wish not so much to be virtuous, as to seem to be. (Virtute enim ipsa non tam multi præditi esse quam videri volunt.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xxvi, sec. 98.

And he by no uncommon lot
Was fam'd for virtues he had not.

COWPER, To the Rev. William Bull, l. 19.

<sup>13</sup> There are no two things so much talked of,
and so seldom seen, as virtue and the funds.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

Let those who would affect singularity with success, first determine to be very virtuous, and they will be sure to be very singular.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

<sup>14</sup> Virtue engages his assent,
But Pleasure wins his heart.

WILLIAM COWPER, Human Frailty, l. 12.

Most men admire
Virtue, who follow not her lore.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. i, l. 482.

<sup>15</sup> Virtues are, in the popular estimate, rather the exception than the rule. There is the man and his virtues.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

<sup>16</sup> If it is usual to be deeply moved by rare things, why are we so little moved by virtue?
(S'il est ordinaire d'être vivement touché des choses rares, pourquoi le somme-nous si peu de la vertu?)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. i, No. 25.

Virtue was always in a minority on the earth.
(La vertu fut toujours en minorité sur la terre.)

The loose and scattered relics of the day.

ABRAHAM COWLEY,  Davideis. Bk. ii, l. 789.

<sup>18</sup> Golden hours of vision come to us in this present life, when we are at our best, and our faculties work together in harmony.

CHARLES FLETCHER DOLE, The Hope of Immortality.

Forward, on the same old journey, let us follow
where she leads,

Let us chase the beckoning glory of the Vision that Recedes.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Vision that Recedes.

<sup>19</sup> Visions of glory, spare my aching sight!

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 107.

<sup>20</sup> Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.

Old Testament: Habakkuk, ii, 2.

1
Do I sleep? do I dream?
Do I wonder and doubt?
Are things what they seem?
Or is visions about?
BRET HARTE, Further Language from Truthful James, l. 1.

2
I have multiplied visions, and used similitudes.
Old Testament: Hosea, xii, 10.

3
And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions.

Old Testament: Joel, ii, 28; Acts, ii, 17.
The people's prayer, the glad diviner's theme,
The young men's vision, and the old men's dream!
DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. 1, l. 238.

Thy wife hath dream'd, thy mother hath seen visions.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 63.

Was it a vision, or a waking dream?
Fled is that music:—do I wake or sleep?
KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale. St. 8.

True to a vision, steadfast to a dream.
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Ulysses. Act i, sc. 1.

Ah splendid Vision, golden time,
An end of hunger, cold, and crime,
An end of rent, an end of rank,
An end of balance at the bank!
ANDREW LANG, The New Millennium.

6
It is a dream, sweet child! a waking dream,
A blissful certainty, a vision bright,
Of that rare happiness, which even on earth
Heaven gives to those it loves.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act iii, sc. 5.

7
I took it for a faëry vision
Of some gay creatures of the element
That in the colours of the rainbow live
And play i' th' plighted clouds.
MILTON, Comus, l. 298.

8
My thoughts by night are often filled
With visions false as fair:
For in the past alone I build
My castles in the air.
THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Castles in the Air.

Hence the fool's paradise, the statesman's scheme,
The air-built castle, and the golden dream,
The maid's romantic wish, the chemist's flame,
And poet's vision of eternal fame.
POPE, Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 9.
See also under CASTLE.

9
Where there is no vision, the people perish.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxix, 18.

10
'T was but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,
Which the brain makes of fumes: our very eyes

Are sometimes like our judgements, blind.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 300.

Alas! How is 't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 116.

11
Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee.

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33.

The air-drawn dagger.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 62.

12
Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,

The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 148.
(1611)

The cloud capt Tow'rs
The Gorgeous Palaces,
The Solemn Temples,
The Great Globe itself,
Yea all which it Inherit,
Shall dissolve
And like the baseless Fabrick of a Vision
Leave not a wreck behind.
Inscription, on tablet in the left hand of the statue of Shakespeare in Westminster Abbey.

Those golden palaces, those gorgeous halls,
With furniture superfluously fair;
Those stately courts, those sky-encount'ring walls
Evanish all—like vapours in the air.
SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Illusion. (1615)

13
What stately vision mocks my waking sense?
Hence, dear delusion, sweet enchantment,
hence!
HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, An Address Without a Phoenix, l. 1.

Ah me! the vision has vanished,
The music has died away.
WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, Cleopatra.

14
Vision is the art of seeing things invisible.
SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

15
Perfect blessedness, which consists in a vision of God. (Beatitudinem perfectam, quæ in Dei visione consistit.)

ST. THOMAS AQUINAS, Summa Theologie.
Hence "beatific vision."

1 But Shapes, that come not at an earthly call,
Will not depart when mortal voices bid;
Lords of the visionary eye whose lid,
Once raised, remains aghast, and will not fall!
WORDSWORTH, Dion. St. 5.

To whom, in vision clear,
The aspiring heads of future things appear,
Like mountain-tops whose mists have rolled
away.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 43.

I—Voice: Apothegms

2 There is no index of character so sure as the voice.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

A man's style is a man's voice. Wooden minds, wooden voices.

EMERSON, Journals, 1872.

3 The voice which speaks in conformity with our dearest hopes will always be listened to.
ÉMILE GABORIAU, File 113. Ch. 10.

4 The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.

Old Testament: Genesis, xxvii, 22.

5 The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness.
Old Testament: Isaiah, xl, 3.

The voice of one crying in the wilderness.

New Testament: Matthew, iii, 3; Mark, i, 3; Luke, iii, 4; John, i, 23. (Vox clamantis in deserto.—Vulgate.)

6 A still small voice.

Old Testament: I Kings, xix, 12.

The still small voice is wanted.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 685.

Inexorable conscience holds his court,
With still, small voice the plot of guilt alarms.
ERASMUS DARWIN, Mores Concluded.

The still small voice of gratitude.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 64.

A still small voice spake unto me.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 1.

7 The living voice moves. (Viva vox adficit.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 3. Meaning that what they hear affects men more deeply than what they read.

The spoken voice perishes; the written word remains. (Vox audita perit, litera scripta manet.)

WILLIAM CAXTON. Quoted.

8 All voice and nothing else. (Vox et præterea nihil.)

PLUTARCH, Laconic Apothegms. The context is: "A Laconian having plucked all the feathers from a nightingale, and seeing what a tiny body it had, 'Surely,' quoth he, 'thou art all voice and nothing else.'"

9 The voice is nothing but beaten air. (Vox nihil aliud quam ictus aer.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. ii, sec. 29.

II—Voice: Good and Bad

11 The thrilling, solemn, proud, pathetic voice.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 196.

The thrilling, tender, proud, pathetic voice.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 206.

The thrilling, solemn voice, so passionless.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ix, l. 248.

12

Quiet, priestlike voice,

Too used to syllable damnations round

To make a natural emphasis worth while.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 635.

I am sad-voiced as the turtle

Which Anacreon used to feed.

E. B. BROWNING, Wine of Cyprus. St. 6.

13

His voice in one dull, deep, unvaried sound,
Seems to break forth from caverns underground.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 567.

His voice no touch of harmony admits,
Irregularly deep, and shrill by fits.

The two extremes appear like man and wife,
Coupled together for the sake of strife.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 1003.

14

Let me hear

Thy voice—my own affrights me with its echoes.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act ii, sc. 1.

15

His voice is soft as is the upper air,

Or dying lovers' words.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act i, sc. 3.

16

At some glad moment was it nature's choice
To dower a scrap of sunset with a voice?

EDGAR FAWCETT, To an Oriole.

17

I love to hear thine earnest voice,
Wherever thou art hid.

O. W. HOLMES, To an Insect.

18

When from his breast his mighty voice went forth. ('Αλλ' ὅτε δὴ ὅπα τε μεγάλην ἐκ στήθεος εἶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 221.

1 He ceas'd; but left so pleasing on the ear
His voice, that list'n'ing still they seemed to hear.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiii, l. 1. (Pope, tr.)

The voice so sweet, the words so fair,
As some soft chime had stroked the air;
And though the sound were parted thence,
Still left an echo in the sense.

BEN JONSON, Eupheme. Pt. iv, st. 10.

The angel ended, and in Adam's ear
So charming left his voice, that he a while Thought him still speaking, still stood fix'd to hear.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 1.

He ceased; but still their trembling ears retained
The deep vibrations of his witching song.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 20.

See also under ORATORY.

2 The tuneful voice, the eye that spoke the
mind,

Are gone, nor leave a single trace behind.

ROBERT LLOYD, The Actor.

I am listening for the voices
Which I heard in days of old.

CAROLINE NORTON, The Lonely Harp.

But O for the touch of a vanish'd hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!

TENNYSON, Break, Break, Break, l. 11.

3 The melting voice through mazes running,
Untwisting all the chains that tie
The hidden soul of harmony.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 142.

That voice . . . heard so oft
In worst extremes, and on the perilous edge
Of battle.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 274.

4 His voice as the sound of many waters.
New Testament: Revelation, i, 15.

His voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 83.

5 I thank you for your voices: thank you:
Your most sweet voices.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 179.

6 For my voice, I have lost it with halloing and singing of anthems.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 212.

7 I'll speak in a monstrous little voice.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 54.

I will aggravate my voice so that I will roar

you as gently as any sucking dove; I will roar you as 't were any nightingale.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 85.

8 O, good my lord, tax not so bad a voice
To slander music any more than once.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 46.

9 With a voice that, like a bell
Toll'd by an earthquake in a trembling tower,
Rang ruin.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Canto vi, l. 311.

10 Vocal velvet.

RICHARD GRANT WHITE, characterizing the voice of Pauline Markham. (MARKS, They All Sang, p. 53.)

11 A clear sonorous voice, inaudible
To the vast multitude.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 89.

A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
In spring-time from the Cuckoo-bird,
Breaking the silence of the seas
Among the farthest Hebrides.

WORDSWORTH, The Solitary Reaper, l. 13.

12 Two voices are there; one is of the sea,
One of the mountains; each a mighty Voice,
In both from age to age thou didst rejoice,
They were thy chosen music, Liberty!

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. i, No. 12.

III—Voice in Women

13 Her voice changed like a bird's:
There grew more of the music and less of the words.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess.
St. 15.

And her voice was the warble of a bird,
So soft, so sweet, so delicately clear,
That finer, simpler music ne'er was heard;
The sort of sound we echo with a tear,
Without knowing why—an overpowering tone,
Whence melody descends, as from a throne.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 151.

14 The devil hath not, in all his quiver's choice,
An arrow for the heart like a sweet voice.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 13.

For it stirs the blood in an old man's heart,
And makes his pulses fly,
To catch the thrill of a happy voice,
And the light of a pleasant eye.

N. P. WILLIS, Saturday Afternoon.

15 Then read from the treasured volume
The poem of thy choice,
And lend to the rhyme of the poet
The beauty of thy voice.

LONGFELLOW, The Day Is Done. St. 10.

Oh, there is something in that voice that reaches
The innermost recesses of my spirit!

LONGFELLOW, *The Divine Tragedy: The First
Passover*. Pt. vi.

Thy voice Is a celestial melody.

LONGFELLOW, Masque of Pandora. Pt. v, l. 2.

Her silver voice

Is the rich music of a summer bird,
Heard in the still night, with its passionate cadence.

LONGFELLOW, The Spirit of Poetry, l. 55.

How sweetly sounds the voice of a good woman!

It is so seldom heard, that, when it speaks,
It ravishes all senses.

MIDDLETON, The Old Law. Act iv, sc. 2.

Her voice, whate'er she said, enchanted;
Like music to the heart it went.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 80.

Her voice was like the voice the stars
Had when they sang together.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damsel. St. 10.

Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 272.

Silence, beautiful voice!
Be still, for you only trouble the mind
With a joy in which I cannot rejoice,
A glory I shall not find.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 180.

VOLTAIRE

Voltaire and Shakespeare! He was all
The other feigned to be.
The flippant Frenchman speaks: I weep;
And Shakespeare weeps with me.

MATTHIAS CLAUDIUS, A Comparison.

Built God a church, and laugh'd his word to
scorn,

Skilful alike to seem devout and just,
And stab religion with a sly side-thrust.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 688.

Just knows, and knows no more, her Bible true—
A truth the brilliant Frenchman never knew.

COWPER, Truth, l. 328.

He is like the false Amphitryon; although a stranger, it is always he who has the air of being master of the house.

DUBUC. (EMERSON, Quotation and Originality.)

Voltaire was an apostle of Christian ideas;
only the names were hostile to him, and he never knew it otherwise. He was like the son of the vine-dresser in the Gospel, who said No, and went; the other said Yea, and went not.

EMERSON, *Lectures and Biographical Sketches:
Character*.

Jesus wept: Voltaire smiled.

VICTOR HUGO, Address, centenary of Voltaire's death, 30 May, 1878.

Here lies the child spoiled by the world which he spoiled. (Ci gît l'enfant gâté du monde qu'il gâta.)

BARONNE DE MONTOLIEU, Epitaph on Voltaire.

Thou art so witty, profligate, and thin,
Thou seem'st a Milton with his Death and Sin.

EDWARD YOUNG, Epigram on Voltaire. Referring to Voltaire's severe criticism of Milton's allegorical description of Death and Sin.
(DORAN, Life of Young.)

VOTE AND VOTING

I consider biennial elections as a security that the sober, second thought of the people shall be law.

FISHER AMES, Speech, Jan., 1788.

It is hard in all causes, but especially in religion, when voices shall be numbered and not weighed.

FRANCIS BACON, Of Church Controversies.

Universal suffrage is the government of a house
by its nursery.

BISMARCK, Saying.

The notion that a man's liberty consists in giving his vote at election-hustings, and saying, "Behold, now, I too have my twentythousandth part of a Talker in our National Palaver."

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii,
ch. 13.

No method of voting can be better than that of open declaration. (Nihil ut fuerit in suffragiis voce melius.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 15, sec. 33.

We need the faith to go a path untrod,
The power to be alone and vote with God.

EDWIN MARKHAM, The Need of the Hour.

A straw vote only shows which way the hot air blows.

O. HENRY. (New American Literature, p. 170.)

The freeman casting, with unpurchased hand,
The vote that shakes the turrets of the land.

O. W. HOLMES, Poetry, a Metrical Essay, l. 83.

A weapon that comes down as still
As snowflakes fall upon the sod;
But executes a freeman's will,
As lightning does the will of God;
And from its force, nor doors nor locks
Can shield you; 'tis the ballot-box.

JOHN PIERPONT, A Word from a Petitioner.

I am not one to hunt for the votes of a fickle public at the cost of suppers and gifts of worn-out clothes. (Non ego ventosæ plebis suffragia venor Impensis cenarum et trita munere vestis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 37.

1 The right of election is the very essence of the constitution.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 11.

2 Among free men there can be no successful appeal from the ballot to the bullet.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (E. J. YOUNG, The Lesson of the Hour: Magazine of History. No. 43.)

I go for all sharing the privileges of the government who assist in bearing its burdens. Consequently I go for admitting all whites to the right of suffrage who pay taxes or bear arms, by no means excluding females.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Letter, 1836.

3 Is virtue verily found in voices?

Or is wisdom won when all win votes?

SWINBURNE, A Word from the Psalmist. St. 3.

Is a vote a coat? will franchise feed you,
Or words be a roof against the rain?

SWINBURNE, A Word from the Psalmist. St. 4.

4 All forward-looking minds know that, sooner or later, the chief public question in this country will be woman's claim to the ballot.

THEODORE TILTON. (Independent, 18 Jan., 1866.)

5 As long as I count the votes, what are you going to do about it?

WILLIAM MARCY TWEED, of the ballot in New York City, in November, 1871.

More men have been elected between Sundown and Sunup, than ever were elected between Sunup and Sundown.

WILL ROGERS, The Illiterate Digest, p. 152.

6 The votes of veering crowds are not

The things that are more excellent.

WILLIAM WATSON, Things That Are More Excellent.

7 Democracy's ceremonial, its feast, its great function, is the election.

H. G. WELLS, Democracy.

8 Your telegram received. I would feel deeply mortified to have you or anyone like you vote for me. Since you have access to many disloyal citizens and I have not, I will ask you to convey this message to them.

WOODROW WILSON. Answer to telegram from Jeremiah O'Leary, in campaign of 1916, threatening Wilson with the loss of pro-German votes.

VOW

13 He who breaks a resolution is a weakling;
He who makes one is a fool.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

14 Vows with so much passion, swears with so much grace,
That 'tis a kind of Heaven to be deluded by him.

NATHANIEL LEE, The Rival Queens. Act i, sc. 1.

15 Ease would recant
Vows made in pain, as violent and void.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 96.

16 For priests will allow of a broken vow,
For penance or for gold.
SCOTT, Bridal of Triermain. Canto ii, st. 17.

17 These mouth-made vows
Which break themselves in swearing.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 3, l. 30.

18 Men's vows are women's traitors.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 56.

Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 115.

Vows were ever brokers to defiling.
SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 173.

19 By all the vows that ever men have broke,
In number more than ever women spoke.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 175.

You put me off with limber vows.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 47.

20 The vow that binds too strictly snaps itself.
TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 652.

VULGARITY

Stulkeley: To wait and see.

Woodhouse: Wait and see!

Stulkeley: Wait and see what happens.

A. W. PINERO, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act iii.

<sup>13</sup>
Everything comes to those who can wait.
(Tout vient à point qui peut attendre.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 48. (1548)

Everything comes if a man will only wait.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iv, ch. 8.

All things come round to him who will but wait.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: The Student's Tale. Last line, quoted.

The higher a man stands, the more the word "vulgar" becomes unintelligible to him.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Bk. iii, pt. iv, ch. 7, sec. 9.

<sup>4</sup>
So must the writer, whose productions should Take with the vulgar, be of vulgar mould.

<sup>5</sup>
Vulgarity is simply the conduct of other people.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii.

<sup>6</sup>
One should absorb the colour of life, but one should never remember its details. Details are always vulgar.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 8.

Everything comes to him who hustles while he waits.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, Apr., 1931.)

Alas! all things come too late for those who wait.

JAMES HUNEXER, Chopin, p. 77.

Ah, "all things come to those who wait,"

(I say these words to make me glad),

But something answers, soft and sad,

"They come, but often come too late."

MARY MONTGOMERIE SINGLETON, Tout Vient à Qui Sait Attendre.

Patient waiters are no losers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>15</sup>
Although I enter not,
Yet round about the spot

Ofttimes I hover;

And near the sacred gate

With longing eyes I wait,

Expectant of her.

THACKERAY, At the Church Gate.

WALKING

<sup>16</sup>
They wha canna walk right are sure to come to wrang,

Creep awa', my bairnie, creep afore ye gang.

JAMES BALLANTINE, Creep Afore Ye Gang.

<sup>17</sup>
Never walk fast in the streets, which is a mark of vulgarity . . . though it may be tolerable in a tradesman.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters.

<sup>18</sup>
I nauseate walking; 'tis a country diversion; I loathe the country.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 2.

<sup>19</sup>
Why then do you walk around as though you had swallowed a spit? (Τί οὖν ἡμῖν ὀβελίσκον καταπῶν κερπατεῖς.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 21, sec. 2.

1 Before supper walk a little; after supper do the same. (Sub cœnam paulisper inambula; cœnatus idem facito.)

ERASMUS, De Ratione Studii. See also under HEALTH.

2 Walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go.
Old Testament: Isaiah, iii, 16.

3 Walking is the best possible exercise. Habituate yourself to walk very far. The Europeans value themselves on having subdued the horse to the uses of man; but I doubt whether we have not lost more than we have gained, by the use of this animal.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 84.

4 And so to tread

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 679.

5 I'll fetch a turn about the garden.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 1, l. 81.

Come, you and I must walk a turn together.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 1, l. 93.

6 I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxx.

7 Every walk is a sort of crusade, preached by some Peter the Hermit in us, to go forth and reconquer this Holy Land from the hands of the Infidels.

H. D. THOREAU, Walking. He had just explained the fanciful derivation of saunter from à la Sainte Terre.

Away from the world that slaves for money—
Come, journey the way with me.

MADISON CAWEIN, Song of the Road.

12 And smalle foules maken melody,
That sleepe alle night with open eye,
(So pricketh them nature in their corages:)
Then longen folk to go on pilgrimages.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 9.

13 We travel not for trafficking alone;
By hotter winds our fiery hearts are fanned:

For lust of knowing what should not be known,

We take the Golden Road to Samarkand.

JAMES ELROY FLECKER, Hassan. Act v, sc. 2.

We are the Pilgrims, master; we shall go

Always a little further: it may be

Beyond that last blue mountain barred with snow,

Across that angry or that glimmering sea,
White on a throne or guarded in a cave

There lives a prophet who can understand

Why men were born: but surely we are brave

Who take the Golden Road to Samarkand.

JAMES ELROY FLECKER, Hassan. Act v, sc. 2.

14 Beyond the East the sunrise, beyond the Something lost behind the Ranges. Lost and waiting for you. Go!"

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Explorer. St. 2.

16 I am fevered with the sunset,

I'm fretful with the bay,
Or the wander-thirst is on me
And my soul is in Cathay.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Sea Gypsy.

There's a schooner in the offing,
With her topsails shot with fire,
And my heart has gone aboard her
For the Islands of Desire.

It's stay, friend, stay!
There's lots o' love and lots o' time
To linger on the way;

It's happy goes as lucky goes,
To Romany in June.

WALLACE IRWIN, From Romany to Rome.

The white moth to the closing bine,
The bee to the opened clover,
And the gipsy blood to the gipsy blood
Ever the wide world over.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gipsy Trail. St. 1.

The pied snake to the rifted rock,
The buck to the stony plain,
And the Romany lass to the Romany lad,
And both to the road again.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gipsy Trail. St. 5.

A long time ago.

EDWIN RANSFORD, Gypsying.

What care I for my house and my land?

What care I for my money, O?

What care I for my new-wedded lord?

I'm off with the wraggle-taggle gipsies, O.

UNKNOWN, The Wraggle-Taggle Gipsies.

The wild hawk to the wind-swept sky,
The deer to the wholesome wold,
And the heart of a man to the heart of a maid,
As it was in the days of old.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Gipsy Trail. St. 11.

The hawk unto the open sky,
The red deer to the wold;
The Romany lass for the Romany lad,
As in the days of old.

FREDERIC EDWARD WEATHERLY. (Cited in N. Y. Times Book Review as antedating Kipling.)

5
You have heard the beat of the off-shore
wind,
And the thresh of the deep-sea rain;
You have heard the song—how long? how long?

Pull out on the trail again!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail. St. 1.

Her plates are flaked by the sun, dear lass,
And her ropes are taut with the dew,
For we're booming down on the old trail, our
own trail, the out trail,
We're sagging south on the Long Trail—the trail that is always new.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail. St. 7.

The Lord knows what we may find, dear lass,
And The Deuce knows what we may do—
But we're back once more on the old trail, our
own trail, the out trail,
We're down, hull-down, on the Long Trail—the trail that is always new!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail. St. 10.

6
I'm the ramblin' son with the nervous feet
That never was made for a steady beat.
I had many a job—for a little while;
I've been on the bum, and I've lived in style,
But there was the road windin' mile after mile,

And nothing to do but go.

H. H. KNIBBS, Nothing To Do But Go.

7
The loose foot of the wanderer
Is curst as well as blest!
It urges ever, ever on
And never gives him rest. . . .
No maid will ever hold him long

He urges ever, ever on
With star-duct in his hair.

HESPER LE GALLIENNE, The Wanderer.

8
I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the sky,
And all I ask is a tall ship and a star to steer her by,
And the wheel's kick and the wind's song and the white sail's shaking,
And a grey mist on the sea's face and a grey dawn breaking.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sea-Fever. St. 1.

I must go down to the seas again to the vagrant
gypsy life,
To the gull's way and the whale's way where the wind's like a whetted knife;
And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow-rover,
And quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sea-Fever. St. 3.

I must go; the sea has called me
As a mistress to her swain;
From the immemorial tumult

I shall drink of peace again.

F. O'NEILL GALLAGHER, Sea Madness.

1 Friends and loves we have none, nor wealth
nor blest abode,
But the hope of the City of God at the other end of the road.
Not for us are content, and quiet, and peace of mind,
For we go seeking a city that we shall never find.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Seekers. St. 1.

It's the white road westwards is the road I must tread
To the green grass, the cool grass, and rest for heart and head,
To the violets and the brown brooks and the thrushes' song
In the fine land, the west land, the land where I belong.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The West Wind.

2 It's little I know what's in my heart,
What's in my mind it's little I know,
But there's that in me must up and start,
And it's little I care where my feet go.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Departure.

3 Better sit still where born, I say,
Wed one sweet woman and love her well,
Love and be loved in the old East way,
Drink sweet waters, and dream in a spell,
Than to wander in search of the Blessed Isles,
And to sail the thousands of watery miles
In search of love, and find you at last
On the edge of the world, and a curs'd outcast.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Pace Implora.

4 Let us probe the silent places,
Let us seek what luck betide us.

ROBERT W. SERVICE, Call of the Wild.

5 Wealth I ask not, hope nor love,
Nor a friend to know me;
All I ask, the heavens above,
And the road below me.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Vagabond.

I cannot rest from travel; I will drink
Life to the lees.

ALFRED TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 6.

Afoot and light-hearted I take to the open road,
Healthy, free, the world before me,
The long brown path before me leading wherever
I choose.

Henceforth I ask not good-fortune, I myself am good-fortune,
Henceforth I whimper no more, postpone no
more, need nothing,
Done with indoor complaints, libraries, querulous
criticisms,

Strong and content I travel the open road.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Open Road.

6 I looked in his eyes and I read the news;

His heart was having the railroad blues.
Oh, the railroad blues will cost you dear,
Keeps you moving on for something that you don't see here.

RIDGELY TORRENCE, Eye-Witness.

7 So let the way wind up the hill or down, O'er rough or smooth, the journey will be joy,

Still seeking what I sought when but a boy.

1 A meditation on the conduct of political societies made old Hobbes imagine that war was the state of nature.

EDMUND BURKE, Vindication of Natural Society.

Hobbes clearly proves that every creature Lives in a state of war by nature.

SWIFT, Poetry: A Rhapsody.

2 War is pusillanimously carried out in this degenerate age; quarter is given; towns are taken and the people spared: even in a storm, a woman can hardly hope for the benefit of a rape.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Jan., 1757.

3 O great corrector of enormous times,
Shaker of o'er-rank states, thou grand decider

Of dusty and old titles, that heal'st with blood
The earth when it is sick, and cure'st the world

O' the pleurisy of people.

7 The art of war, which I take to be the highest perfection of human knowledge.

DANIEL DEFOE, The History of Projects: Introduction.

Our wearisome pedantic art of war,
By which we prove retreat may be success,
Delay best speed, half loss, at times, whole gain.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act i.

8 War is the trade of kings.

DRYDEN, King Arthur. Act ii, sc. 2.

9 Military glory—that attractive rainbow that rises in showers of blood, that serpent's eye that charms to destroy.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech Against the War with Mexico, House of Representatives, 12 Jan., 1848.

10 When he drew the sword, he threw away the scabbard. . . . He knew that the essence of war is violence, and that moderation in war is imbecility.

MACAULAY, Essays: Lord Nugent's Memorials of Hampden. Referring to John Hampden.

11 War should be the only study of a prince. He should consider peace only as a breathing-time, which gives him leisure to contrive, and furnishes ability to execute, military plans.

MACHIAVELLI, The Prince.

And by a prince, he means every sort of state, however constituted.

EDMUND BURKE, Vindication of Natural Society.

12 Two armies are two bodies which meet and try to frighten each other.

NAPOLÉON I, Sayings of Napoleon.

13 It is the province of kings to cause war, and of God to end it. (Penes Reges est inferre bellum, penes autem Deum terminare.)

Yield, ye arms, to the toga. (Cedant arma togæ.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 77.

18 It is always easy to begin a war, but very difficult to stop one, since its beginning and end are not under the control of the same man. Anyone, even a coward, can commence a war, but it can be brought to an end only with the consent of the victors.

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Sec. 83.

Your breath first kindled the dead coal of wars . . .

And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis far too huge to be blown out
With that same weak wind which enkindled it.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 2, l. 83.

Military service produces moral imbecility, ferocity and cowardice, and the defence of nations must be undertaken by the civil enterprise of men enjoying all the rights and liberties of citizenship.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island: Preface.

There is only one virtue, pugnacity; only one vice, pacifism. That is an essential condition of war.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House: Introduction.

War is the statesman's game, the priest's delirium,

The lawyer's jest, the hired assassin's trade.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iv, l. 168.

War, that mad game the world so loves to play.

SWIFT, Ode to Sir William Temple.

But war 's a game, which, were their subjects wise,

Kings would not play at.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 187.

Warfare seems to signify blood and iron.
(Cædes videtur significare sanguinem et ferrem.)

QUINTILIAN, Declamationes, 360.

It is not by speeches and resolutions that the great questions of the time are decided . . . but by iron and blood. (Eisen und Blut.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Prussian House of Delegates, 30 Sept., 1862.

Not with dreams but with blood and iron,
Shall a nation be moulded at last.

ATTILA, at the battle of Chalons. (JORDANUS OF RAVENNA, De Getarum Origine. Ch. 39.)

Carry on, carry on, for the men and boys are gone,

But the furrow shan't lie fallow while the women carry on.

JANET BEGBIE, Carry On.

Better pointed bullets than pointed speeches.
(Lieber Spitzkugeln als Spitzreden.)

BISMARCK, Speech, during the Hesse-Cassel insurrection of 1850.

It is magnificent, but it is not war.

GENERAL PIERRE BOSQUET, on witnessing the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaklava, 28 Oct., 1854.

A feat of chivalry, fiery with consummate courage, and bright with flashing valour.

DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 15 Dec., 1855.

War never leaves where it found a nation.

Brave Broglie, "with a whiff of grapeshot (salve de canons)," if need be, will give quick account of it.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 5, ch. 3.

The whiff of grapeshot can, if needful, become a blast and tempest.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 5, ch. 3.

Singular: in old Broglie's time, six years ago, this Whiff of Grapeshot was promised; but it could not be given then. . . . Now, however, the time is come for it, and the man [Napoleon]; and behold, you have it.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 7, ch. 7.

MARCUS CATO. Cato's hatred and fear of Carthage was such that he concluded every speech, every letter and every conversation with the words, Ceterum censeo, Carthaginem esse delendam, "In my opinion, Carthage must be destroyed." (Δοκεῖ δέ μοι καὶ Καρχηδόνα μὴ εἶναι.) (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 27, sec. 1.) Publius Scipio Nasica always countered with, "In my opinion, Carthage must be spared."

<sup>2</sup> War to the castle, peace to the cabin! (Guerre aux châteaux, paix aux chaumières!)

<sup>5</sup> The battle is lost, but there is time to gain another.

MARSHAL LOUIS CHARLES DESAIX, to Napoleon, who thought at four o'clock in the afternoon, that the battle of Marengo was lost. Desaix's division saved the day, though, in the advance, he was shot through the heart and killed instantly. Napoleon had him buried at the summit of the St. Bernard Pass, saying, "His tomb shall have the Alps for its pedestal." (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

My right has been rolled up; my left has been driven back; my centre has been smashed. I have ordered an advance from all directions.

GENERAL FERDINAND FOCH, Message, to Marshal Joffre, during the first battle of the Marne, August, 1914.

<sup>6</sup> They brought the elephant of Asia to convey the artillery of Europe to dethrone one of the kings of Africa, and to hoist the standard of St. George upon the mountains of Rasselas.

FONTANELLE. (EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.)

<sup>10</sup> Every position must be held to the last man; there must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall, and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight on to the end.

FIELD-MARSHAL SIR DOUGLAS HAIG, Order of the Day, 12 April, 1918.

LORD CHARLES HAY, lieutenant of the First Grenadier Guards, at the battle of Fontenoy, 30 April, 1745. Comte d'Auteroches, commanding the French Guards, is said to have replied, "Sir, the French Guards never fire first; please to fire yourselves." (FOURNIER, L'Esprit dans L'Histoire.) The story is probably a fabrication.

MARSEHAL MACMAHON, after he had taken the Malakof fortress by assault, during the siege of Sebastopol, 8 Sept., 1855, and been warned that the fort might be blown up.
On the authority of a letter from General
Biddulph to Germain Bapst, stating that MacMahon uttered the phrase to him.
(L'Éclair, May, 1908.) Gabriel Hanotaux (Contemporary France) states that MacMahon denied this. The Marquis de Castellane (Revue Hebdomadaire, May, 1903) asserts that he himself coined the phrase during a speech in the National Assembly and attributed it to MacMahon. (See also Notes and Queries, 15 July, 1911.) Used by Victor Emmanuel at the occupation of Rome by 15 If God gave the hand, let not Man withhold the sword. All have the right to fight: none have the right to judge. To Man the weapon:

to Heaven the victory. Peace shall not prevail save with a sword in her hand. Nothing is ever done in this world until men are prepared to kill each other if it is not done.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. The Undershaft mottoes for their munitions plant.

16 There is many a boy here today who looks on war as all glory, but, boys, it is all hell. You can bear this warning voice to generations yet to come. I look upon war with horror.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Address, before a G. A. R. convention at Columbus, Ohio, 11 Aug., 1880. It was no doubt from this extempore speech that somebody coined the epigram, "War is hell," which Sherman could never remember having uttered. (See Lewis, Sherman, Fighting Prophet.) Various persons have asserted that they heard the phrase spoken by Sherman at other places, but no real evidence that it was has ever been discovered.

War is hell when you're getting licked!

BRIGADIER-GENERAL HENRY J. O'REILLY (Outlook, 28 Oct., 1931) asserts that this is what Sherman really said, and is confirmed by Col. J. R. M. Taylor, but without convincing evidence.

You cannot qualify war in harsher terms than I will. War is cruelty, and you cannot refine it.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Memoirs. Vol. ii, p. 126.

This is the soldier brave enough to tell
The glory-dazzled world that War is hell:
Lover of peace, he looks beyond the strife,
And rides through hell to save his country's life.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Saint-Gaudens' Equestrian Statue of General Sherman. This quatrain was not used by the sculptor because Sherman's coining of the phrase was thought not to be sufficiently authenticated.

O war! thou son of hell!

Which of the two to choose, slavery or death?
ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 1.

My sentence is for open war.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 51.

2 War is a biological necessity of the first importance, a regulative element in the life of mankind which cannot be dispensed with. . . . But it is not only a biological law but a moral obligation and, as such, an indispensable factor in civilization.

BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War. Ch. 1.
The inevitableness, the idealism, and the blessing of war, as an indispensable and stimulating law of development, must be repeatedly emphasized.

BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War. Ch. 1.
3 Know that relentless strife
Remains, by sea and land,
The holiest law of life. . . .
From fear in every guise,
From sloth, from love of pelf,
By war's great sacrifice
The world redeems itself.

16 I drew this gallant head of war,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 2, l. 113.

I do not advise you to work, but to fight. I do not advise you to conclude peace, but to conquer. Let your work be a fight, your peace a victory!
 FRIEDRICH NEITZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra: Of War and Warriors.

1 War is elevating, because the individual disappears before the great conception of the state. . . . What a perversion of morality to wish to abolish heroism among men!

TREITSCHKE, Politics. Vol. i, p. 74.

God will see to it that war always recurs as a drastic medicine for the human race.

TREITSCHKE, Politics. Vol. i, p. 76.

A thousand touching traits testify to the sacred power of the love which a righteous war awakes in noble nations.

TREITSCHKE, German History. Vol. i, p. 482.

2 From the blood of battlefields spring daisies and buttercups.

How that red rain hath made the harvest grow.
 BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 17.

IV—War: Its Horrors

3 Hence bloody wars at first began,
 The artificial plague of man,
 That from his own invention rise,
 To scourge his own iniquities.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire Upon the Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 105.

4 War in fact is becoming contemptible, and ought to be put down by the great nations of Europe, just as we put down a vulgar mob.

MORTIMER COLLINS, Thoughts in My Garden.

5 War lays a burden on the reeling state.
 COWPER, Expostulation, l. 306.

6 Hence jarring sectaries may learn
 Their real interest to discern;
 That brother should not war with brother,
 And worry and devour each other.

COWPER, The Nightingale and Glow-Worm.

7 The angel, Pity, shuns the walks of war!
 ERASMUS DARWIN, The Loves of the Plants.
 Canto iii, l. 298.

8 War, he sung, is toil and trouble.
 DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 99.

9 War gratifies, or used to gratify, the combative instinct of mankind, but it gratifies also the love of plunder, destruction, cruel discipline, and arbitrary power.

C. W. ELIOT, Five American Contributions to Civilization.

10 War, to sane men at the present day, begins to look like an epidemic insanity, breaking out here and there like the cholera or influenza, infecting men's brains instead of their bowels.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: War.

11 I find a hundred thousand sorrows touching my heart, and there is ringing in my ears like an admonition eternal, an insistent call, "It must not be again!"

WARREN G. HARDING, Address, Hoboken, over the bodies of the dead of the A. E. F.

12 War is death's feast.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Yes; quaint and curious war is!

You shoot a fellow down

You'd treat if met where any bar is,
 Or help to half-a-crown.

THOMAS HARDY, The Man He Killed.

13 When war begins, then hell openeth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

When war begins, the devil makes hell bigger.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A day of battle is a day of harvest for the devil.
 WILLIAM HOOK, Sermon, Taunton, Mass., 1640.

He that preaches war is the devil's chaplain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 27.

14 Curs'd is the man and void of law and right,
 Unworthy property, unworthy light,
 Unfit for public rule, or private care;
 That wretch, that monster, that delights in war.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 87. (Pope, tr.)

To gratify stern ambition's whims,
 What hundreds and thousands of precious limbs
 On a field of battle we scatter.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Fame.

15 Wars hateful to mothers. (Bellaque matribus Detestata.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 23.

Mother whose heart hung humble as a button
 On the bright splendid shroud of your son,
 Do not weep.

War is kind.

STEPHEN CRANE, War Is Kind.

16 Among the calamities of war may be justly numbered the diminution of the love of truth by the falsehoods which interest dictates and credulity encourages. A peace will equally leave the warrior and the relator of wars destitute of employment; and I know not whether more is to be dreaded from streets filled with soldiers accustomed to plunder, or from garrets filled with scribblers accustomed to lie.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 30.

The first casualty when war comes is truth.

HIRAM JOHNSON, Speech, U. S. Senate.

No one has ever succeeded in keeping nations at war except by lies.

SALVADOR DE MADARIAGA.

Lies were the stuff from which armies built morale.

DANIEL V. POLING.

In war opinion is nine parts in ten.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 7 Jan., 1711.

1
Art, thou hast many infamies,
But not an infamy like this.
O snap the fife and still the drum,
And show the monster as she is.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, The Illusion of War.

Ez fer war, I call it murder,—
There you hev it plain an' flat;
I don't want to go no furdur

Than my Testyment fer that;
God hez sed so piump an' fairly,
It's ez long ez it is broad,
An' you've gut to git up airly
Ef you want to take in God.

3
When after many battles past,
Both tir'd with blows, make peace at last,
What is it, after all, the people get?
Why! taxes, widows, wooden legs, and debt.

FRANCIS MOORE, Almanac: Monthly Observations for 1829, p. 23.

Ye that follow the vision
Of the world's weal afar,
Have ye met with derision
And the red laugh of war?

ALFRED NOYES, Love Will Find Out the Way.

I hate that drum's discordant sound
Parading round and round and round:
To me it talks of ravaged plains,
And burning towns, and ruined swains,
And mangled limbs, and dying groans,
And widows' tears, and orphans' moans;
And all that misery's hand bestows
To fill the catalogue of human woes.

JOHN SCOTT, Ode on Hearing the Drum.

4
Dying is more honorable than killing. (Quanto honestius mori discunt homines quam occidere.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 27.

We check manslaughter and isolated murders;
but what of war and the much-vaunted crime of slaughtering whole peoples? . . . Deeds which would be punished by loss of life when committed in secret, are praised by us because uniformed generals have carried them out.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 30.

One to destroy, is murder by the law,
And gibbets keep the lifted hand in awe;
To murder thousands takes a specious name,
War's glorious art, and gives immortal fame.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vii, l. 55.

5

He is come to open

The purple testament of bleeding war.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 93.

Follow thy drum;
With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules;
Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
Then what should war be?

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3,
l. 58.

6
In the arts of life man invents nothing; but in the arts of death he outdoes Nature herself, and produces by chemistry and machinery all the slaughter of plague, pestilence, and famine.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii.

The children born of thee are sword and fire,
Red ruin, and the breaking up of laws.

TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 421.

Wild War, who breaks the converse of the wise.

TENNYSON, The Third of February.

10
War! horrible war! (Bella! horrida bella!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 86.

Away with themes of war! Away with war itself!
Hence from my shuddering sight to never more return that show of blacken'd, mutilated corpses!

That hell unpent and raid of blood, fit for wild tigers or for lop-tongued wolves, not reasoning men.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition. Pt.
vii.

11
Militarism does not consist in the existence of any army, nor even in the existence of a very great army. Militarism is a spirit. It is a point of view. It is a system. It is a purpose. The purpose of militarism is to use armies for aggression.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, West Point, 13
June, 1916.

12
A commonplace against war; the easiest of all topics.

EDMUND BURKE, *Observations on a Publica-

V—War: Civil War

13
From hence, let fierce contending nations know,

What dire effects from civil discord flow.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 4.

14
All things are wretched in civil wars. (Omnia sunt misera in bellis civilibus.)

CICERO, Epistolae ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 9

The wounds of civil war are deeply felt. (Alta sedent civilis volnera dextræ.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 32.

1 Any sort of peace with our fellow-citizens seems to me preferable to civil war. (Mihi enim omnis pax cum civibus, bello civili utilior videbatur.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. ii, ch. 15, sec. 37.

2 Did you choose to wage wars which could win no triumph? i. e. civil wars. (Bella geri placuit nullos habitura triumphos?)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 12.

Make us foes of every nation, but prevent a civil war. (Omnibus hostes reddite nos populis: civile avertite bellum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 52.

3 She saw her sons with purple death expire,
Her sacred domes involv'd in rolling fire,
A dreadful series of intestine wars,
Inglorious triumphs, and dishonest scars.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 323.

4 Civil dissension is a viperous worm
That gnaws the bowels of the commonwealth.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 72.

VI—War: Its Sinews

5 Money is the sinews of war. (Πλοῦτον νεύρα τοῦ παλέμου.)

LIBANIUS, Orations. No. 46.

Endless money forms the sinews of war. (Nervi belli pecunia infinita.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. v, ch. 2, sec. 5.

Victuals and ammunition and money too are the sinews of war.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Fair Maid.

The sinews of war are those two metals (gold and silver).

ARTEUR HULL, Memorial, to Robert Cecil, 28 Nov., 1600.

Money is the sinew of the war.

MASSINGER, The Duke of Milan. Act iii, sc. 1.

Gold is the glue, sinews and strength of war.

GEORGE PEELE, Battle of Alcazar. Act i, sc. 2. (1594)

Coin is the sinews of war. (Les nerfs des batailles sont des pécunes.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 46.

6 Money is the sinews of success. (Τὸν πλοῦτον νεύρα πραγμάτων.)

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, 48.)

He who first called money the sinews of affairs would seem to have spoken with special reference to the affairs of war. (Νεύρα τῶν πραγμάτων.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cleomenes. Ch. 27.

7 Suppose your sinews of war quite broken; I mean your military chest insolvent.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

8 Money is the sinew of love as well as of war.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3442.

9 Money, more money, always money. (De l'argent, encore de l'argent, et toujours de l'argent.)

MARSHAL DE TRIVULCE, when Louis XIV asked him what he needed to make war.

War demands three things,—gold, gold, gold.

LAZARUS VON SCHWENDI. (MONTECUCULI, Memoirs.)

10 War is a matter not so much of arms as of expenditure, through which arms may be made of service.

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. i, ch. 83, sec. 2.

11 Fight thou with shafts of silver and thou shalt conquer all things.

Response of the Delphian Oracle to Philip of Macedon, when he asked how he might be victorious in war. (PLUTARCH, Apothegms.)

Fight thou with shafts of silver and o'ercome, When no force else can get the masterdom.

ROBERT HERRICK, Money Gets the Mastery.

Silver bullets.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, 1914, referring to the war with Germany.

Not Philip, but Philip's gold, took the cities of Greece.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Paulus Æmilius. Quoted as "a common saying." See also GOLD: ITS POWER.

12 Neither is money the sinews of war, as it is trivially said.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Expense.

VII—War: The Big Battalions

13 God is generally for the big squadrons against the little ones. (Dieu est ordinaire pour les gros escadrons contre les petits.)

ROGER, COMTE DE BUSSY-RABUTIN, Letters, 18 Oct., 1677.

I have always noticed that God is on the side of the big battalions. (J'ai toujours vu Dieu du côté des gros bataillons.)

MARSHAL DE LA FERTÉ, Remark, to Anne of Austria. (BOURSAULT, Lettres Nouvelles, p. 384.)

Providence is always on the side of the big battalions. (La Fortune est toujours pour les gros bataillons.)

MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Letter to Her Daughter. (Letters, No. 202.)

It is said that God is always on the side of the big battalions. (On dit que Dieu est toujours pour les gros bataillons.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to M. le Riche, 6 Feb., 1770.

As regards Providence, he cannot shake off the belief that in war, God is on the side of the big battalions, which at present are in the enemy's camp.

EDUARD ZELLER, Frederick the Great as Philos- opher, referring to a letter written by Frederick to the Duchess of Gotha, 8 May, 1760. (See CARLYLE, Frederick the Great, v, 606.)

1 Providence is always on the side of the last reserve.

NAPOLEON I, Sayings of Napoleon.

2 The winds and waves are always on the side of the ablest navigators.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 68.

3 The gods are on the side of the stronger. (Deos fortioribus adesse.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 17.

Wise men and God are on the strongest side.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Death of Marc Antony. Act iv, sc. 2.

4 We are glad to have God on our side to maul our enemies, when we cannot do the work ourselves.

DRYDEN. (INGE, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

5 O God, assist our side: at least, avoid assisting the enemy, and leave the rest to me.

PRINCE LEOPOLD OF ANHALT-DESSAU, before his last battle. ("Prayer mythically true; mythically, not otherwise."—CARLYLE, Life of Frederick the Great. Bk. xv, ch. 14.)

6 It is more important to know that we are on God's side.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Retort, to a deputation of Southerners during the Civil War, whose spokesman had remarked, "We trust, Sir, that God is on our side."

7 When 'tis an aven thing in th' prayin', may th' best man win . . . an' th' best man will win.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, On Prayers for Victory.

8 Hence it happened that all the armed prophets conquered, all the unarmed perished. (Di qui nacque che tutti li profeti armati vinsero, e li disarmati rovinarono.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 6.

VIII—War: The Glory of Battle

9 O proud was our army that morning,
That stood where the pine darkly towers,
When Sherman said: "Boys, you are weary;
This day fair Savannah is ours!"

Then sang we a song for our chieftain
That echoed o'er river and lea,
And the stars in our banner shone brighter
When Sherman marched down to the sea.

SAMUEL H. M. BYERS, Song of Sherman's March to the Sea.

10 The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,

And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;

And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

BYRON, The Destruction of Sennacherib.

11 The combat deepens. On, ye brave,
Who rush to glory, or the grave!
Wave, Munich! all thy banners wave,
And charge with all thy chivalry!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hohenlinden. St. 7.

12 Conscience avaunt, Richard's himself again:
Hark! the shrill trumpet sounds, to horse,
away,

My soul's in arms, and eager for the fray.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act v, sc. 3.

My soul is up in arms, ready to charge.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iii, sc. 2.

13 In every heart
Are sown the sparks that kindle fiery war.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 205.

A steed, a steed of matchless speed!

A sword of metal keen!

All else to noble hearts is dross,

All else on earth is mean.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAME-GRAHAM, Cavalier's Song.

Death's couriers, Fame and Honour, call
Us to the field again.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAME-GRAHAM, Cavalier's Song.

14 They now to fight are gone,
Armour on armour shone,

Drum unto drum did groan,

To hear was wonder;

That with the cries they make

The very earth did shake,

Trumpet to trumpet spake,

Thunder to thunder.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Ballad of Agincourt. St. 8.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!"

Was there a man dismay'd?

Not tho' the soldier knew

Some one had blunder'd.

Theirs not to make reply,

Theirs not to reason why,

Theirs but to do and die.

Into the valley of Death

Rode the six hundred.

TENNYSON, The Charge of the Light Brigade.

Cannon to right of them,

Cannon to left of them,

Cannon in front of them

Volley'd and thunder'd;

Storm'd at with shot and shell,

Boldly they rode and well,

Into the jaws of Death,

Into the mouth of hell

Rode the six hundred.

TENNYSON, The Charge of the Light Brigade.

Jaws of death.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk. iv, day 1; SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 394.

1 Give us this day good heart, good enemies,
Good blows o' both sides.

JOHN FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act iii, sc. 1.

2 To arms! cried Mortimer, and couch'd his quivering lance.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 14.

Then above all the shooting and shots Rang his voice: "Put Watts into 'em! Boys, give 'em Watts!"

BRET HARTE, Caldwell of Springfield.

3 Hark! I hear the tramp of thousands,
And of armèd men the hum;

Lo! a nation's hosts have gathered
Round the quick alarming drum,—

Saying, "Come, Freeman, come!

Ere your heritage be wasted," said the quick alarming drum.

BRET HARTE, Reveillé. St. 1.

4 Good at the battle cry. (Βοὴν ἀγαθός.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 408. Frequently repeated.

5 Our business in the field of fight
Is not to question, but to prove our might.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 304. (Pope, tr.)

For bragging-time was over, and fighting-time was come.

HENRY NEWBOLT, Hawke.

6 Posterity, thinned by the crimes of its ancestors, shall hear of those battles. (Audiet pugnas, vitio parentum Rara juvenus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 23.

7 Suffer me to follow the camp. (Da mihi castra sequi.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 348.

8 Am I deceived, or was there a clash of arms? I am not deceived, it was the clash of arms; Mars approaches, and, approaching, gave the sign of war. (Fallor, an arma sonant?
Non fallimur, arma sonabant; Mars venit, et veniens bellica signa dedit.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. v, l. 549.

He saith among the trumpets, Ha, ha; and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains, and the shouting.

Old Testament: Job, xxxix, 25.

Oh, wherefore come ye forth, in triumph from the North,

With your hands, and your feet, and your raiment
all red?

And wherefore doth your rout send forth a joyous shout?

And whence be the grapes of the wine-press that ye tread?

MACAULAY, The Battle of Naseby. St. 1.

March to the battlefield,

The foe is now before us;

Each heart is Freedom's shield,

And heaven is shining o'er us.

B. E. O'MEARA, March to the Battlefield.

9 Stand! the ground's your own, my braves!
Will ye give it up to slaves?

JOHN PIERPONT, Warren's Address.

Leaden rain and iron hail

Let their welcome be!

JOHN PIERPONT, Warren's Address.

From the Rio Grande's waters to the icy lakes of Maine,

Let all exult, for we have met the enemy again.
Beneath their stern old mountains we have met them in their pride,

And rolled from Buena Vista back the battle's bloody tide.

GENERAL ALBERT PIKE, Battle of Buena Vista.

10 Once more unto the breach, dear friends,
once more;

Or close the wall up with our English dead.
In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility:

But when the blast of war blows in our ears,
Then imitate the action of the tiger,

Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood. . . .
Now set the teeth and stretch the nostril wide;

Hold hard the breath and bend up every spirit

To his full height!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.

Fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!
Draw, archers, draw your arrows to the head!
Spur your proud horses hard, and ride in blood;
Amaze the welkin with your broken staves!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 338.

Let the only walls the foe shall scale

Be ramparts of the dead!

PAUL HAMILTON HAYNE, Vicksburg.

11 When the hurly-burly's done,

When the battle's lost and won.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 1, l. 3.

The tumult and the shouting dies,

The captains and the kings depart.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional.

12 Who asks whether the enemy were defeated by strategy or valor? (Dolus an virtus, quis in hoste requirit?)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 390.

IX—War: The Terror of Battle

13 Hand to hand, and foot to foot:

Nothing there, save death, was mute;

Stroke, and thrust, and flash, and cry
For quarter, or for victory,
Mingle there with the volleying thunder.

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 24.

His trusty warriors, few but undismayed;
Firm-paced and slow, a horrid front they form,
Still as the breeze, but dreadful as the storm;
Low murmuring sounds along their banners fly,
Revenge, or death—the watch-word and reply;
Then pealed the notes, omnipotent to charm,
And the loud tocsin tolled their last alarm!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 366.

For justice guides the warrior's steel,
And vengeance strikes the blow.

J. R. DRAKE, To the Defenders of New Orleans.

Earth was the meadow, he the mower strong.
VICTOR HUGO, La Légende des Siècles.

Now deeper roll the maddening drums,
And the mingling host like ocean heaves:
While from the midst a horrid wailing comes,
And high above the fight the lonely bugle grieves.

GRENVILLE MELLEN, Ode on the Celebration of the Battle of Bunker Hill, 17 June, 1825. Mellen's only important poem, which gave him the sobriquet of "The Singer of One Song."

Arms on armour clashing bray'd
Horrible discord, and the madding wheels
Of brazen chariots rag'd; dire was the noise
Of conflict.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 209.

To the fire-eyed maid of smoky war
All hot and bleeding will we offer them.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 114.

From camp to camp, through the foul womb
of night,

The hum of either army stilly sounds, . . .
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful
neighs

Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents

The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv: Prologue, l. 4.

With clink of hammers closing rivets up.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act v, sc. 3.

Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and
death.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 6, l. 9.

Let's march without the noise of threatening drum.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 51.

Thus far into the bowels of the land

Have we march'd on without impediment.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 2, l. 3.

Put in their hands thy bruising irons of wrath,
That they may crush down with heavy fall
The usurping helmets of our adversaries!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 110.

Then more fierce
The conflict grew; the din of arms, the yell
Of savage rage, the shriek of agony,
The groan of death, commingled in one sound
Of undistinguish'd horrors.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Aztlan. Pt. ii, sec. 15, l. 170.

God of battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before?

TENNYSON, The Revenge, l. 62.

They came with banner, spear, and shield;
And it was proved in Bosworth-field,
Not long the Avenger was withstood—
Earth helped him with the cry of blood.

WORDSWORTH, Song at the Feast of Brougham Castle, l. 24.

X—War: Cannon

The cannon's breath
Wings the far hissing globe of death.

BYRON, The Siege of Corinth. St. 2.

Three hundred cannon threw up their emetic,
And thirty thousand muskets flung their pills.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 12.

Iron-sleet of arrowy shower
Hurtles in the darken'd air.

THOMAS GRAY, The Fatal Sisters.

The last argument of kings. (Ultima ratio regum.)

LOUIS XV OF FRANCE ordered this engraved on his cannon. It was ordered removed by the National assembly, 19 Aug., 1790. Its use as a motto for cannon dates back to 1613.
(BÜCHMANN, Geflügelte Worte, p. 476.)

The last argument of kings. (Ultima rason de reges.)

CALDERON, referring to war.

Don't forget your great guns, which are the most respectable arguments of the rights of kings.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to His Brother, Prince Henry, 21 April, 1759.

There are no manifestoes like cannon and musketry.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Maxims and Table-Talk.

And silence broods like spirit on the brae,
A glimmering moon begins, the moonlight runs

Over the grasses of the ancient way
Ruttet this morning by the passing guns.

JOHN MASEFIELD, August 14.

'Tis a principle of war that when you can use the lightning 'tis better than cannon.

NAPOLEON I, Sayings of Napoleon.

<sup>1</sup> The terrible rumble, grumble and roar
Telling the battle was on once more—
And Sheridan twenty miles away!
THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Sheridan's Ride.

<sup>2</sup> The cannons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their iron indignation 'gainst your walls.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 210.

<sup>3</sup> It was great pity, so it was,
That villanous saltpetre should be digg'd
Out of the bowels of the harmless earth,
Which many a good tall fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 59.
As when that devilish iron engine, wrought
In deepest hell, and fram'd by fury's skill,
With windy nitre and quick sulphur fraught,
And ramm'd with bullet round, ordain'd to kill,
Conceiveth fire, the heavens it doth fill
With thundering noise, and all the air doth choke,
That none can breathe, nor see, nor hear at will,
Through smouldry cloud of duskish stinking smoke,
That th' onely breath him daunts, who hath escap'd the stroke.

<sup>4</sup> War must be for the sake of peace, business for the sake of leisure, things necessary and useful for the sake of things noble. (Πόλεμον μὲν εἰρήνης χάριν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 13, sec. 8.

War should be undertaken in such a way as to show that its only object is peace. (Bellum autem ita suscipiatur, ut nihil aliud nisi pax quæsitâ videatur.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 23, sec. 80.

The only excuse for war is that we may live in peace unharmed. (Quare suscipienda quidem bella sunt ob eam causam, ut sine injuria in pace vivatur.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 35.

<sup>5</sup> He who did well in war just earns the right
To begin doing well in peace.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act ii, l. 354.

<sup>6</sup> There's but the twinkling of a star
Between a man of peace and war.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 957.

<sup>7</sup> Most people believe the achievements of war more important than those of peace, but this is a mistake. (Cum plerique arbitrentur res bellicas majores esse quam urbanas, minuenda est hæc opinio.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 74.

Fame may be won in peace as well as in war.

(Vel pace vel bello clarum fieri licet.)
SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. iii, sec. 1.

But the real and lasting victories are those of peace, and not of war.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Life may be given in many ways,
And loyalty to Truth be sealed
As bravely in the closet as the field.

J. R. LOWELL, Commemoration Ode. St. 5.

Peace hath her victories,
No less renown'd than war.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Lord General Cromwell.

But dream not helm and harness
The sign of valor true;
Peace hath higher tests of manhood
Than battle ever knew.
WHITTIER, The Hero. St. 19.

<sup>8</sup> I prefer the most unjust peace to the justest war that was ever waged. (Vel iniquissimam pacem justissimo bello ante ferrum.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. vii, epis. 14,
sec. 5.

It hath been said that an unjust peace is to be preferred before a just war.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Speech in the Rump Parliament.

A disadvantageous peace is better than the most just war.

ERASMUS, Colloquies.

There never was a good war or a bad peace.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Quincy, 11
Sept., 1773.

<sup>9</sup> Peace is better than war, because in peace the sons bury their fathers, but in war the fathers bury their sons.

CRÆSUS, to Cambyzes. (BACON, Apothegms.
No. 149.)

<sup>10</sup> War makes thieves and peace hangs them.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>11</sup> It is a general rule of reason, That every man ought to endeavour Peace, as far as he has hope of obtaining it; and when he cannot obtain it, that he may seek and use all helps and advantages of War.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 14.

Oh! if I were Queen of France, or, still better,
Pope of Rome,
I would have no fighting men abroad, no weeping maids at home;
All the world should be at peace; or if kings must show their might,
Why, let them who make the quarrels be the only ones to fight.

CHARLES JEFFRIES, Jeannette and Jeannot.

<sup>12</sup> Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.

Old Testament: I Kings, xx, 11.

<sup>13</sup> You need only a show of war to have peace.

2 Ye shall love peace as a means to new wars, and the short peace better than the long.

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Thus Spake Zarathustra: Of War and Warriors.

3 Invincible in peace and invisible in war.

GEN. E. F. NOYES, referring to Blaine, Conkling and Cameron, during Hayes campaign for president. (NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 176.)

4 Would you end war? Create great Peace.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, War and Laughter. No. 4.

5 "Go, with a song of peace," said Fingal; "go, Ullin, to the king of swords. Tell him that we are mighty in war; that the ghosts of our foes are many."

OSSIAN, Carthon, l. 269.

6 I am for peace: but when I speak, they are for war.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxx, 7.

I labour for peace, but when I speak unto them thereof, they make them ready to battle.

Book of Common Prayer: Psalter. Ps., cxx, 6.

7 Peace makes plenty, plenty makes pride. Pride breeds quarrel, and quarrel brings war: War brings spoil, and spoil poverty, Poverty patience, and patience peace: So peace brings war, and war brings peace.

RICHARD PUTTENHAM, English Poesie, 217. (1589)

Plenty breeds Pride; Pride, Envy; Envy, War; War, Poverty; Poverty, humble Care; Humility breeds Peace, and Peace breeds Plenty; Thus round the World doth roll alternately.

ROBERT HAYMAN, Quodlibets: The World's Whirligigge. (1630)

Poverty begets Effort; Effort begets Success; Success begets Wealth; Wealth begets Pride; Pride begets Strife; Strife begets War; War begets Poverty; Poverty begets Peace; Peace, born of Poverty, begets Effort; Effort again begets Success, and the round continues as before.

ST. CADOC. (Myvrian Archæology of Wales.)

Second Servant: This peace is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

First Servant: Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vent. Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy; muddled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men.

Second Servant: 'Tis so: and as war, in some sort, may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

First Servant: Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

Third Servant: Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars for my money.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 234.

I arraign you, war, and charge you to be man's enemy;

Yet in so accusing you, I beg that clemency be shown,

For you are a hideous reality only because of man's spiritual frailties.

Man, while yet invoking your aid, has called you the enemy of peace;

Yet that peace which he craves is, in truth, progress's most bitter foe.

REAR ADMIRAL YATES STIRLING, JR., Arraignment of War.

8 None save the victor exchanges war for peace. (Nemo nisi victor pace bellum mutavit.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. lviii, sec. 16.

Ne'er was a war did cease,

Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 484.

9 Now for the bare-pick'd bone of majesty Doth dogged war bristle his angry crest And snarleth in the gentle eyes of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 148.

10 To reap the harvest of perpetual peace By this one bloody trial of sharp war.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 2, l. 15.

We'll grasp firm hands and laugh at the old pain When it is peace. But until peace, the storm, The darkness and the thunder and the rain.

CHARLES SORLEY, When It Is Peace.

11 The drums of war, the drums of peace, Roll through our cities without cease, And all the iron halls of life Ring with the unremitting strife.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Woodman.

12 It was rather a cessation of war than a beginning of peace. (Bellum magis desierat, quam pax coeperat.)

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.

A certain seer warned Cæsar to be on his guard against a great peril on the day of the month of March which the Romans call the Ides; and when that day had come and Cæsar was on his way to the senate-house, he greeted the seer with a jest and said: "Well, the Ides of March are come,"

and the seer said to him softly: "Aye, they are come, but they are not gone." ("Αἱ μὲν δὴ Μάρτιαί Εἰδοὶ πάρεισιν." "Ναὶ πάρεισιν, ἀλλ' οὐ παρεληλύθασιν.")

PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 63, sec. 3.

On a buoy in the storm it floated and swung,

And over the waves its warning rung.

When the rock was hid by the surge's swell,

The mariners heard the warning bell.

SOUTHEY, The Inchcape Rock, l. 11.

How like the leper, with his own sad cry

Enforcing his own solitude, it tolls!

That lonely bell set in the rushing shoals,

To warn us from the place of jeopardy!

C. T. TURNER, The Buoy Bell.

Beware, I am here. (Cave, adsum.)

WASHINGTON, GEORGE

7 These are high times when a British general is to take counsel of a Virginia buckskin.

GENERAL EDWARD BRADDOCK, in rejecting George Washington's advice, 1755. (C. F. HOFFMAN, Winter in Far West, i, 67.)

8 Simple and brave, his faith awoke
Ploughmen to struggle with their fate;
Armies won battles when he spoke,
And out of Chaos sprang the state.

ROBERT BRIDGES (DROCH), Washington.

9 Where may the wearied eye repose
When gazing on the great;

Where neither guilty glory glows,
Nor despicable state?

Yes—one—the first—the last—the best—
The Cincinnatus of the West,

Whom envy dared not hate,
Bequeathed the name of Washington,
To make man blush there was but one!

BYRON; Ode to Napoleon Bonaparte. St. 19.

Shall sink while there's an echo left to air.

BYRON, The Age of Bronze. St. 5.

Washington,
Whose every battle-field is holy ground,
Which breathes of nations saved, not worlds undone.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 5.

10 Washington! Here is a fine, fearless, placid man, perfectly well seated in the center of his soul, direct and pure. . . . He could smile, drink, make love. . . . He paraphrased Horace: "Carpe diem, carpe noctem." . . . To conquer and to make love.

JOSEPH DELTEIL, Lafayette, p. 61.

11 The character, the counsels, and example of our Washington . . . will guide us through the doubts and difficulties that beset us; they will guide our children and our children's children in the paths of prosperity and peace, while America shall hold her place in the family of nations.

EDWARD EVERETT, Speech: Washington Abroad and at Home, 5 July, 1858.

No gilded dome swells from the lowly roof to catch the morning or evening beam; but the love and gratitude of united America settle upon it in one eternal sunshine. While it stands, the latest generations of the grateful children of America will make this pilgrimage to it as to a shrine; and when it shall fall, if fall it must, the memory and the name of Washington shall shed an eternal glory on the spot.

Resolutions Adopted by the Congress on the Death of Washington, December, 1799. These were the concluding words of the resolutions, which were written by Lee and introduced in the House of Representatives by John Marshall. They are often wrongly ascribed to Marshall because he read them and moved their adoption. (Annals of Congress, 6 Cong., 1 sess., col. 204.) The phrase was repeated by Lee in his memorial oration in Philadelphia, 26 Dec., 1799.

6
Washington is the mightiest name of earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty, still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name no eulogy is expected. It cannot be.
To add brightness to the sun or glory to the name of Washington is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name, and in its naked deathless splendor leave it shining on.

Calm in the strength of flawless rectitude!
J. G. WHITTIER, The Vow of Washington.

<sup>6</sup> The crude commercialism of America, its materialising spirit . . . are entirely due to the country having adopted for its national hero a man who was incapable of telling a lie.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

<sup>7</sup> Washington, the brave, the wise, the good,
Supreme in war, in council, and in peace,
Valiant without ambition, discreet without fear,

Confident without presumption.

In disaster, calm; in success, moderate; in all, himself.

The hero, the patriot, the Christian.

The father of nations, the friend of mankind,

Who, when he had won all, renounced all,

And sought in the bosom of his family and of nature, retirement,

And in the hope of religion, immortality.

UNKNOWN, Inscription on Washington's Tomb at Mount Vernon.

WASTE

<sup>8</sup> Since milk, though spilt and spoilt, does marble good,

Better be down on knees and scrub the floor,
Than sigh, "the waste would make a syllabub!"

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. vii, l. 505.

<sup>9</sup> Our wasted oil unprofitably burns,
Like hidden lamps in old sepulchral urns.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 357. A reference to the lamp which burned for fifteen hundred years in the tomb of Cicero's daughter, Tullia.

Dim lights of life, that burn a length of years
Useless, unseen, as lamps in sepulchres.

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 19.

We waste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 45.

<sup>10</sup> Wilful waste brings woeful want.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5755.

He that keeps nor crust nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 217.

And wilful waste, depend upon 't,
Brings, almost always, woeful want!

ANN TAYLOR, The Pin.

For wilful waste makes woeful want,
And I may live to say,

Oh! how I wish I had the bread

That once I threw away!

UNKNOWN, The Crust of Bread.

<sup>11</sup> Waste brings woe.

ROBERT GREENE, Sonnet.

<sup>12</sup> The plea of waste not, want not.

THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree. Ch. 8.

Waste not, want not is a law of nature.

JOHN PLATT, Economy, p. 22.

<sup>13</sup> Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not?

Old Testament: Isaiah, lv, 2.

To what purpose is this waste?

New Testament: Matthew, xxvi, 8.

<sup>14</sup> Wasted his substance with riotous living.

New Testament: Luke, xv, 13.

<sup>15</sup> Waste is not grandeur.

WILLIAM MASON, English Garden. Bk. ii, l. 20.

<sup>16</sup> The waste of plenty is the resource of scarcity.

1
I have lost both my oil and my work: i. e., both time and trouble. (Oleum et operam peridi.)

PLAUTUS, Pœnulus, l. 332. (Act i, sc. 2.) A proverbial expression used also by Plautus in Casina, ii, 3.

The work perishes fruitlessly. (Opera nequidquam perit.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 5, l. 24.

2
Spare at the spigot and let out at the bung-hole.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 193.

3
I am now about no waste, I am about thrift.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 3, l. 47.

4
You waste the treasure of your time.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 85.

The clock upbraids me with the waste of time.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 141.

5
He knows how to squander, but not to bestow. (Perdere iste sciet, donare nesciet.)
TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 30.

A nice wife and a back door
Maketh oftentimes a rich man poor.
UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Good Counsel. No. 8.

WATCH

7
You own a watch, the invention of the mind,
Though for a single motion 'tis designed,
As well as that which is with greater thought
With various springs, for various motions, wrought.

SIR RICHARD BLACKMORE, The Creation. Bk. iii. See also GOD AND THE WATCHMAKER.

8
And I had lent my watch last night to one
That dines to-day at the sheriff's.
BEN JONSON, The Alchemist. Act i, sc. 1.

9
It strikes! one, two,
Three, four, five, six. Enough, enough, dear watch,
Thy pulse hath beat enough. Now sleep and rest;
Would thou could'st make the time to do so too;

I'll wind thee up no more.
BEN JONSON, Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

10
Ever out of frame,
And never going aright, being a watch,
But being watch'd that it may still go right!
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 193.

And perchance wind up my watch.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, 67.

WATER

I—Water: Apothegms

11
You must not pump spring-water unawares
Upon a gracious public full of nerves.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 72.

12
We never know the worth of water till the well is dry.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5451.

We never miss the water till the well runs dry.
BURNES, Shropshire Folk-Lore, 590.

You never miss the water till the well runs dry.
ROWLAND BROWN. A song for many years a minstrel favorite.

When the well's dry, we know the worth of water.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

Till taught by pain,
Men really know not what good water's worth.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 84.

13
The world turns softly
Not to spill its lakes and rivers,
The water is held in its arms
And the sky is held in the water.
What is water, That pours silver,
And can hold the sky?

HILDA CONKLING, Water.

14
The conscious water saw its God and blushed.
(Nympha pudica Deum vidit, et erubuit.)

RICHARD CRASHAW, Epigrammatona Sacra: Aquæ in Vinum Versæ. See under MIRACLE.

15
Take the proverb to thine heart,
Take, and hold it fast—
"The mill cannot grind
With the water that is past."
SARAH DOUBNEY, The Lesson of the Water-Mill. See also under MILL.

16
The water that comes from the same spring cannot be fresh and salt both.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4817.

17
Unstable as water, thou shalt not excel.
Old Testament: Genesis, xlix, 4.

18
Whom your fair speeches might have made believe
That water could be carried in a sieve.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Canto xxxii, st. 39.

19
In smooth water God help me; in rough water
I will help myself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See also under TRUST.

20
The noblest of the elements is water. ("Ἀριστον μὲν ὕδωρ.")

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode i, l. 1.

21
The water will tell you, said the guide, when the travelers asked him how deep the water was.

PLATO, Theætetus. Sec. 200.

1 The noise of many waters.

Old Testament: Psalms, xciii, 4.

2 Foul water will quench fire.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Dirty water does not wash clean.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. The Italian form is, "Acqua torbida non lava."

Water washes everything. (A agoa tudo lava.)

UNKNOWN. A Portuguese proverb.

3 He seeks water in the sea.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 75.

To carry water to the sea. (Wasser in's Meer tragen.)

UNKNOWN. A German proverb.
See also under COAL.

4 As water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again.

Old Testament: II Samuel, xiv, 14.

5 Court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 10.

6 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cliv.

7 Where least expected water breaks forth. (Dove non si credo, l'acqua rompe.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

8 It is better to calm the troubled waters. (Motos præstat componere fluctus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 135.

Pouring oil on troubled water.

BEDÉ, Historia Ecclesiastica. Bk. iii, ch. 15. See under SEA IN STORM.

II—Water as a Drink

9 When water chokes you, what are you to drink to wash it down? ("Όταν τὸ ὕδωρ πνίγη, τί δεῖ ἐπιπίνειν.")

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. vii, ch. 2, sec. 10. Referred to as a proverb.

10 The wise man of Miletus [Thales] thus declared

The first of things is water.

J. S. BLACKIE, The Wise Men of Greece: Pythagoras.

Oh! I have gazed into my foaming glass,
And wished that lyre could yet again be strung
Which once rang prophet-like through Greece, and taught her

Misguided sons that the best drink was water.

C. S. CALVERLEY, Beer. St. 8.

11 A cup of cold Adam from the next purling stream.

TOM BROWN, Works. Vol. iv, p. 11.

Here's to old Adam's crystal ale,
Clear sparkling and divine,
Fair H<sub>2</sub>O, long may you flow,
We drink your health (in wine).

OLIVER HERFORD, Toast: Adam's Crystal Ale.

We'll drink Adam's ale, and we get it pool measure.

THOMAS HOOD, Drinking Song.

A Rechabite poor Will must live,
And drink of Adam's ale.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Wandering Pilgrim.

Adam's ale—about the only gift that has descended undefiled from the Garden of Eden! Nature's common carrier—not created in the rottenness of fermentation, not distilled over guilty fires!

EMERY A. STORRS, Water.

12 No poison bubbles on its brink; no blood stains its limpid glass; . . . beautiful, pure, blessed and glorious, forever the same, sparkling, pure water!

JOHN B. GOUGH, Toast to Water.

13 They drank the water clear,
Instead of wine, but yet they made good cheer.

ROBERT HENRYSON, The Town and Country Mouse.

14 No verses can please long, or live, which are written by water drinkers. (Nulla placere diu nec vivere carmina possunt, Quæ scribuntur aquæ potioribus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 2.

15 Now to rivulets from the mountains
Point the rods of fortune-tellers;

Youth perpetual dwells in fountains,—
Not in flasks, and casks, and cellars.

LONGFELLOW, Drinking Song. St. 8.

16 I'm very fond of water;
It ever must delight

Each mother's son and daughter,
When qualified aright.

CHARLES NEAVES, I'm Very Fond of Water.

Pure water is the best of gifts that man to man can bring,

But who am I that I should have the best of anything?

Let princes revel at the pump, let peers with ponds make free,

Whiskey, or wine, or even beer is good enough for me.

UNKNOWN. (Spectator, 31 July, 1920.) Attributed to Lord Neaves, and also to G. W. E. Russell. (For other versions see Notes and Queries, 23 Oct., 1897.)

17 Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner.
honest water which ne'er left man i' the mire.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, 58.

18 'Tis a little thing
To give a cup of water; yet its draught

Of cool refreshment, drained by fevered lips,
May give a shock of pleasure to the frame
More exquisite than when nectarian juice
Renews the joy of life in happiest hours.

THOMAS NOON TALFOURD, Ion. Act i, sc. 2.

<sup>1</sup>
The old oaken bucket, the iron-bound bucket,
The moss-covered bucket that hangs in the well!

SAMUEL WOODWORTH, The Bucket.

How sweet from the green mossy brim to receive it,

As poised on the curb it inclined to my lips!

Not a full blushing goblet would tempt me to leave it,

The brightest that beauty or revelry sips.

SAMUEL WOODWORTH, The Bucket.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE, see under THIRST.

III—Water: Still Waters

<sup>2</sup>
Take heed of still waters, they quick pass away.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>3</sup>
Small griefs find tongues; full casks are ever found

To give, if any, yet but little sound.

Deep waters noiseless are; and this we know,
That chiding streams betray small depths below.

ROBERT HERRICK, To His Mistress.

Passions are likened best to floods and streams:

The shallow murmur, but the deep are dumb.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Silent Lover.

The deepest rivers make least din,

The silent soul doth most abound in care.

EARL OF STIRLING, Aurora: Song. (1604)

See also GRIEF: SILENT AND VOCAL.

<sup>4</sup>
But there is not, as they say, any worse water than water that sleeps. (Mais il n'est, comme on dit, pire eau que l'eau qui dort.)

MOLIÈRE, Tartuffe. Act i, sc. 1.

Have a care of a silent dog and still water. (Cave tibi a cane muto et aqua silenti.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

<sup>5</sup>
The deepest rivers flow with the least sound.
(Altissima quæque flumina minimo sono labuntur.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. vii, ch. 10.

Smooth waters been oft sithes deep.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 186. (c. 1430)

Water runneth smoothest where it is deepest.

JOHN LYLY, Sapho and Phao. Act ii, sc. 4. (1584)

Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 53. (1590)

<sup>6</sup>
Shallow brooks murmur most, deep silent slide away.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia: Thirsis and Dorus. (1590)

Still waters are the deepest, but the shallowest brooks brawl the most.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 6.

IV—Water: Water and Rock

<sup>7</sup>
The unceasing drop of water, as they say,
Will wear a channel in the hardest stone.

BION SMYRNAEUS, Fragments. No. 2.

By constant dripping a drop of water hollows out a rock. (Πέτρην κοιλώνει ῥαυὶς ὕδατος ἐνδελεχέει.)

CHERILUS OF SAMOS, Fragments. No. 9.

Not by strength but by constant falling does the drop hollow out the stone. (Gutta cavet lapidem non vi, sed sæpe cadendo.)

GARIOPONTUS, Passionarius, i, 17. (c. 1050);

RICHARD, Monk of St. Victor, Paris, Adnotationes Mystice in Psalmos. (c. 1165) See

Migne, Patrologia Latina. Vol. cxcvi, p. 389.

Quoted by Galen (Vol. viii, p. 27): "Gutta cavat lapidem sæpe cadentis aquæ."

<sup>8</sup>
The fall of dropping water wears away the stone. (Stillicidi casus lapidem cavat.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, sec. 314.

<sup>9</sup>
The soft drops of rain pierce the hard marble.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 81.

<sup>10</sup>
What is harder than rock, or softer than water? Yet soft water hollows out hard rock. Only persevere. (Quid magis est saxo durum, quid mollidus unda? Dura tamen molli saxa caventur aqua. Persta modo.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 475.

Stones are hollowed out by the constant dropping of water. (Caducis Percussu crebro saxa cavantur aquis.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 39.

Drops of water hollow out a stone; a ring is worn thin by use. (Gutta cavat lapidem, consumitur anulus usu.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 10, l. 5.

<sup>11</sup>
Water continually dropping will wear hard rocks hollow.

PLUTARCH, Of the Training of Children.

The waters wear the stones.

Old Testament: Job, xiv, 19.

<sup>12</sup>
No rock so hard but that a little wave

May beat admission in a thousand years.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iii, l. 138.

WATERLOO

<sup>13</sup>
The battle of Waterloo and its results appeared to me to put back the clock of the world six degrees.

ROBERT HALL. (GREGORY, Life. Note A.)

1 Every man meets his Waterloo at last.
WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech on John Brown, 1 Nov., 1859.

When the first just and friendly man appeared on the earth, from that day a fatal Waterloo was visible for all men of pride and fraud and blood.
CHARLES FLETCHER DOLE, The Coming People.

2 John Bull was beat at Waterloo!
They'll swear to that in France.
WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED, Waterloo.

3 So great a soldier taught us there
What long-enduring hearts could do
In that world-earthquake, Waterloo!
TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 131.

4 Up, Guards, and at 'em!
Attributed to the Duke of Wellington, at the crisis of the battle of Waterloo. Denied by him.

What I must have said, and possibly did say was, "Stand up, Guards!" and then gave the order to attack.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Letter to J. W. Croker, answering a letter written 14 March, 1852. (J. W. CROKER, Memoirs, p. 544. MAXWELL, Life of Wellington.)

5 The battle of Waterloo was won on the playing-field of Eton.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON. (SELWYN, Waterloo, A Lay of Jubilee.) Wellington's remark was, while watching a cricket match at Eton, "The battle of Waterloo was won here."

WEAKNESS

6 He knows not how to wink at human frailty,
Or pardon weakness that he never felt.
ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 4.

7 The cord breaketh at last by the weakest pull.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions.

8 The concessions of the weak are the concessions of fear.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

9 People in general will much better bear being told of their vices and crimes than of their failings and weaknesses.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Nov., 1749.

10 To be in the weakest camp is to be in the strongest school.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Heretics.

11 Weakened and wasted to skin and bone.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week ii, day 4. (Sylvester, tr.)

12 All hands shall be feeble, and all knees shall be weak as water.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, vii, 17.

Yesterday I was firm as a rock, today I'm as weak as water again.

A. W. PINERO, Gay Lord Quex. Act iv.

13 Amiable weakness.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. x, ch. 8.

Amiable weakness of human nature.

14 Weak things united become strong.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5460. See also UNITY.

15 And the weak soul, within itself unblest,
Leans for all pleasure on another's breast.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 271.

16 When you know the weakness of a man whom you want to please, you must be very clumsy if you do not succeed. (Quand on connoit le défaut d'un homme à qui l'on veut plaire, il faut être bien maladroit pour n'y pas réussir.)

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. viii, ch. 2. See also under FAULT.

17 There are two kinds of weakness, that which breaks and that which bends.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Shakespeare Once More.

Soft-heartedness, in times like these,
Shows softness in the upper story!

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 7.

18 To be weak is miserable, Doing or suffering.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 157.

If to be weak is to be wretched—miserable,
As the lost angel by a human voice
Hath mournfully pronounced.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. v, l. 318.

19 Fine by defect, and delicately weak.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 43.

20 Every man has his weak side.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Men's weaknesses are often necessary to the purposes of life.

MAURICE MAETERLINCK, Joyzelle. Act ii.

21 Man but a rush against Othello's breast,
And he retires.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 270.

22 What 'twas weak to do

'Tis weaker to lament, once being done.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 3.

23 In a just cause the weak o'ercome the strong.
(Τοῖς τοῖ δικαίους ἡὺ βραχὺς νικᾷ μέγαν.)

SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Coloneus, l. 880.

We have unmistakable proof that throughout all past time, there has been a ceaseless devouring of the weak by the strong.

WEATHER

I—Weather: Apothegms

<sup>4</sup> And altogether it's very bad weather,
And an unpleasant sort of a night!

R. H. BARHAM, The Nurse's Story.

<sup>5</sup> To talk of the weather, it's nothing but folly,
For when it rains on the hill, it shines in the valley.

DENHAM, Proverbs, 17.

Change of weather is the discourse of fools.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. Pt. ii. (1659)

When two Englishmen meet, their first talk is of the weather.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 11.

<sup>6</sup> We will not woo foul weather all too soon,
Or nurse November on the lap of June.

THOMAS HOOD, The Plea of the Midsummer Fairies, l. 827.

<sup>7</sup> Oh, what a blamed uncertain thing
This pesky weather is!

It blew and snow and then it thew

And now, by jing, it's friz!

PHILANDER JOHNSON, Shooting Stars.

First it rained, and then it snow,
Then it friz, and then it thew,
And then it friz again.

UNKNOWN. An old jingle.

<sup>8</sup> The weather and my mood have little connection. I have my foggy and my fine days within me.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 107.

<sup>9</sup> It hain't no use to grumble and complane,
It's jest as easy to rejoice;

When God sorts out the weather and sends rain,

Why rain's my choice.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Wet-Weather Talk.

<sup>10</sup> I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 16.

<sup>11</sup> Many can brook the weather that love not the wind.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 34.

<sup>12</sup> The weather is beautiful; but as Noodle says (with his eyes beaming with delight), "We shall suffer for this, sir, by-and-by."

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Sir George Phillips, 22 Dec., 1836.

<sup>13</sup> Plaguy twelve-penny weather.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Oct., 1710.

Shilling weather.

JOHN GAY, Letter to Swift, meaning weather where chair-hire or coach-hire was necessary.

<sup>14</sup> There is a sumptuous variety about New England weather that compels the stranger's admiration—and regret. . . . In the Spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-six different kinds of weather inside of twenty-four hours.

MARK TWAIN, New England Weather: Speech at Dinner of New England Society, New York, 22 Dec., 1876.

II—Weather: Some Omens

<sup>15</sup> A dry March and a dry May portend a wholesome summer, if there be a showering April between.

FRANCIS BACON, Sylva Sylvarum. Cent. ix, sec. 807.

<sup>16</sup> Fair weather cometh out of the north.
Old Testament: Job, xxxvii, 22.

<sup>17</sup> When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather today for the sky is red and lowering.

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 2-3.

Evening red and morning grey
Will speed a traveller on his way;
But evening grey and morning red
Will pour down rain upon his head.

DENHAM, Proverbs, 8.

The evening red, and the morning grey,
Is the sign of a fair day.

MILLS, Essay on Weather, 34.

<sup>18</sup> A sunshiny shower
Won't last half an hour.

Rain before seven,
Fair by eleven.

The South wind brings wet weather,
The North wind wet and cold together;
The West wind always brings us rain,
The East wind blows it back again.

March winds and April showers
Bring forth May flowers.

Rainbow at night is the sailor's delight;
Rainbow at morning, sailors, take warning.

UNKNOWN, Old Nursery Rhymes.

1 The South wind brings wet weather,
The North wind wet and cold together;
The West wind always brings us rain.
The East wind blows it back again.

If the sun in red doth set
The next day surely will be wet;

If the sun doth set in grey,
The next will be a rainy day.

UNKNOWN, Lines by a Pessimist.

WEBSTER, DANIEL

2 Men hang out their signs indicative of their respective trades. Shoemakers hang a gigantic shoe; jewelers a monster watch; even the dentist hangs out a gold tooth; but up in Franconi Mountains God Almighty has hung out a sign to show that in New England He makes men.

DANIEL WEBSTER, referring to the Great Stone Face.

3 Mrs. Hawthorne could not bring herself quite to believe that he [Webster] was not as great as he looked; but Hawthorne had formed a somewhat different opinion. This opinion is set forth, by the by, in the story of "The Great Stone Face."

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, Hawthorne and His Wife. Vol. i, p. 476.

But now, again, there were reports and many paragraphs in the newspapers, affirming that the likeness of the Great Stone Face had appeared upon the broad shoulders of a certain eminent statesman. . . . Instead of the rich man's wealth and the warrior's sword, he had but a tongue; and it was mightier than both together. So wonderfully eloquent was he, that whatever he might choose to say, his auditors had no choice but to believe him; wrong looked like right, and right like wrong; for when it pleased him, he could make a kind of illuminated fog with his mere breath, and obscure the natural daylight with it. His tongue, indeed, was a magic instrument; sometimes it rumbled like thunder; sometimes it warbled like the sweetest music.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, The Great Stone Face.

Such a figure, such an intellect, such a heart, were certainly never combined before to save the world. . . . The front of Jove, the regal, commanding air which cleared a path before him, the voice of thunder and music, the unfathomable eye—all these external signs said, "Here is a Great Man!"

SOPHIA PEABODY HAWTHORNE. (JULIAN HAW-THORNE, Hawthorne and His Wife. Vol. i, p. 476.)

4 How will this look in history?

DANIEL WEBSTER, on receiving a telegram announcing the 57th ballot, Scott 159, Fillmore 112, Webster 21, at the convention of 1852.

5 Have I—wife, son, doctor, friends, are you all there?—have I, on this occasion, said anything unworthy of Daniel Webster?

DANIEL WEBSTER, reported as his last words. (FUESS, Daniel Webster; ADAMS, The Godlike Daniel.) More probably his last words were, "I still live," possibly a reference to the doctor's order to an attendant, "If he is alive in an hour, give him some brandy."

6 Thirty years ago, when Mr. Webster at the bar or in the Senate filled the eyes and minds of young men, you might often hear cited as Mr. Webster's three rules: first, never to do to-day what he could defer till to-morrow; secondly, never to do himself what he could make another do for him; and, thirdly, never to pay any debt today. Well, they are none the worse for being already told, in the last generation, of Sheridan; and we find in Grimm's Mémoires that Sheridan got them from the witty D'Argenson.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

7 I would not attempt to vie with the honorable gentleman from Massachusetts in a field where every nigger is his peer and every billy-goat his master.

JOHN RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE, of Daniel Webster, who, Randolph believed, had accused him of impotence. (ADAMS, The Godlike Daniel, p. 169.) The fact of Randolph's impotence was verified after his death.

8 Daniel Webster struck me much like a steam-engine in trousers.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch. 9. Vol. i, p. 265.)

God Almighty never created a man half as wise as he looks.

THOMAS CARLYLE, referring to Webster.

God is only the president of the day, and Webster is his orator.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

9 So fallen! so lost! the light withdrawn
Which once he wore!

The glory from his gray hairs gone
For evermore!

WHITTIER, Ichabod.

Thou,
Whom the rich heavens did so endow
With eyes of power and Jove's own brow, . . .
New England's stateliest type of man,
In port and speech Olympian;
Whom no one met, at first, but took

A second awed and wondering look.

WEED

1
Call us not weeds; we are flowers of the sea.
E. L. AVELINE, The Mother's Fables.

Still must I on, for I am as a weed,
Flung from the rock, on Ocean's foam, to sail
Where'er the surge may sweep.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 2.

2
The flowers are loved, the weeds are spurned,
But for them both the suns are burned;
And when, at last, they fail the day,
The long night folds them all away.
JOHN VANCE CHENEY, Weeds and Flowers.

Turning our seed-wheat-kennel tares,
To burn-grain thistle, and to vapory darnel, Cockle, wild oats, rough burs, corn-cumbring
tares.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

Nothing teems

But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,
Losing both beauty and utility.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 51.

Bur-docks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 4.

4
What I thought was a flower is only a weed,
and is worthless.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish.
Pt. vii.

5
A weed is no more than a flower in disguise,
Which is seen through at once, if love give a man eyes.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 97.

To win the secret of a weed's plain heart
Reveals some clue to spiritual things.

J. R. LOWELL, Sonnets. No. 25.

6
The richest soil, if uncultivated, produces the rankest weeds.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Caius Marcius Coriolanus.
Ch. 1, sec. 2.

Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 54.

7
He that bites on every weed must needs light on poison.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

One ill weed mars a whole mess of pottage.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The weed o'ergoes the corn.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

8
Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;

Suffer them now, and they 'll o'ergrow the garden

And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 31.

The noisome weeds, which without profit suck
The soil's fertility from wholesome flowers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 38.

9
O thou weed,
Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet
That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 67.

10
"Ay," quoth my uncle Gloucester,
"Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace:"

And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 12.

You said that idle weeds are fast in growth.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 103.

The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;

Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xciv.

12
Once in a golden hour
I cast to earth a seed.
Up there came a flower,
The people said, a weed.

TENNYSON, The Flower.

13
Evil weed is soon grown.

UNKNOWN. (HULME, Proverb Lore, 12. c.
1490)

Ill weed groweth fast.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

An ill weed grows apace.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, An Humourous Day's Mirth. (1599)

Great weeds grow apace.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Coxcomb. Act
iv, sc. 4. (1612)

How soon prospers the vicious weed!

WELLINGTON, DUKE OF

See also Waterloo

14
The Duke of Wellington brought to the post of first minister immortal fame; a quality of success which would almost seem to include all others.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. i, ch. 3.

1 No more, surveying with an eye impartial
The long line of the coast,
Shall the gaunt figure of the old Field Marshal

Be seen upon his post!

LONGFELLOW, The Warden of the Cinque Ports.

2 The last great Englishman is low.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 18.

Foremost captain of his time,
Rich in saving common-sense,
And, as the greatest only are,
In his simplicity sublime.
O good grey head that all men knew,
O voice from which their omens all men drew,
O iron nerve to true occasion true,
O fallen at length that tower of strength
Which stood four-square to all the winds that blew!

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 31.

For this is England's greatest son,
He that gain'd a hundred fights,
Nor ever lost an English gun.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 95.

O saviour of the silver-coasted isle.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 136.

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust;
He is gone who seem'd so great.—
Gone; but nothing can bereave him
Of the force he made his own
Being here, and we believe him
Something far advanced in State,
And that he wears a truer crown
Than any wreath that man can weave him.
Speak no more of his renown,
Lay your earthly fancies down,
And in the vast cathedral leave him,
God accept him, Christ receive him.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 270.

3 But one thing is needful.

New Testament: Luke, x, 42. (Porro unum est necessarium.—Vulgate.) Motto of the Duke of Wellington. Also: Virtute fortuna comes, "Good fortune is the companion of valour."

4 Odd, how all dying things turn to the West, the region of questions? So mourners on the Nile consigned the mummied citizen to the mercies of the West and soldiers of the recent muddy mess in upper France "went West" to join Hiawatha, King Arthur and the ec-static nun Petronilla who saw God descending from the West in the shape of a fish-hook to lift her virgin soul into bliss.

WHITMAN, WALT

5
We go to Whitman for his attitude toward life and the universe; we go to stimulate and fortify our souls; in short for his cosmic philosophy incarnated in a man.

JOHN BURROUGHS, The Last Harvest.

W. W. is the Christ of the modern world—he alone redeems it, justifies it, shows it divine.

JOHN BURROUGHS, Entry in Journal on Death of Whitman.

6
As Cæsar Augustus found a Rome of brick and left it a Rome of marble, so Walt Whitman found the everyday world around us a world of familiar substance and left it a world aureoled in mystery.

BENJAMIN DE CASSERES, Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 172.

He was integrated into life,
 He was a member of life,
 He was harmonized, orchestrated, identified with the program of being.

ZONA GALE, Walt Whitman.

8
The American poet Whitman
 Did little to assist the razor industry,
 But he erected a plausible philosophy
 Of indolence,
 Which, without soft concealments,
 He called Loafing. . . .
 He was deficient in humour,

But he had a good time.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, A Happy Life.

9
Walt Whitman, you enigma,
 You egoist, who flaunt yourself
 Naked to the world,
 You many-sided one;
 You preacher of beauty In halting lines
 That sweep one before their flood
 And bore one to death.

LINCOLN REIS, Walt Whitman.

10
Into "the troughs of Zolaism," as Lord Tennyson calls them (a phrase which bears rather unduly hard on the quadrupedal pig), I am happy to believe that Mr. Whitman has never dipped a passing nose: he is a writer of something occasionally like English, and a man of something occasionally like genius. . . . Under the dirty clumsy claws of a harper whose plectrum is a muck-rake any tune will become a chaos of discords.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Whitmania.

Democracy's divine protagonist.

FRANCIS HOWARD WILLIAMS, Walt Whitman.

WHITTIER, JOHN GREENLEAF

12
Great master of the poet's art!
 Surely the sources of thy powers
 Lie in that true and tender heart
 Whose every utterance touches ours.

PHÆBE CARY, John Greenleaf Whittier.

Thou hast battled for the right
 With many a brave and trenchant word,
 And shown us how the pen may fight
 A mightier battle than the sword.

PHÆBE CARY, John Greenleaf Whittier.

13
So long as liberty is loved,
 And bud and blossom blown,
 And simple thought and aim approved,
 And honest life is known,
 So long shall Whittier lift his face
 O'er some of larger view,
 And keep 'mid greater names his place,
 Because his heart was true.

JOHN CAMERON GRANT, John Greenleaf Whittier.

14
The clear sweet singer with the crown of snow
 Not whiter than the thoughts that housed below.

J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis: Postscript, 1887.

15
Prophet and priest he stood
 In the storm of embattled years;
 The broken chain was his harp's refrain,
 And the peace that is balm for tears.

MARGARET SANGSTER, John Greenleaf Whittier.

16
Gracious thine age, thy youth was strong,

For Freedom touched the tongue with fire;
To sing the right and fight the wrong
Thine equal hand held bow or lyre.

WILLIAM HAYES WARD, To John Greenleaf Whittier.

Some blamed him, some believed him good,
The truth lay doubtless 'twixt the two;
He reconciled as best he could
Old faith and fancies new.

In him the grave and playful mixed,
And wisdom held with folly truce,
And Nature compromised betwixt
Good fellow and recluse.
WHITTIER, My Namesake. Of himself.

<sup>3</sup> The happiness of the wicked flows away as a torrent. (Le bonheur des méchants comme un torrent s'écoule.)

RACINE, Athalie. Act ii, sc. 7.

Old Testament: I Samuel, xxiv, 13. David to Saul. Sometimes referred to as the oldest of all proverbs.

<sup>6</sup> The sun shines even on the wicked. (Et sceleratis sol oritur.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iii, sec. 25.

<sup>7</sup> And now am I, if a man should speak truly, little better than one of the wicked.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 105.

<sup>8</sup> What rein can hold licentious wickedness When down the hill he holds his fierce career?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 22.

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. ii, l. 489.

<sup>10</sup> 'Cause I's wicked,—I is. I's mighty wicked, anyhow, I can't help it.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 20.

<sup>11</sup> The wicked are wicked, no doubt, and they go astray and they fall, and they come by their deserts; but who can tell the mischief which the very virtuous do?

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Bk. i, ch. 20.

<sup>12</sup> God himself cannot procure good for the wicked.

WELSH TRIAD. (EMERSON, Poetry and Imagination.)

WICKLIFFE, JOHN

<sup>13</sup> Thus this brook hath conveyed his ashes into Avon, Avon into Severn, Severn into the narrow seas, they into the main ocean. And thus the ashes of Wickliffe are the emblem of his doctrine, which now is dispersed all the world over.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Sec. ii, bk. iv, par. 53. By order of the Council of Constance, the body of John Wickliffe was exhumed in 1428, burned to ashes, and the ashes thrown into a neighboring brook called the Swift.

What Heraclitus would not laugh, or what Democritus would not weep? . . . For though they digged up his body, burned his bones, and drowned his ashes, yet the word of God and truth of his doctrine, with the fruit and success thereof, they could not burn.

JOHN FOXE, Book of Martyrs. Vol. i, p. 606.

<sup>14</sup> As thou these ashes, little brook, wilt bear Into the Avon, Avon to the tide Of Severn, Severn to the narrow seas, Into main ocean they, this deed accursed An emblem yields to friends and enemies How the bold teacher's doctrine, sanctified By truth, shall spread, throughout the world dispersed.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets: Wickliffe.

<sup>15</sup> The Avon to the Severn runs,
The Severn to the sea;
And Wickliffe's dust shall spread abroad
Wide as the waters be.

UNKNOWN. (Quoted by Daniel Webster, Address Before the Sons of New Hampshire, 1849; and by Rev. John Cumming, Voices of the Dead.)

WIDOW

I—Widow: Apothegms

<sup>16</sup> These widows, sir, are the most perverse creatures in the world.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 335.

"And be very careful o' widders all your life, 'specially if they've kept a public-house, Sammy."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20.

<sup>17</sup> There's Lucinda wears the willow garland for you.

NATHANIEL FIELD, Woman's a Weathercock. Act i. (1612)

Great pity 'twas that one so prim
Should ever wear the willow.

JOHN FARMER, Musa Pedestris, 46.

Tell him, in hope he 'll prove a widower shortly,
I 'll wear the willow garland for his sake.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 227.

<sup>18</sup> Sorrow for a husband is like a pain in the elbow, sharp and short.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4241.

And here do I see what creatures widows are in weeping for their husbands and then presently leaving off; but I cannot wonder at it, the cares of the world taking place of all other passions.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 Oct., 1667.

<sup>1</sup>
We'll play at widows, and we'll pass our time
Railing against the perfidy of man.

W. S. GILBERT, Pygmalion and Galatea. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>2</sup>
A widow of doubtful age will marry almost any sort of a white man.

HORACE GREELEY, Letter to Dr. Rufus Griswold.

<sup>3</sup>
Who marries a widow and two daughters marries three thieves.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>4</sup>
On Margate beach, where the sick one roams,
And the sentimental reads;
Where the maiden flirts, and the widow comes—

Like the ocean—to cast her weeds.

THOMAS HOOD, The Mermaid of Margate.

<sup>5</sup>
Be wary how you marry one that hath cast her rider, I mean a widow.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Letter of Advice.

You must also be wary how you marry a widow, for so you will be subject to have a death's head put often in your dish.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Vol. ii, p. 666.

<sup>6</sup>
I caused the widow's heart to sing for joy.
Old Testament: Job, xxix, 13.

<sup>7</sup>
One can, with dignity, be wife and widow but once. (On n'est, avec dignité, épouse et veuve qu'une fois.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 100. See also MARRIAGE:
SECOND MARRIAGE.

<sup>8</sup>
To marry a widow, in slang, means to make one's fortune, but it doesn't always work that way. (Épouser une veuve, en bon français, signifie faire sa fortune: il n'opère pas toujours ce qu'il signifie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. iii, No. 72.

<sup>9</sup>
Did ye hear of the Widow Malone, Ohone!
Who lived in the town of Athlone, Alone?

Oh! she melted the hearts

Of the swains in them parts,

So lovely the Widow Malone.

SAMUEL LOVER, The Widow Malone.

To be poking the fire all alone is a sin,

Och hone! Widow Machree.

Sure the shovel and tongs

To each other belongs,

While the kettle sings songs

Full of family glee;

Yet alone with your cup,

Like a hermit, you sup,

Och hone! Widow Machree.

SAMUEL LOVER, Widow Machree. St. 3.

<sup>10</sup>
The shameless Chloe placed on the tombs of her seven husbands the inscription, "The work of Chloe." How could she have expressed herself more plainly?

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, ep. 15.

This turf has drank a widow's tear;

Three of her husbands slumber here.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph in Staffordshire.

<sup>11</sup>
From thousands of our undone widows

One may derive some wit.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act i, sc. 2.

<sup>12</sup>
And I'd rather be bride to a lad gone down

Than widow to one safe home.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Keen.

<sup>13</sup>
No crafty widows shall approach my bed;

Those are too wise for bachelors to wed.

POPE, January and May, l. 107.

<sup>14</sup>
Marilla W. Ricker has often told us that widows are divided into two classes—the bereaved and relieved. She forgot the deceived—the grass widows.

VICTOR ROBINSOLL, William Godwin. (Truth-seeker, 6 Jan., 1906.)

<sup>15</sup>
For a yeoman of Kent, with his yearly rent,

There was never a widow could say him nay.

SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 40.

<sup>16</sup>
A married man can do anything he likes if his wife don't mind. A widower can't be too careful.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 54.

<sup>17</sup>
A widow must be a mourner.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. ii, sec. 3.

Widowhood is pitiable in its solitariness and loss, but amiable and comely when it is adorned with gravity and purity, and not sullied with remembrances of the passed licence, nor with present desires of returning to a second bed.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. ii, sec. 3.

II—Widow: Wooing a Widow

See also Wooing

<sup>18</sup>
Do, but dally not, that's the widow's phrase.

LODOWICK BARRY, Ram-Alley. Act ii. (1611)

He that will woo a widow must not dally,

He must make hay while the sun doth shine;

He must not stand with her, shall I, shall I,

But boldly say, Widow, thou must be mine.

UNKNOWN, Cupid's Solicitor for Love.

<sup>19</sup>
A good occasion of courtship is when the widow returns from the funeral.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 288.

Marry a widow before she leaves mourning.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>20</sup>
Honour is like a widow, won

With brisk attempt and putting on;

With ent'ring manfully, and urging,

Not slow approaches, like a virgin.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 913. (1663)

Fortune is like a widow won,
And truckles to the bold alone.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Fortune-Hunter.
Canto ii. (1735)

He that will woo a widow must take time by the forelock.

THOMAS DELONEY, Jack of Newberry. Ch. 11.
(c. 1597)

This is the way to have a widowhood,
By getting to her bed.

NATHANIEL FIELD, Amends for Ladies. Act iv,
sc. 1. (1618)

1 He that woos a maid must come seldom in her sight,

But he that woos a widow must woo her day and night.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 49. (1670)

He that would woo a maid must feign, lie, and flatter,

But he that woos a widow must down with his britches and at her.

NATHANIEL SMITH, Quakers Spiritual Court,
13. (1669)

2 He'll have a lusty widow now,
That shall be woo'd and wedded in a day.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
iv, sc. 2, l. 50.

WIFE

I—Wife: Apothegms

3 Wives are young men's mistresses, companions for middle age, and old men's nurses.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Marriage and Single Life. (Quoted by Burton, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, 2, 5.)

4 Every man who is high up loves to think he has done it all himself; and the wife smiles, and lets it go at that. It's only our joke. Every woman knows that.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows.
Act iv.

5 Think you, if Laura had been Petrarch's wife,
He would have written sonnets all his life?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 8.

6 Cæsar's wife must be above suspicion.

JULIUS CÆSAR. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Cæsar. Sec. 10.) For full quotations see under CÆSAR.

He makes a false wife that suspects a true.

NATHANIEL FIELD, Amends for Ladies. Act i,
sc. 1.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Countess Grey, 11 Sept., 1835.

5 An ideal wife is any woman who has an ideal husband.

BOOTH TARKINGTON, Looking Forward, p. 97.

6 A man whose wife was no better than she should be.

UNKNOWN, Pasquils Jests, 35. (1604)

II—Wife: Her Choice

See also Marriage: Advice

7 I want (who does not want?) a wife, Affectionate and fair,

To solace all the woes of life,

And all its joys to share;

Of temper sweet, of yielding will,

Of firm yet placid mind,

With all my faults to love me still,

With sentiment refin'd.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Man Wants But Little.

I want a girl just like the girl that married dear old dad.

HARRY VON TILZER. Title and refrain of popular song. (1911)

8 And while the wicket falls behind Her steps, I thought if I could find A wife I need not blush to show

I've little further now to go.

He has great need of a wife that marries mamma's darling.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1872.

12 Good sense without vanity, a penetrating judgment without a disposition to satire, with about as much religion as my William likes, struck me with a wish that she was my William's wife.

HANNAH GODWIN, Letter to her Brother William, recommending Miss Gay.

13 In choosing a wife and buying a sword we ought not to trust another.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

14 The best or worst thing to man, for this life, Is good or ill choosing his good or ill wife.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2.

When it shall please God to bring thee to man's estate, use great providence and circumspection in choosing thy wife; for thence will spring all thy future good or evil: and it is an action of life, like unto a stratagem of war, wherein a man can err but once.

WILLIAM LORD BURGHLEY, Ten Precepts to His Son.

The sum of all that makes a just man happy Consists in the well-choosing of his wife: And there, well to discharge it, does require Equality of years, of birth, of fortune; For beauty being poor and not cried up By birth or wealth, can truly mix with neither. And wealth, when there's such difference in years, And fair descent, must make the yoke uneasy.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act iv, sc. 1.

I fear that in the election of a wife, As in a project of war, to err but once Is to be undone for ever.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Anything for a Quiet Life. Act i, sc. 1.

15 Who will have a handsome wife, let him choose her upon Saturday, and not upon Sunday, viz. when she is in her fine clothes.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 22.

A prudent wife is from the Lord.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 14.

All other goods by Fortune's hand are given;

A wife is the peculiar gift of heaven.

POPE, January and May, l. 51.

<sup>16</sup> A cheerful wife is the joy of life.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A good wife and health are man's best wealth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>17</sup> His house she enters, there to be a light,

Shining within, when all without is night;
A guardian angel o'er his life presiding,
Doubling his pleasures, and his cares dividing.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 349.

1 The partner of my soul,
My wife, the kindest, dearest, and the truest,
That ever wore the name.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Royal Convert. Act ii, sc. 1.

2 He counsels a divorce; a loss of her
That, like a jewel, has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lustre.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 31.

That man i' the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that: thou art, alone,
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 134.

You are my true and honourable wife,
As dear to me as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 288.

Dear as the light that visits these sad eyes,
Dear as the ruddy drops that warm my heart.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 40.

3 O ye gods,
Render me worthy of this noble wife!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 302.

4 My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no
wife.

O, insupportable! O heavy hour!
Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
Of sun and moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 97.

The gentle lady married to the Moor;
And Heavenly Una with her milk-white lamb.

WORDSWORTH, Personal Talk. No. 3.

What is there left but sorrow, for a man alone in the world, his wife gone?

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 340.)

5 What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband?

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 175.

6 Of earthly goods, the best is a good wife;
A bad, the bitterest curse of human life.

(Γυναῖκος οὐδὲ χρημ' ἀνὴρ ληϊζται Ἐσθλῆς ἀμεινον, οὐδὲ βέλγιον κακῆς.)

SIMONIDES, Epigram. Frag. 7.

A man's best fortune or his worst is a wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 28.

7 Trusty, dusky, vivid, true,
With eyes of gold and bramble-dew,

Steel-true and blade-straight
The great Artificer made my mate.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Wife.

Teacher, tender comrade, wife,
A fellow-farer true through life,
Heart-whole and soul-free,
The august Father gave to me.

R. L. STEVENSON, My Wife.

8 A courage to endure and to obey;
A hate of gossip parlance, and of sway,
Crown'd Isabel, thro' all her placid life,
The queen of marriage, a most perfect wife.

TENNYSON, Isabel. St. 2.

9 My wife is one of the best wimin on this continent, altho' she isn't always gentle as a lamb, with mint sauce.

ARTEMUS WARD, A War Meeting.

10 The world well tried—the sweetest thing in life

Is the unclouded welcome of a wife.

N. P. WILLIS, The Lady Jane. Canto ii, st. 11.

11 She gave me eyes, she gave me ears;
And humble cares, and delicate fears;
A heart, the fountain of sweet tears;
And love, and thought, and joy.

WORDSWORTH, The Sparrow's Nest. Referring to his wife.

IV—Wife: A Curse

12 What is it, then, to have, or have no wife,
But single thralldom, or a double strife?

FRANCIS BACON, The World.

13 I have a wife, the worst that may be;
For though the fiend to her y-coupled were,
She would him overmatch, I dare well swear.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale: Prologue, l. 6.

14 What rugged ways attend the noon of life!
Our sun declines, and with what anxious strife,
What pain, we tug that galling load, a wife!

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act v, sc. 15.

Lord Erskine, at woman presuming to rail,
Called a wife a tin canister tied to one's tail;
And fair Lady Anne, while this rillery he carries on,
Seems hurt at his lordship's degrading comparison.

But wherefore degrading, if taken aright?
A canister's useful and polished and bright,
And if dirt its original purity hide,
'Tis the fault of the puppy to whom it is tied.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Lord Erskine's Simile.

15 Strange that God hath given to men
Salves for the venom of all creeping pests,
But none hath ever yet devised a balm
For venomous woman, worse than fire or viper.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 269.

Man has found remedies against all poisonous creatures, but none was yet found against a bad wife.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 65. Quoting Euripides.

1 He that takes a wife takes care.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

He that hath a wife, hath strife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

2 One wife is too much for most husbands to hear,

But two at a time there's no mortal can bear.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act iii, sc. 11.

3 Roy's wife of Aldivalloch,
Wat ye how she cheated me
As I cam o'er the braes of Balloch?

MRS. ELIZABETH GRANT, Roy's Wife.

4 The only comfort of my life
Is that I never yet had wife.

ROBERT HERRICK, His Comfort.

Suspicion, Discontent, and Strife,
Come in for Dowry with a wife.

ROBERT HERRICK, Single Life Most Secure.

Being married to those sleepy-souled women is just like playing at cards for nothing: no passion is excited and the time is filled up. I do not, however, envy a fellow one of those honeysuckle wives for my part, as they are but creepers at best and commonly destroy the tree they so tenderly cling about.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (Mrs. Piozzi, Johnsoniana.)

I would not marry her, though she were endowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgressed: she would have made Hercules have turned spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too. . . . I would to God some scholar would conjure her; for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell as in a sanctuary.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 258.

5 Is any dignity in a wife, any beauty, worth the cost, if she is forever reckoning up her merits against you? (Quæ tanti gravitas, quæ forma, ut se tibi semper Imputet?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 178.

The better the man, the more desirable as a husband, the less good will he get out of his wife. (Igitur longe minus utilis illi Uxor, quisquis erit bonus optandusque maritus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 211.

6 Give up all hope of peace so long as your mother-in-law is alive. (Desperanda tibi salva concordia socru.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 231.

7 With quarrels let wives pursue husbands and husbands wives; this befits wives; the dowry of a wife is quarreling. (Lite fugent nuptæque viros, nuptasque mariti; Hoc decet uxores; dos est uxoria lites.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 153.

8 He who is cursed with an ugly wife sees darkness when he lights the evening lamp.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 287.)

The husband of the ugly wife
Is better blinded all his life.

SADI, The Gulistan. Pt. ii, No. 45. (Arnold, tr.)

9 Every one of you hath his particular plague, and my wife is mine; and he is very happy who hath this only.

PITTACUS. (Plutarch, On the Tranquillity of the Mind.)

But what so pure, which envious tongues will spare?

Some wicked wits have libell'd all the fair.
With matchless impudence they style a wife
The dear-bought curse and lawful plague of life;
A bosom-serpent, a domestic evil,
A night-invasion and a midday-devil.
Let not the wise these sland'rous words regard,
But curse the bones of ev'ry living bard.

POPE, January and May, l. 43.

10 To please a wife, when her occasions call,
Would busy the most vigorous of us all.
And trust me, sir, the chastest you can choose,

Will ask observance, and exact her dues.

POPE, January and May, l. 210.

11 A modernist married a fundamentalist wife,
And she led him a catechism and dogma life.

KEITH PRESTON, Marital Tragedy.

12 In a wife's lap, as in a grave,
Man's airy notions mix with earth.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, The Splendid Spur.

13 Who hath a fair wife needs more than two eyes.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 21.

14 'Tis reason a man that will have a wife should be at the charge of all her trinkets, and pay all the scores she sets him on. He that will keep a monkey, 'tis fit he should pay for the glasses she breaks.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Wife.

15 As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another;
The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 61.

1
A light wife doth make a heavy husband.
SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc.
1, l. 130.

It is a common thing To have a foolish wife.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 302.

2
Richard Penlake was a cheerful man,
Cheerful and frank and free,
But he led a sad life with Rebecca his wife,
For a terrible shrew was she.
SOUTHEY, St. Michael's Chair. St. 2.

A proverb look in mind ye keep,
As good a shrew as is a sheep
For you to take to wive.
THOMAS TUSSEY, *Five Hundred Points of
Good Husbandry*, l. 157.

3
I hold that man the worst of public foes
Who either for his own or children's sake,
To save his blood from scandal, lets the wife Whom he knows false, abide and rule the house. . . .
She like a new disease, unknown to men,
Creeps, no precaution used, among the crowd,
Makes wicked lightnings of her eyes and saps
The fealty of our friends, and stirs the pulse
With devil's leaps, and poisons half the young.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 509.

4
My wife's gone to the country,
Hurrah! Hurrah!
She thought it best; I need a rest,
That's why she went away.
GEORGE WHITING AND IRVING BERLIN, My Wife's Gone to the Country. (1909)

5
Many a man singeth when he home bringeth
His young wife;
If he knew what he brought, weepen he mought,
Or all his life sigheth.
UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred. (c. 1300)

V—Wife: Her Behavior

6
It is not a wife's part to be her husband's judge.
HENRIK IBSEN, Ghosts. Act i.

7
My author and disposer, what thou bidd'st,
Unargu'd I obey; so God ordains;
God is thy law, thou mine: to know no more
Is woman's happiest knowledge and her praise.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 635.

For nothing lovelier can be found
In woman, than to study household good,
And good works in her husband to promote.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 232.

The wife, where danger or dishonour lurks,
Safest and seemliest by her husband stays;
Who guards her, or with her the worst endures.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 267.

8
Therefore God's universal law
Gave to the man despotic power
Over his female in due awe,
Nor from that right to part an hour,
Smile she or lour.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1053.

There's nothing situate under heaven's eye
But hath his bound, in earth, in sea, in sky:
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowls,
Are their males' subjects and at their controls:
Men, more divine, the masters of all these,
Lords of the wide world and wild watery seas,
Indued with intellectual sense and souls,
Of more pre-eminence than fish and fowls,
Are masters to their females, and their lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 16.

9
A good wife should be as a looking-glass to represent her husband's face and passion; if he be pleasant, she should be merry; if he laugh, she should smile; if he look sad, she should participate of his sorrow.

PLUTARCH. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, 1, 2.)

I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will comformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclined. . . .
I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 23.

10
She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxxi, 27.

11
A virtuous wife rules her husband by obeying him. (Casta ad virum matrona parendo im-perat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 105.

She commandeth her husband, in any equal matter, by constant obeying him.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and the Profane
State: The Good Wife*.

She who ne'er answers till a husband cools,
Or, if she rules him, never shows she rules.
Charms by accepting, by submitting sways,
Yet has her humour most when she obeys.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 261.

The cunning wife makes her husband her apron.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 29.

12
It's a good horse that never stumbles,
And a good wife that never grumbles.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

The wife that expects to have a good name
Is always at home, as if she were lame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

See also WOMAN AND THE HOME.

1
Come, I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an elm, my husband, I, a vine.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 175.

Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn;
Happiest of all is that her gentle spirit
Commits itself to yours to be directed.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 162.

2
Wives may be merry and yet honest too:
We do not act that often jest and laugh;
'Tis old, but true, Still swine eats all the draff.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iv, sc. 2, l. 105.

3
Such duty as the subject owes the prince
Even such a woman oweth to her husband;
And when she is froward, peevish, sullen,
sour,

And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foul contending rebel
And graceless traitor, to her loving lord?
I am ashamed that women are so simple
To offer war when they should kneel for
peace,

Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love and obey.
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 155.

4
That wife alone unsullied credit wins,
Whose virtues can atone her husband's sins,
Thus, while the man has other nymphs in view,

It suits the woman to be doubly true.
SHEERDAN, A Trip to Scarborough. Act iii, sc. 3.

VI—Wife: The Unwilling Wife

5
I owe a duty where I cannot love.
APHRA BEHN, Abdelazer. Act iii, sc. 3.

6
O wretched is the dame, to whom the sound,
"Your lord will soon return," no pleasure brings.

MATURIN, Bertram. Act ii, sc. 5.

7
As a captive I shall follow my captor, and not as a wife a husband. (Victorem captiva sequar, non nupta maritum.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. iii, l. 69.

8
An unwilling woman given to a man in marriage is not his wife but his enemy. (Hostis est uxor invita quæ ad virum numtum datur.)
PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 84.

For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife?
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 5, l. 62.

9
But who may have a more ungracious life
Than a child's bird and a knave's wife?
JOHN SKELTON, Garlande of Laurell, l. 1452.

VII—Wife: Her Control

10
Avoid being affectionate to your wife or quarreling with her in the presence of strangers:
the one savors of folly, the other of madness.
CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus.
Sec. 5.)

11
What a pity it is that nobody knows how to manage a wife, but a bachelor.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, *The Jealous
Wife*. Act iv, sc. 1. (1761)

Every man can rule an ill wife but him that has her.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

12
If you give your wife a yard, she'll take an ell.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 2.

13
He knows little who will tell his wife all he knows.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and the Profane
State: The Good Husband*.

He that tells his wife news is but newly married.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Who, like a fondling, to his wife tells news,
He hath not yet worn out his marriage shoes.
R. WATKYN, Flamma Sine Fumo.

No man should have a secret from his wife. She invariably finds it out.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii.

14
First get absolute conquest over thyself, and then thou wilt easily govern thy wife.

THOMAS FULLER, Intro. ad Prudentiam, ii, 26.

15
Who lets his wife go to every feast, and his horse drink at every water, shall have neither good wife nor good horse.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16
He knocked at his wife's head, until
It opened unto him.

THOMAS HOOD, Tim Turpin.

17
Fasten the bolt; restrain her; but who shall keep the keepers themselves? The wife is cunning, and begins with them. (Pone seram, cohibe. Sed quis custodiet ipsos Custodes?
Cauta est et ab illis incipit uxor.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 347.

I do think it is their husbands' faults
If wives do fail. . . . Let husbands know Their wives have sense like them: they see and smell

And have their palates both for sweet and sour,
As husbands have.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 87.

1 Nay, look not big, nor stamp, nor stare, nor fret;

I will be master of what is mine own;
She is my goods, my chattels; she is my house,

My household stuff, my field, my barn,
My horse, my ox, my ass, my any thing;
And here she stands, touch her whoever dare.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 230.

Why, man, she is mine own,
And I as rich in having such a jewel
As twenty seas, if all their sand were pearl,
The water nectar and the rocks pure gold.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 168.

2 Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of man-kind
Would hang themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 198.

3 Who, for his business, from his wife will run,
Takes the best care to have her business done.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act ii.

4 Break her betimes, and bring her under by force,
Or else the grey mare will be the better horse.

UNKNOWN, Marriage of Wit and Science, ii, 1. (1570)

Look you! The grey mare
Is ill to live with, when her whinny shrills
From tile to scullery, and her small good-man
Shrinks in his arm-chair while the fires of hell
Mix with his hearth.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. v, l. 441.

GRAY MARE THE BETTER HORSE, see under HORSE.

VIII—Wife: The Breeches and the Crowing Hen

5 "And now, Madam," I addressed her, "we shall try who shall get the breeches."

ANTONIUS MUSA BRASSAVOLUS, My Wife and I. 1540. (William Beloe, tr.)

I saw many women using hard words to their husbands: some striving for the breeches.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, xi, 219. (1592)

I am sure his wife wore the breeches.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax, 63. (1596)

Children rule, old men go to school, women wear the breeches.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

6 Since you have given us the character of a wife who wears the breeches, pray say something of a husband that wears the petticoat.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 482. (1712)

7 You must not look to be my master, sir,

Nor talk in th' house as though you wore the breeches.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife. Act ii. (1624)

8 For of all wise words of tongue or pen,
The wisest are these: "Leave pants to men."
S. E. KISER, Maud Muller A-Wheel.

9 Between Adam and me the great difference is,

Though a paradise each has been forced to resign,

That he never wore breeches till turned out of his,

While, for want of my breeches, I'm banished from mine.

THOMAS MOORE, Upon Being Obligated to Leave a Pleasant Party from the Want of a Pair of Breeches to Dress for Dinner In.

10 'Tis a thing to me extremely displeasing
When the hen talks and the cock is silent.

(C'est chose qui me moult deplaist, Quand poule parle et coq se taist.)

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1250)

They are sorry houses where the hens crow and the cock holds his peace.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits, Fo. 33. (1578)

Ill thrives the hapless family that shows
A cock that's silent and a hen that crows.

FRANCIS QUARLES, History of Queen Esther. Sec. 3. (1630)

Ill thrives that hapless family that shows
A cock that's silent, and a hen that crows:
I know not which live more unnatural lives,
Obeying husbands, or commanding wives.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

11 A whistling woman and a crowing hen
Is neither fit for God nor men.

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries, i, ii, 164.)

Whistling girls and crowing hens
Will surely come to some bad ends.

UNKNOWN. A Cornwall proverb.

Girls that whistle and hens that crow
Will always have fun, wherever they go.

UNKNOWN. A modern variation.

12 As the goodman saith, so say we;
As the goodwife saith, so it must be.

UNKNOWN. (CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 7.)

It's my old girl that advises. She has the head.
But I never own to it before her. Discipline must be maintained.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 27.

13 Wilhelmus . . . submitted at home to a species of government neither laid down in Aristotle or Plato; in short, it partook of the nature of a pure, unmixed tyranny, . . . petticoat government.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Ch. 4.

There was one species of despotism under which he had long groaned, and that was petticoat government.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Rip Van Winkle.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 149.

<sup>2</sup> He had by heart the whole detail of woe Xantippe made her good man undergo; How oft she scolded in a day he knew, How many [vessels] on the sage she threw— Who took it patiently, and wiped his head: "Rain follows thunder," that was all he said.

POPE, The Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 387.

Socrates . . . by all accounts undoubted head of the sect of the hen-pecked.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 479. (1712)

<sup>3</sup> Seeing how you resemble each other, vilest of wives, vilest of husbands, I wonder you don't agree! (Cum sitis similes paresque vita, Uxor pessima, pessimus maritus, Miror non bene convenire vobis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 35.

IX—Wife: The Curtain Lecture

<sup>4</sup> He was then lying under the discipline of a curtain lecture.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 243. (1710)

Yes, she may toss her head and hector,
But she shall have a curtain lecture.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of a Wife. Canto xxiv, l. 579. (1821)

Curtain-lectures made a restless night.

POPE, Wife of Bath, l. 165. (1717)

For which I have had already two curtain-lectures and a black and blue eye.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Virgin Widow, ii. (1649)

A Curtain Lecture; as it is read by a Country Farmer's Wife to her Good Man.

UNKNOWN. Title of book published 1638.

Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures.

DOUGLAS JERROLD. Title of book. (1846)

<sup>5</sup> Woman, wakeful woman's never weary,
Above all, when she waits to thump her deary.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ghost.

<sup>6</sup> If in your censure you prove sweet to me,
I little care, believe 't, how sour you be.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, A Boulster Lecture: Dedication. (1640)

<sup>7</sup> Curs'd be the man, the poorest wretch in life,
The crouching vassal, to the tyrant wife! . . .

Who must to her his dear friend's secret tell;

Who dreads a curtain lecture worse than hell.

Were such the wife had fallen to my part,
I'd break her spirit or I'd break her heart.

BURNS, The Henpeck'd Husband.

<sup>8</sup> The wife was pretty, trifling, childish, weak;
She could not think, but would not cease to speak.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Struggles of Conscience.

<sup>9</sup> For me, I neither know nor care
Whether a Parson ought to wear
A black dress or a white dress;

Fill'd with a trouble of my own,—

A Wife who preaches in her gown,
And lectures in her night-dress!

THOMAS HOOD, The Surplice Question.

She shakes the curtains with her kind advice.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 79.

<sup>10</sup> The bed that holds a wife is never free from wrangling; no sleep is to be got there! (Semper habet lites alteraque jurgia lectus In quo nupto jacet; minimum dormitur in illo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 268.

<sup>11</sup> I find my wife has something in her gizzard that only wants an opportunity of being provoked to bring up.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 June, 1668.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 13.

A continual dropping in a very rainy day and a contentious woman are alike.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 15.

<sup>13</sup> My lord shall never rest;

I 'll watch him, tame and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 22.

<sup>14</sup> It is well within the order of things
That man should listen when his mate sings;
But the true male never yet walked
Who liked to listen when his mate talked.

ANNA WICKHAM, The Affinity.

I would be married to a full man,
As would all women since the world began;
But from a wealth of living I have proved
I must be silent, if I would be loved.

ANNA WICKHAM, The Affinity.

X—Wife: Deliverance

<sup>15</sup> "What? rise again with all one's bones," Quoth Giles, "I hope you fib:

I trusted, when I went to Heaven,
To go without my rib."
S. T. COLERIDGE, Epigram.

Oh! 'tis a precious thing, when wives are
dead,
To find such numbers who will serve instead:
And in whatever state a man be thrown,
'Tis that precisely they would wish their own.
GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: The Learned Boy.

Here lies my wife: here let her lie!
Now she's at rest, and so am I.
DRYDEN, Suggested Epitaph.

3
Down Theseus went to hell, Pirith his friend to find:
O that wives in these our days were to their mates as kind!

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Of Friendship.

Lycoris has buried all the female friends she had,
Fabianus: would she were the friend of my wife! (Omnes quas habuit, Fabiane, Lycoris amicas Extulit. Uxori fiat amica mea.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 24.

Already, Phileros, your seventh wife is being buried in your field. No man's field brings him greater profit than yours, Phileros. (Septima jam, Phileros, tibi conditur uxor in agro. Plus nulli, Phileros, quam tibi reddit ager.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 43.

4
A dead wife under the table is the best goods
in a man's house.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

WILDE, OSCAR

5
I heard his golden voice and marked him trace

Under the common thing the hidden grace,
And conjure wonder out of emptiness,
Till mean things put on beauty like a dress
And all the world was an enchanted place.

ALFRED BRUCE DOUGLAS, The Dead Poet.

6
A delicate design that lay like lace
Upon the purple velvet of disgrace.

JOHN MACY, Couplets in Criticism: Wilde.

7
What has Oscar in common with art? except that he dines at our tables and picks from our platters the plums for the puddings he peddles in the provinces. Oscar . . . has the courage of the opinions . . . of others.

JAMES MCNEILL WHISTLER, The (London)
World, 17 Nov., 1886.

As for borrowing Mr. Whistler's ideas about art, the only thoroughly original ideas I have ever heard him express have had reference to his own superiority as a painter over painters greater than himself.

OSCAR WILDE, Truth, 9 Jan., 1890.

Written for the Toronto Herald, in 1897, and signed A. M. R. Gordon, by which name Rose was known at the time. He had been minister of the Free Church, at Orkney, Scotland, and was shipped off to America because of intemperance. Erroneously attributed to Rodney Blake, pseudonym of
W. M. Clemens. Recited by Captain J. B.
Coghlan at the Union League Club, N. Y.,
21 April, 1899, causing an international incident. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

WILL

I—Will: Apothegms

1 Will without power is like children playing at soldiers.

GEORGE CANNING, The Rovers. Act iv.

Wilful will do't, that's the word.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 2.

2 Here vigor fail'd the towering fantasy:
But yet the will roll'd onward, like a wheel
In even motion, by the Love impell'd,
That moves the sun in Heaven and all the stars.

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxxiii. (Cary, tr.)

A breath of will blows eternally through the universe of souls in the direction of the Right and Necessary.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

3 'T is what you will,—or will be what you would.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes.
Week i, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

He who is firm in will molds the world to himself. (Aber wer fest auf dem Sinne beharrt, der bildet die Welt sich.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Pt. ix, l. 303.

With will one can do anything.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 7.

All Life needs for life is possible to will.

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 82.

4 The education of the will is the object of our existence.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage.

5 There is nothing good or evil save in the will. ("Οτι ἐξω τῆς προαιρέσεως οὐδὲν ἐστὶν οὔτε ἀγαθὸν οὔτε κακόν.")

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 18.

6 To him that will, ways are not wanting.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

I fall back on my favourite proverb, "Where there's a will there's a way."

BULWER-LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. xviii, ch.

5. The French form of the proverb is, "Vouloir c'est pouvoir."

When there's a will there's a way.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Preface.

In idle wishes fools supinely stay;

Be there a will, and wisdom finds a way.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Birth of Flattery.

7 Where the will is ready, the feet are light.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

A willing heart adds feather to the heel.

JOANNA BAILLIE, De Montfort. Act iii, sc. 2.

8 Will will have will though will woe win.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Will is the cause of woe.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 I will this, I command this: let my will be the voucher for the deed. (Hoc volo, sic jubeo, sit pro ratione voluntas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 223.

We'll take the will for the deed.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 49.

The will for deed I do accept.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes.
Week ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

You must take the will for the deed.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii; COLLEY
CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act. iii.

10

Will thou, or will thou not, we will have our will.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus ix, l. 153.

11

A tender heart; a will inflexible.

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act iii, sc. 2.

12

Not my will, but thine, be done.

New Testament: Luke, xxii, 42. See also under RESIGNATION.

13

The man who has the will to undergo all labor may win to any goal. ('Ο πάντα βουλευθεὶς ἂν ἄνθρωπος ποιεῖν παν ἂν γένοιτο.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 539.

14

The unconquerable will.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 106.

The star of the unconquered will,

He rises in my breast,

Serene, and resolute, and still,

And calm, and self-possessed.

LONGFELLOW, The Light of Stars. St. 7.

15

Even though the power be wanting, yet the will is praiseworthy. (Ut desint vires, tamen est laudanda voluntas.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 79.

Let not thy Will roar, when thy Power can but whisper.

FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam, i, 14.

16

Our wills and fates do so contrary run

That our devices still are overthrown.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 221.

At war 'twixt will and will not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 33.

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,

Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores

Of will and judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 63.

He wants wit that wants resolved will.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 6, l. 12.

17

What he will he does, and does so much

That proof is call'd impossibility.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 5, l. 28.

1 Will was his guide, and grief led him astray.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto i, st. 12.

2 O, well for him whose will is strong!
He suffers, but he will not suffer long;
He suffers, but he cannot suffer wrong.

TENNYSON, Will, l. 1.

And I compel all creatures to my will.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 672.

3 Nothing is so easy but it is difficult if you do it against your will. (Nullast tam facilias res quā difficilis siet, Quam invitus facias.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 805. (Act iv, sc. 6.)

Nothing is troublesome that we do willingly.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 111.

4 For though with judgement we on things reflect,

Our will determines, not our intellect.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Divine Love. Canto i, l. 39.

5 The Will is the Man.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 29. March, 1831.

II—Will: Free Will

6 Where we are free to act, we are also free to refrain from acting, and where we are able to say No we are also able to say Yes. (Καὶ ἐν οἷς τὸ μή, καὶ τὸ ναί.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 2.

7 No one can rob us of our free will. (Ἀπὸ τῆς προαιρέσεως οὐ γίνεταί.)

EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 22, sec. 105.

The commander of the forces of a large State may be carried off, but the will of even a common man cannot be taken from him.

CONFUCIUS, Analecets. Bk. ix, ch. 25.

The will cannot be compelled. (Voluntas non potest cogi.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

8 To deny the freedom of the will is to make morality impossible.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

9 All theory is against the freedom of the will, all experience for it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. 1778.)

Say not the will of man is free
Within the limits of his soul—

Who from his heritage can flee?

Who can his destiny control?

DONALD A. MACKENZIE, Free Will, 10

Good he made thee, but to persevere
He left it in thy power, ordain'd thy will
By nature free, not over-ruled by Fate
Inextricable, or strict necessity.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 525.

And binding Nature fast in Fate,
Left free the human Will.

POPE, Universal Prayer. St. 3.

11

The only way of setting the will free is to deliver it from wilfulness.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

12

Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours, to make them thine.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction. St. 4.

WILLOW

13

In the misty twilight

You can see their hair,

Weeping water maidens

That were once so fair.

WALTER PRICHARD EATON, The Willows.

14

Willow, in thy breezy moan,

I can hear a deeper tone;

Through thy leaves come whispering low,
Faint sweet sounds of long ago—

Willow, sighing willow!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Willow Song.

15

Willows are weak, yet they bind other wood.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16

Thou art to all lost love the best,

The only true plant found,

Wherewith young men and maids distrest,
And left of love, are crown'd.

When once the lover's rose is dead,

Or laid aside forlorn,

Then willow-garlands, 'bout the head,
Bedewed with tears, are worn.

ROBERT HERRICK, To the Willow-Tree.

17

We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 2.

18

To the brook and the willow that heard him complain,

Ah willow, willow,

Poor Colin sat weeping and told them his pain;

Ah willow, willow; ah willow, willow.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Song: Ah Willow.

On a tree by a river a little tom-tit

Sang, "Willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

And I said to him, "Dicky-bird, why do you sit Singing, 'Willow, titwillow, titwillow?'"

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

Phyllis hath forsaken me,

Which makes me wear the willow-tree.

UNKNOWN, The Willow-Tree. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. iii, bk. ii, No. 9.)

1 Know ye the willow-tree Whose grey leaves quiver,

Whispering gloomily To yon pale river?

Lady, at even-tide Wander not near it:

They say its branches hide A sad lost spirit!

W. M. THACKERAY, The Willow-Tree.

2 My mother had a maid call'd Barbara:

She was in love, and he she loved proved mad

And did forsake her: she had a song of 'willow';

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,

And she died singing it.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 26.

The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;

Sing willow, willow, willow.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 41.

A poor soul sat sighing under a sycamore tree;

O willow, willow, willow!

With his hand on his bosom, his head on his knee:

O willow, willow, willow!

O willow, willow, willow!

Sing, O the green willow shall be my garland.

UNKNOWN, A Lover's Complaint Being Forsaken of His Love. (PERCY, Reliques. Ser. i, bk. ii, No. 8.)

All a green willow, willow,

All a green willow is my garland.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Green Willow.

WILSON, WOODROW

3 And if he failed in part,

Only the years are strong

With patience that waits long;

With wisdom that sees far.

The years shall right the balance tilted wrong,

The years shall set upon his brows a star.

ADA ALDEN, Ave.

4 I served Woodrow Wilson for five years. He is standing at the throne of a God whose approval he won and has received. As he looks down from there, I say to him: "I did my best. I am doing it now. You are still the captain of my soul."

NEWTON D. BAKER, Speech, Democratic Convention, 28 June, 1924.

5 He was sole out-post for that world-old hope
Humanity can never quite release:

He gave his heart, his life, his soul, to hold
Our eyes upon the gleam of lasting peace.

S. OMAR BARKER, Woodrow Wilson.

6 Spirit long shaping for sublime endeavor,
A Sword of God, the gleaming metal came
From stern Scotch ancestry, where whatsoever

Was true, was pure, was noble, won acclaim.
KATHARINE LEE BATES, Woodrow Wilson.

Here is the man who imposed himself as the supreme head of the continental empire of the United States. Who, further, handled that colossal power as if it were a sword in his hand. . . . With this and the power of his thought he ends the war. And then in person he sets out to save humanity by ending war for ever. . . . Wilson adventured for the whole of the human race. Not as a servant, but as a champion. . . . In Wilson, the whole of mankind breaks camp, sets out from home and wrestles with the universe and its gods.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Woodrow Wilson, p. 332.

7 Teacher, Statesman, Leader freed
From living strife and mortal pain—
Exhausted with the weight of dreams
And hopes too great to gain.

DONALD GILLIES, Woodrow Wilson.

8 Beleaguered Liberty takes heart again,
Hearing afar the rescuing bugles blow;
And even in the strongholds of the foe
His name becomes the whispered hope of men.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, The Leader.

9 What is the thing about his face
That makes me dream of something dim—
A crucifix at some torn place
And the shell-scarred face of Him?
HUBERT KELLEY, The Warrior Passes.

10 Byzantine Logothete.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, referring to Woodrow Wilson, at the time of the latter's many notes to Germany, 1915-17. The officials of Byzantium were called Logothetes. Instead of defending the Empire against the barbarians, they wrote notes to them and were eventually conquered. See BURX, History of the Later Roman Empire; N. Y. Tribune, 13 Dec., 1915.

11 To Woodrow Wilson, the apparent failure, belongs the undying honour, which will grow with the growing centuries, of having saved the "little child that shall lead them yet."

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAAN SMUTS, Letter, 8 Jan., 1921. (N. Y. Evening Post, March 2, 1921.)

It was the human spirit itself that failed at Paris. . . It was not Wilson who failed there, but humanity itself. It was not the statesmen that failed, so much as the spirit of the peoples behind them.

GENERAL JAN CHRISTIAAN SMUTS, Letter, 8 Jan., 1921.

1 No man ever more fully exemplified the adage that the pen is mightier than the sword.

MARK SULLIVAN, of Woodrow Wilson. (Our Times, v, 274.)

 curbs by his authority the struggling winds and the roaring gales. (Hic vasto rex Æolus antro Luctantis ventos tempestatesque sonoras Imperio premit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 53.

II—Wind: Description

5 The hushed winds wail with feeble moan
 Like infant charity.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Orra. Act iii, sc. 1.

6 Blow, Boreas, foe to human kind!
 Blow, blustering, freezing, piercing wind!
 Blow, that thy force I may rehearse,
 While all my thoughts congeal to verse!

JOHN BANCKS, To Boreas.

Cease, rude Boreas! blustering railer!

G. A. STEVENS, The Storm.

7 The wind
 Sweeps the broad forest in its summer prime,
 As when some master-hand exulting sweeps
 The keys of some great organ.

BRYANT, Among the Trees, l. 63.

8 Wind of the sunny south! oh, still delay
 In the gay woods and in the golden air,
 Like to a good old age released from care,
 Journeying, in long serenity, away.

BRYANT, October, l. 5.

And the South Wind—he was dressed
 With a ribbon round his breast
 That floated, flapped, and fluttered

In a riotous unrest,
 And a drapery of mist
 From the shoulder to the wrist
 Floating backward with the motion of the waving hand he kissed.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, *The South Wind and
 the Sun*.

9 Where hast thou wandered, gentle gale, to find

The perfumes thou dost bring?

BRYANT, May Evening. St. 4.

The faint old man shall lean his silver head
 To feel thee; thou shalt kiss the child asleep.

BRYANT, Evening Wind. St. 4.

10 A breeze came wandering from the sky,
 Light as the whispers of a dream;

He put the o'erhanging grasses by,
 And softly stooped to kiss the stream,
 The pretty stream, the flattered stream,
 The shy, yet unreluctant stream.

BRYANT, The Wind and Stream. St. 2.

As winds come lightly whispering from the west,
 Kissing, not ruffling the blue deep's serene.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 70.

The winds with wonder whist,
 Smoothly the waters kist.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity,
 l. 64.

Mildly and soft the western breeze
 Just kissed the lake, just stirred the trees.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iii, st. 2.

11 There paused to shut the door
 A fellow called the Wind,

With mystery before,
 And reticence behind.

BLISS CARMAN, At the Granite Gate.

12 The wind is awake, pretty leaves, pretty
 leaves,
 Heed not what he says, he deceives, he de-ceives;

Over and over To the lowly clover
 He has lisped the same love (and forgotten it, too),

He'll be lisping and pledging to you.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Way of It.

13 Loud wind, strong wind, sweeping o'er the mountains,

Fresh wind, free wind, blowing from the sea,

Pour forth thy vials like streams from airy fountains,

Draughts of life to me.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, North Wind.

14 The winds that never moderation knew,
 Afraid to blow too much, too faintly blew;
 Or out of breath with joy, could not enlarge
 Their straighten'd lungs.

DRYDEN, Astræa Redux, l. 242.

15 The wind moans, like a long wail from some despairing soul shut out in the awful storm!

W. H. GIBSON, Pastoral Days: Winter.

Have you heard the wind go "Yo-o-o-o"?

'Tis a pitiful sound to hear.

EUGENE FIELD, The Night Wind.

Perhaps the wind
Wails so in winter for the summer's dead,
And all sad sounds are nature's funeral cries
For what has been and is not.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

1 No stir of air was there,
Not so much life as on a summer's day
Robs not one light seed from the feather'd grass,
But where the dead leaf fell, there did it rest.

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. i, l. 7.

Nought but a lovely sighing of the wind
Along the reedy stream; a half-heard strain,
Full of sweet desolation—balmy pain.

KEATS, I Stood Tip-toe Upon a Little Hill.

So near to mute the zephyrs flute
That only leaflets dance.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Outer and Inner. St. 1.

2 I hear the wind among the trees
Playing celestial symphonies;
I see the branches downward bent,
Like keys of some great instrument.

LONGFELLOW, A Day of Sunshine. St. 3.

Chill airs and wintry winds! my ear
Has grown familiar with your song;
I hear it in the opening year,
I listen, and it cheers me long.

LONGFELLOW, Woods in Winter. St. 7.

It's a warm wind, the west wind, full of birds'
cries;
I never hear the west wind but tears are in my eyes.

For it comes from the west lands, the old brown hills.

And April's in the west wind, and daffodils.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The West Wind.

3 While rocking winds are piping loud,
Or usher'd with a shower still,
When the gust hath blown his fill,
Ending on the rustling leaves,
With minute drops from off the eaves.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 126.

4 Never does a wilder song
Steal the breezy lyre along,
When the wind in odours dying
Woos it with enamour'd sighing.

THOMAS MOORE, To Rosa.

5 Mournfully, oh, mournfully,
The midnight wind doth sigh,
Like some sweet plaintive melody
Of ages long gone by.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, The Midnight Wind.

The wind was a torrent of darkness among the gusty trees.

ALFRED NOYES, The Highwayman.

6 Who has seen the wind?
Neither you nor I:

But when the trees bow down their heads,
The wind is passing by.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Who Has Seen the Wind?

7 The gypsy wind goes down the night;
I hear him lilt his wander-call,
And to the old divine delight
Am I athrall.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, The Gypsy Wind.

8 The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 27.

9 Hamlet: The air bites shrewdly; it is very cold.

Horatio: It is a nipping and an eager air.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 1.

10 The southern wind
Doth play the trumpet to his purposes,
And by his hollow whistling in the leaves
Foretells a tempest and a blustering day.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 3.

We shall be winnow'd with so rough a wind
That even our corn shall seem as light as chaff,
And good from bad find no partition.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 194.

Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 1.

11 A fresher gale
Begins to wave the wood and stir the stream, Sweeping with shadowy gust the fields of corn,
While the quail clamours for his running mate.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1654.

Wild as the winds, across the howling waste
Of mighty waters.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 165.

12 I hear the little children of the wind
Crying solitary in lonely places.

WILLIAM SHARP, Little Children of the Wind.

13 O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,
Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves
dead
Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,
Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
Pestilence-stricken multitudes.

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind. Sec. 1.

O thou
Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed
The wingèd seeds, where they lie cold and low,
Each like a corpse within its grave, until Thine azure sister of the Spring shall blow
Her clarion o'er the dreaming earth.

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind. Sec. 1.

1 A wind arose among the pines; it shook
The clinging music from their boughs, and then

Low, sweet, faint sounds, like the farewell of ghosts,

Were heard: OH, FOLLOW, FOLLOW, FOLLOW ME!

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1.
l. 156.

And wind, that grand old harper, smote
His thunder-harp of pines.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 2.

A wind arose and rush'd upon the South,
And shook the songs, the whispers, and the shrieks

Of the wild woods together; and a Voice
Went with it, "Follow, follow, thou shalt win."

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 96.

2 Sweet and low, sweet and low,
Wind of the western sea,

Low, low, breathe and blow,
Wind of the western sea!

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 456.

WINDOW

3 The Window has Four little Panes:
But One have I:

The Window-Panes in its Sash,—
I wonder why!

GELETT BURGESS, The Window.

4 Each window like a pill'ry appears,
With heads thrust thro' nail'd by the ears.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 391.

5 From a window richly peint
With lives of many divers saint.

CHAUCER, Chaucer's Dream, l. 1847.

And diamonded with panes of quaint device
Innumerable, of stains and splendid dyes.

KEATS, Eve of St. Agnes. St. 24.

And storied windows richly dight,
Casting a dim religious light.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 159.

Rich windows that exclude the light,
And passages that lead to nothing.

THOMAS GRAY, A Long Story, l. 7.

6 "Tehee!" quod she, and clapt the window to.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 554.

7 Better keep yourself clean and bright: you are the window through which you must see the world.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

20 Drunken, but not with wine.

Old Testament: Isaiah, li, 21.

Wine is one thing, drunkenness another. (Aliud vinum, aliud ebrietas.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Quoted.

No nation is drunken where wine is cheap;
and none sober where the dearness of wine substitutes ardent spirits as the common beverage.

in wine there is truth. (In vino veritas.)

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xiv, sec. 14.

10 You need not hang up the ivy-branch over the wine that will sell.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 968.

Wine that is salable and good needeth no bush or garland of yew to be hanged before.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 42. (1539)

Things of greatest profit are set forth with least price. Where the wine is neat, there needeth no ivy-bush.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues. (1579)

Good wine needs no bush.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It: Epilogue.
(1599)

I hang no ivy out to sell my wine;
The nectar of good wits will sell itself.

ROBERT ALLOTT, *England's Parnassus: Sonnet

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 52.

When flowing cups pass swiftly round
With no allaying Thames.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Althea from Prison.

14 If sack and sugar be a fault, God help the wicked!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 517.

O monstrous! but one half-penny-worth of bread to this intolerable deal of sack!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 591.

If I had a thousand sons, the first humane principle I would teach them should be, to forswear thin potations and to addict themselves to sack.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 134.

Sack was the term applied to the strong white wines imported from Spain and the Canaries. They were often sweetened and mixed with eggs and other ingredients to make a kind of punch.

We care not for money, riches, nor wealth;
Old sack is our money, old sack is our wealth.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Praise of Old Sack.

15 A man cannot make him laugh;—but that's no marvel; he drinks no wine.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 95.

16 Give me a bowl of wine.

In this I bury all unkindness.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l.
158.

Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.

W. E. HENLEY, The Spirit of Wine.

12 Sparkling and bright in liquid light
 Does the wine our goblets gleam in;

With hue as red as the rosy bed

Which a bee would choose to dream in.

Then fill to-night, with hearts as light

To loves as gay and fleeting

As bubbles that swim on the beaker's brim

And break on the lips while meeting.

CHARLES FENNO HOFFMAN, Sparkling and Bright.

This song of mine

Is a Song of the Vine

To be sung by the glowing embers

Of wayside inns,

When the rain begins

To darken the drear Novembers.

LONGFELLOW, Catawba Wine. St. 1.

Sing! Who sings

To her who weareth a hundred rings?

Ah, who is this lady fine?

The Vine, boys, the Vine!

The mother of the mighty Wine,

A roamer is she O'er wall and tree,

And sometimes very good company.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, A Bacchanalian Song.

13 With crimson juice the thirsty southern sky

Sucks from the hills where buried armies lie,

So that the dreamy passion it imparts

Is drawn from heroes' bones and lovers' hearts.

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, l. 127.

Wines that, heaven knows when,
 Had suck'd the fire of some forgotten sun,

And kept it thro' a hundred years of gloom.

Now drown care in wine. (Nunc vino pellite curas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 7, l. 32.

Dispel the chill, piling high the logs upon the fire, and pour out with generous hand the four year old wine from the Sabine jar.

(Dissolve frigus ligna super foco
Large reponens atque benignius
Deprome quadrimum Sabina.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 5.

When Horace wrote his noble verse,
His brilliant, glowing line,
He must have gone to bed the worse
For good Falernian wine.

No poet yet could praise the rose
In verse that so serenely flows

Unless he dipped his Roman nose
In good Falernian wine.

THEODORE MAYNARD, A Tankard of Ale.

Nor are cankering cares dispelled except by Bacchus' gift. (Neque Mordaces aliter diffugiunt sollicitudines.)

Bacchus scatters carking cares. (Dissipat Evhius curas edaces.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 11, l. 17.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne!
In thy fats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd:
Cup us, till the world go round.

SHAKESPEARE, Anthony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 120.

Bacchus, ever fair and ever young.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 54.

Bacchus, that first from out the purple grape,
Crush'd the sweet poison of misused wine.

MILTON, Comus, l. 46.

He turn'd a fruit to an enchantment
Which cheers the sad, revives the old, inspires
The young, makes Weariness forget his toil,
And Fear her danger; opens a new world
When this, the present, palls.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

Mighty to inspire new hopes and powerful
To drown the bitterness of cares.

O for a beaker full of the warm South,
Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene.

JOHN KEATS, Ode to a Nightingale. St. 2.

When thirsty grief in Wine we steep,
When healths and draughts go free,
Fishes that tipple in the deep,
Know no such liberty.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Althea, from Prison.

Attic honey, thicken the nectar-like Falernian.
Such drink deserves to be mixed by Ganymede. (Attica nectareum turbatis mella Fallernum. Misceri decet hoc a Ganymede merum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 108. To blend with honey, the wine had to be old.
(PLINY, Historia Naturalis, xiv, 8.)

Note the superiority of wine over Venus!
I may say the magnanimity of wine; our jealousy turns on him that will not share!

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. 19.

An aged Burgundy runs with a beardless Port.
I cherish the fancy that Port speaks the sentences of wisdom, Burgundy sings the inspired Ode.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. xx.

As with new wine intoxicated both,
They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel
Divinity within them breeding wings
Wherewith to scorn the earth.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1008.

Wine to the poet is a wingèd steed:
Those who drink water gain but little speed.
(Οἶνος τοι χαλεπῶτι πέλει ταχὺς ἵππος δαιδῶ-ῦδωρ δὲ πίνων οὐδὲν ἂν τέκοις σοφόν.)

NICÆNETUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xiii, epig. 29.)

Perplext no more with Human or Divine,
To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign,
And lose your fingers in the tresses of
The Cypress-slender Minister of Wine.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 41. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

Better be jocund with the fruitful Grape
Than sadden after none, or bitter Fruit.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 54. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

You know, my Friends, with what a brave
Carouse

I made a second marriage in my house;
Divorced old barren Reason from my Bed,
And took the Daughter of the Vine to spouse.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 55. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

The Grape that can with Logic absolute
The Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects confute:
The sovereign Alchemist that in a trice
Life's leaden metal into Gold transmute.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 59. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

And much as Wine has play'd the Infidel,
And robb'd me of my Robe of Honour—Well,
I wonder often what the Vintners buy
One half so precious as the stuff they sell.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 95. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

1
O sweet essence! How good, I should say, were your former contents, when the remains of them smell so delicious! (O suavis anima, quale in te dicam bonum Ante hac fuisse;
tales cum sint reliquæ!)

PLEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 1, l. 5. The ass to the empty wine-jar.

2
Wine whets the wit, improves its native force,
And gives a pleasant flavour to discourse.

JOHN POMFRET, The Choice, l. 55.

3
So will I pass the night with wine-cup and
with song,
Till dawn shall cast its rays upon my wine.
(Sic noctem patera, sic ducam carmine, donec Iniciat radios in mea vina dies.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. 6, l. 85.

4
Wine that maketh glad the heart of man.
Old Testament: Psalms, civ, 15. (Vinum bonum lætificet cor hominis.—Vulgate.)

5
Day and night my thoughts incline
To the blandishments of wine,
Jars were made to drain, I think;
Wine, I know, was made to drink.

R. H. STODDARD, A Jar of Wine.

6
Drink no longer water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake.

New Testament: I Timothy, v, 23.

7
Wine fills the veins, and healths are understood

To give our friends a title to our blood.

EDMUND WALLER, For Drinking of Healths,
l. 21. See also DRINKING: HEALTHS.

8
Corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids.

Old Testament: Zechariah, ix, 17.

III—Wine: Its Faults

9
Wine in excess keeps neither secrets nor promises.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

10
Wine hath drowned more men than the sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

So Noah, when he anchor'd safe on
The mountain's top, his lofty haven,
And all the passengers he bore
Were on the new world set ashore,
He made it next his chief design
To plant and propagate a vine,
Which since has overwhelm'd and drown'd
Far greater numbers, on dry ground,
Of wretched mankind, one by one,
Than all the flood before had done.

BUTLER, Satire Upon Drunkenness, l. 105.

And Noah he often said to his wife when he sat down to dine,

"I don't care where the water goes if it doesn't get into the wine."

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Flying Inn.

It was a wet world—and I gave it wine.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, From the Book of Ex-tenuations: Noah.

11
Wine turns a man inside outwards.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Wine makes all sorts of creatures at table.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

12
Inflaming wine, pernicious to mankind,
Unnerves the limbs, and dulls the noble mind.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 330. (Pope, tr.)

And wine can of their wits the wise beguile,
Make the sage frolic, and the serious smile.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 520. (Pope, tr.)

13
He rails bitterly against Bacchus, and swears
there's a devil in every berry of his grape.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, No. 3.

There is a devil in every berry of the grape.
The Koran. Ch. 2.

O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 283.

14
Wine makes a man better pleased with himself. . . . But the danger is, that while a man grows better pleased with himself, he may be growing less pleasing to others. Wine gives a man nothing. . . . It only puts in motion what had been locked up in frost.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1778.)

15
Their sinfulness is greater than their use.

The Koran. Ch. 2. Referring to wine and gambling.

16
And when night
Darkens the streets, then wander forth the sons

Of Belial, flown with insolence and wine.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 500.

1 That's the great evil in wine: it catches you by the feet, it's a cunning wrestler. (Magnum hoc vitium vino est: Pedes captat primum, luctator doloust.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1250. (Act v, sc. 1.)

2 Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 1.

Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 29, 30.

Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup. . . . At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 31, 32.

Take especial care that thou delight not in wine; for there never was any man that came to honour or preferment that loved it; for it transformeth a man into a beast, decayeth health, poisoneth the breath, destroyeth natural heat, deformeth the face, rotteth the teeth, and maketh a man contemptible.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Instructions to His Son.

3 But the wine is bright at the goblet's brim, Though the poison lurk beneath.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The King's Tragedy. St. 61.

4 Wine kindles wrath. (Vinum incendit iram.)
SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 19.

IV—Wine and Love

5 What fool is he that shadows seeks,
And may the substance gain!
Then if thou'lt have me love a lass,
Let it be one that's kind,
Else I'm a servant to the glass
That's with Canary lined.

ALEXANDER BROME, The Resolve.

6 Where there is no wine there is no love.
(Οἶνον δὲ μὴκέρ' ὄντος οὐκ ἔστιν ἔρως.)

EURIPIDES, Bacchæ, l. 773.

7 A generous bottle and a lovesome she,
Are th' only joys in nature next to thee.

THOMAS OTWAY, Epistle to Mr. Duke.

8 Wine gives courage and makes men apt for passion. (Vina parant animos, faciuntque caloribus aptos.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 227.

Wine prepares the heart for love, unless you take too much. (Vina parant animum veneri, nisi plurima sumas.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 805.

What man can pretend to be a believer in love, who is an abjurer of wine? 'T is the test by which the lover knows his own heart. Fill a dozen bumpers to a dozen beauties, and she that floats atop is the maid that has bewitched you.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act iii, sc. 3.

Bacchus and Phœbus are by Jove allied,
And each by other's timely heat supplied.

EDMUND WALLER, Drinking of Healths, l. 17.

9 Often have I sought to banish love's pain with wine, but grief turned all the wine to tears. (Sæpe ego temptavi curas depellere vino; At dolor in lacrimas verteret omne merum.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 5, l. 37.

Weep on, weep on, my pouting vine!
Heav'n grant no tears, but tears of wine.

THOMAS MOORE, Anacreontic: Press the Grape.

10 Wine gives us liberty, love takes it away.
. . . Wine makes us princes, love makes us beggars.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i.

V—Wine and Women

11 I may not here omit those two main plagues and common dotages of human kind, wine and women, which have infatuated and besotted myriads of people; they go commonly together.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 13.

12 Few things surpass old wine; and they may preach

Who please,—the more because they preach in vain,—

Let us have wine and women, mirth and laughter,

Sermons and soda-water the day after.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 178.

13 Women and wine do make a man
A doting fool all that they can.

EVANS, Revised Withals Dictionary. (1586)

14 Women, wine, and dice

Will bring a man to lice.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, Fo. 73.

Women and wine, game and deceit,
Make the wealth small and the wants great.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6416.

15 Gaming, women and wine,
While they laugh they make men pine.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Play, women and wine undo men laughing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

16 Wine and women into apostasie
Cause wise men to fall.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Remedy of Love.

17 Wine and wenches empty men's purses.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Love of a woman and a bottle of wine
Are sweet for a season, but last for a time.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 55.

1 Who loves not women, wine, and song,
Remains a fool his whole life long.
(Wer nicht liebt Weiber, Wein, und Gesang, Der bleibt ein Narr sein Leben lang.)

JOHN HENRY VOSS, who included it in a collection of his poems. (REDLICH, Die Poetischen die Geisterkeller.) Usually ascribed to Martin Luther, but without the slightest warrant, except a passage in his Table-Talk (No. 728). Its first appearance in literature was in 1775, in Der Wandsbecker Bote, of Matthias Claudius, who incorporated it as a toast. Ascribed to Luther by Th. Weyler, who changed "Weiber," women, to "Weib," wife, to make it a little more decorous. (See BÜCHMANN, Geflügelte Worte.)

Then sing, as Martin Luther sang,
As Doctor Martin Luther sang:
"Who loves not wine, woman, and song,
He is a fool his whole life long!"

W. M. THACKERAY, A Credo. St. 1.

In the order named these are the hardest to control: Wine, Women and Song.

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, The Ancient Three.

One of the oldest and quietest roads to contentment lies through the conventional trinity of wine, woman and song.

REXFORD GUY TUGWELL, Address, Woman's National Democratic Club, Washington, D. C., May, 1934.

2 Women, money and wine have their pleasure and their poison. (Femme, argent et vin, Ont leur bien et leur venin.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

3 Baths, wine, and Venus bring decay to our bodies,
But baths, wine, and Venus make life worth living.

(Balnea, vina, Venus corrumpunt corpora
nostra,

Sed vitam faciunt balnea, Vina, Venus.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph. (GRUTER, Monumenta.)

WINKING

4 There's a time to wink as well as to see.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

5 Bean-pods are noisiest when dry,
And you always wink with your weakest eye.

BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony.

6 He that winketh with eye and looketh with the other

I will not trust him though he were my brother.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

7 Wink and shut their apprehensions up.

JOHN MARSTON, Antonio's Revenge: Prologue.

8 Hard must he wink that shuts his eyes from heaven.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Feast of Worms. Sec. iii,
med. 3.

9 You may wink and choose.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216.

10 Although I wink I am not blind.

CLEMENT ROBINSON, Handful of Pleasant Delites. (1585)

11 I will wink on her to consent, my lord, if you will teach her to know my meaning.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 333.

Wink each at other; hold the sweet jest up.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 239.

12 When most I wink, then do mine eyes best
see.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xliii.

13 A wink's as good as a nod with some folks.

DOROTHY WORDSWORTH, Journal. Vol. i, p. 129.
(1802)

A nod is as good as a wink.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 25. (1822)

WINTER

14 O Winter! bar thine adamantine doors:
The north is thine; there hast thou built thy dark,

Deep-founded habitation. Shake not thy roofs,
Nor bend thy pillars with thine iron car.

WILLIAM BLAKE, To Winter.

O Winter, ruler of th' inverted year, . . .

I crown thee king of intimate delights,
Fire-side enjoyments, home-born happiness,
And all the comforts that the lowly roof
Of undisturb'd retirement, and the hours
Of long uninterrupted ev'ning, know.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 120.

See, Winter comes to rule the varied year,
Sullen and sad, with all his rising train—
Vapours, and clouds, and storms.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 1.

15 Nor from the perfect circle of the year
Can even Winter's crystal gems be spared.

CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CRANCH, December.

16 Hence, rude Winter; crabbed old fellow,
Never merry, never mellow!

Well-a-day! in rain and snow

What will keep one's heart aglow?

ALFRED DOMETT, A Glee for Winter.

17 But winter ling'ring chills the lap of May.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 172.

Winter lingered so long in the lap of Spring, that it occasioned a great deal of talk.

BILL NYE, Spring.

1 Sharp winter is now loosened. (Solvitur acris hiems.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 1.

The sluggish winter returns to us. (Bruma recurrit iners.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 12.

2 His breath like silver arrows pierced the air,
The naked earth crouched shuddering at his feet,

His finger on all flowing waters sweet
Forbidding lay—motion nor sound was there:—

Nature lay frozen dead,—and still and slow,
A winding sheet fell o'er her body fair,
Flaky and soft, from his wide wings of snow.

FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE, Winter, l. 9.

3 Oh the long and dreary Winter!

Oh the cold and cruel Winter!

LONGFELLOW, The Song of Hiawatha. Pt. xx.

Drag on, long night of winter, in whose heart,
Nurse of regret, the dead spring yet has part!

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Fostering of Aslang: Conclusion.

Late February days; and now, at last,
Might you have thought that Winter's woe was past;

So fair the sky was and so soft the air.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: February.

4 Old Winter sad, in snow y-clad,
Is making a doleful din;

But let him howl till he crack his jowl,
We will not let him in. . . .

Come, lads, let's sing, till the rafters ring;

Come, push the can about;—

From our snug fireside this Christmas-tide
We'll keep old Winter out.

THOMAS NOEL, Old Winter.

5 Now there is frost upon the hill
And no leaf stirring in the wood;

The little streams are cold and still;

Never so still has winter stood.

GEORGE O'NEIL, Where It Is Winter.

6 But see, Orion sheds unwholesome dew;
Arise, the pines a noxious shade diffuse;
Sharp Boreas blows, and Nature feels decay,
Time conquers all, and we must Time obey.

POPE, Pastorals: Winter, l. 85.

7 A green winter makes a fat churchyard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 42. (1670)

8 Here feel we but the penalty of Adam,
The seasons' difference, as the icy fang
And churlish chiding of the winter's wind,
Which, when it bites and blows upon my body,

Even till I shrink with cold, I smile and say,
"This is no flattery."

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 5.

Quake in the present winter's state and wish
The warmer days would come.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 5.

Winter tames man, woman and beast.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 24.

9 Winter's not gone yet, if the wild-geese fly that way.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 46.

10 When icicles hang by the wall,
And Dick the shepherd blows his nail,
And Tom bears logs into the hall,

And milk comes frozen home in pail,
When blood is nipp'd and ways be foul,
Then nightly sings the staring owl,

Tu-whit;

Tu-who, a merry note,

While greasy Joan doth keel the pot.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 922.

When all aloud the wind doth blow,
And coughing drowns the parson's saw,

And birds sit brooding in the snow,

And Marian's nose looks red and raw,

When roasted crabs hiss in the bowl,

Then nightly sings the staring owl.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 931.

11 Winter, which being full of care
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. lvi.

A sad tale's best for winter;

I have one of sprites and goblins.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 25.

12 Be like the sun and the meadow, which are not in the least concerned about the coming winter.

BERNARD SHAW, An Unsocial Socialist. Ch. 5.

13 If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?

SHELLEY, Ode to the West Wind.

Lastly came Winter, clothed all in frieze,
Chattering his teeth for cold that did him chill,
Whilst on his hoary beard his breath did freeze,
And the dull drops, that from his purpled bill
As from a limbeck did adown distill.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto 7, st. 31.

14

Thus Winter falls,

A heavy gloom oppressive o'er the world,
Through Nature shedding influence malign,
And rouses up the seeds of dark disease.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 57.

Dread Winter spreads his latest glooms,
And reigns tremendous o'er the conquered year.
How dead the vegetable kingdom lies!

How dumb the tuneful! Horror wide extends
His desolate domain.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 1024.

1 Such a winter eve. Now for a mellow fire, some old poet's page, or else serene philosophy.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal.

2 Winter eateth what summer getteth.

UNKNOWN, Good Wyfe Wold a Pylgremage, l. 155. (1460)

Winter draws out what summer laid in.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5753.

WISDOM

I—Wisdom: Definitions

3 Wisdom cometh by suffering. (Τὸν πάθει μάθος θέντα κυρίως ἔχειν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 177.

Justice turns her scale, so that wisdom cometh at the price of suffering. (Δίκαια δὲ τοῖς μὲν παθοῦσιν μαθεῖν ἐπιτρέπει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 250.

Who knows useful things, not many things, is wise. (Ὁ χρήσιμ' εἰδώς, οὐχ ὁ πολλ' εἰδώς, σοφός.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 218.

This is the mark of men just and wise as well—even in calamity not to cherish anger against the gods.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 240.

4 Wisdom consists in rising superior both to madness and to common sense, and in lending oneself to the universal illusion without becoming its dupe.

AMIEL, Journal, 11 Dec., 1872.

5 Many are wise in their own ways, that are weak for government or counsel.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

To be wise by rule and by experience are utterly opposite principles; so that he who is used to the one is unfit for the other.

BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. 6.

6 It hath been an opinion that the French are wiser than they seem, and the Spaniards seem wiser than they are; but howsoever it be between nations, certainly it is so between man and man.

BACON, Essays: Of Seeming Wise.

The Italians are wise before the deed; the Germans in the deed; the French after the deed.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Ask, who is wise?—You'll find the self-same man
A sage in France, a madman in Japan;
And here some head beneath a mitre swells,
Which there had tingled to a cap and bells.

THOMAS MOORE, The Sceptic, l. 17.

7 Wisdom is the knowledge of things human and divine and of the causes by which those things are controlled. (Sapientia est, . . . re-rum divinarum et humanarum causarumque, quibus eæ res continentur, scientia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 5.

They call him the wisest man to whose mind that which is required at once occurs. (Sapientissimum esse dicunt eum, cui, quod opus sit, ipsi veniat in mentem.)

CICERO, Pro Cluentio. Ch. 31, sec. 84.

The wise man does nothing of which he can repent, nothing against his will, but does everything nobly, consistently, soberly, rightly.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v,
ch. 28, sec. 81.

8 There is this difference between happiness and wisdom: he that thinks himself the happiest man, really is so; but he that thinks himself the wisest is generally the greatest fool.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

9 In wisdom's ranks he stands the first,
Who stands prepared to meet the worst.

NATHANIEL COTTON, When Dangers.

Extremes of fortune are true wisdom's test,
And he's of men most wise who bears them best.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Philemon.

10 Wisdom and goodness are twin-born, one
heart

Must hold both sisters, never seen apart.

COWPER, Expostulation, l. 634.

Wisdom is only found in truth. (Die Weisheit ist nur in der Wahrheit.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. Pt. iii.

Wisdom without honesty is mere craft and cozen-
age.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Vita Recta.

11 To finish the moment, to find the journey's end in every step of the road, to live the greatest number of good hours, is wisdom.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

The invariable mark of wisdom is to see the miraculous in the common.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Prospects.

Raphael paints wisdom, Handel sings it, Phidias carves it, Shakespeare writes it, Wren builds it, Columbus sails it, Luther preaches it, Washington arms it, Watt mechanizes it.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Art.

12 He is a wise man who does not grieve for the things which he has not, but rejoices for those which he has.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. cxxix.

13 Wisdom is full of pity; and thereby

Men pay for too much wisdom with much pain.

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 294. (Murray, tr.)

1 He is not wise to me who is wise in words only, but he who is wise in deeds. (Non mihi sapit qui sermone, sed qui factis sapit.)

ST. GREGORY, Agrigent. See also WORD AND DEED.

2 He that has grown to wisdom hurries not, But thinks and weighs what wisdom bids him do.

GUINICELLI, Of Moderation and Tolerance.

3 The mark of wisdom is to read aright the present, and to march with the occasion.

HOMER, (Contest of Hesiod and Homer. Sec. 321.)

Wisdom sails with wind and tide.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes. Fo. 97.

4 To flee from folly is the beginning of wisdom. (Sapientia prima Stultitia caruisse.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 41.

5 The wisdom of mankind creeps slowly on, Subject to every doubt that can retard Or fling it back upon an earlier time.

RICHARD HENGIST HORNE, Orion. Bk. iii, canto ii.

6 Wisdom denotes the pursuing of the best ends by the best means.

FRANCIS HUTCHESON THE ELDER, Inquiry into the Original of Our Ideas of Beauty and Virtue. Tr. ii, sec. 5.

7 The wisdom of the wise is an uncommon degree of common sense.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 173.)

8 Wisdom is the conqueror of fortune. (Victrix fortunæ sapientia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 20.

A wise man is out of the reach of fortune.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 52. Cited as "that insolent paradox."

A wise man turns chance into good fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 475.

9 Wisdom first teaches what is right. (Prima docet rectum sapientia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 189.

13 Wisdom, which is the only liberty. (Sapientia, quæ sola libertas est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Luciliūm. Epis. 37, sec. 4.

Wisdom is the perfect good of the human mind; philosophy is the love of wisdom and the endeavor to attain it. (Sapientia perfectum bonum est mentis humanæ. Philosophia sapientiæ amor est et adfectatio.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Luciliūm. Epis. 89, sec. 4.

Chief Good is to live in agreement and harmony with nature.

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. iii, ch. 9, sec. 31.

14 Wisdom is a hen, whose cackling we must value and consider because it is attended with an egg; but, then, lastly, it is a nut, which, unless you choose with judgement, may cost you a tooth, and pay you with nothing but a worm.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub: Introduction.

15 True wisdom consists not only in seeing what is before your eyes, but in foreseeing what is to come. (Istuc est sapere, non quod ante pedes modest Videre sed etiam illa quæ futura sunt Prospicere.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 386. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

To know

That which before us lies in daily life, Is the prime wisdom; what is more is fume.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 192.

16 A man is wise with the wisdom of his time only, and ignorant with its ignorance.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 31 Jan., 1853.

Whatever of past or present wisdom has published itself to the world, is palpable falsehood till it come and utter itself by my side.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 4 Aug., 1838.

The wisest man preaches no doctrines; he has no scheme; he sees no rafter, not even a cobweb, against the heavens. It is clear sky.

THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers, p. 60.

17 Wisdom is to science what death is to life, or, if you prefer it, wisdom is to death what science is to life.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 55.

18 Wisdom is not finally tested in the schools, Wisdom cannot be pass'd from one having it to another not having it, Wisdom is of the soul, is not susceptible of proof, is its own proof.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Open Road. Sec. 6.

21 Wisdom makes but a slow defence against trouble, though at last a sure one.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 21.

Sorrow can wait,
For there is magic in the calm estate
Of grief; lo, where the dust complies Wisdom lies.

GLADYS CROMWELL, Folded Power.

22 This task, this pursuit [of wisdom] let us speed, small and great, if we would live dear to our country and to ourselves. (Hoc opus, hoc studium, parvi properemus et ampli, Si patriæ volumus, si nobis vivere cari.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 28.

Defer not till to-morrow to be wise,
To-morrow's sun on thee may never rise.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Letter to Cobham.

Be wise to-day; 'tis madness to defer;
Next day the fatal precedent will plead;
Thus on, till wisdom is push'd out of life.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 390.

23 The price of wisdom is above rubies.

Old Testament: Job, xxviii, 18.

Wisdom is better than rubies.

Old Testament: Proverbs, viii, 11.

24 Nothing is sweeter than to dwell in the serene temples of the wise, well fortified by learning. (Nil dulcius est, bene quam munita tenere Edita doctrina sapientum templa serena.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. ii, l. 7.

So, from this glittering world with all its fashion,
Its fire and play of men, its stir, its march,
Let me have wisdom, Beauty, wisdom and passion,

Bread to the soul, rain where the summers
parch.

Give me but these, and though the darkness close
Even the night will blossom as the rose.

JOHN MASEFIELD, On Growing Old.

1
Wisdom is justified of her children.

New Testament: Matthew, xi, 19; Luke, vii, 35.

How great a thing is wisdom! I never come near you but I go away wiser. (Quanti est sapere! Numquam accedo, quin abs te abeam doctior.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 791. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

11
Wisdom alone is true ambition's aim,

Wisdom the source of virtue, and of fame,
Obtained with labour, for mankind employed,
And then, when most you share it, best enjoyed.

WILLIAM WHITEHEAD, On Nobility.

12 Wisdom is the gray hair unto men, and an unspotted life is old age.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, iv, 9.

she is easily seen of them that love her, and found of such as seek her.

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, vi, 12.

13
Wisdom, the sole artificer of bliss.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 94.

Can gold calm passion, or make reason shine?
Can we dig peace, or wisdom, from the mine?
Wisdom to gold prefer; for 'tis much less
To make our fortune than our happiness.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 291.

Wisdom, tho' richer than Peruvian mines,
And sweeter than the sweet ambrosial hive,
What is she, but the means of happiness?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 498.

But wisdom, awful wisdom! which inspects,
Discerns, compares, weighs, separates, infers,
Seizes the right, and holds it to the last.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1247.

IV—Wisdom: Its Emptiness

- 2 Tell wisdom she entangles
Herself in overwiseness.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.
- 3 O world, thou choosest not the better part!
It is not wisdom to be only wise,
And on the inward vision close the eyes,
But it is wisdom to believe the heart.
GEORGE SANTAYANA, O World.
Oh, thriftlessness of dream and guess!
Oh, wisdom which is foolishness!
Why idly seek from outward things
The answer inward silence brings?
WHITTIER, Questions of Life.
- 4 Take thy balance if thou be so wise,
And weigh the wind that under heaven doth blow;
Or weigh the light that in the east doth rise;
Or weigh the thought that from man's mind
doth flow.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto ii, st. 43.
- 5 Thy wisdom all can do, but—make thee wise.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1415.

V—Wisdom and Ignorance

- 6 The wisest man is he who does not fancy that he is so at all. (Le plus sage est celui qui ne pense point l'être.)
BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. i, l. 46.
You read of but one wise man, and all that he knew was that he knew nothing.
CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act i, sc. 1.
- 7 The wise know too well their weakness to assume infallibility; and he who knows most, knows best how little he knows.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 129.
- 8 For only by unlearning Wisdom comes.
J. R. LOWELL, The Parting of the Ways. St. 8.

And only Faith beholds that all is well.
SIDNEY LYSAGHT, A Lesson, l. 102.
- 10 Knowledge is proud that he has learn'd so much;
Wisdom is humble that he knows no more.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 96. See also
KNOWLEDGE AND WISDOM.
- 11 That man is wisest who, like Socrates, realizes that his wisdom is worthless. ("Οτι οὗτοῦ ὡμῶν σοφώτατος ἐστιν, ὅστις ὥσπερ Σωκράτης ἔγνωκεν ὅτι οὐδενὸς ἀξιόσ ἐστι τῇ ἀληθείᾳ πρὸς σοφίαν.)
PLATO, Apologia of Socrates. Sec. 23.
The first and wisest of them all profess'd
To know this only, that he nothing knew.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 293.

- Socrates . . .
Whom, well inspir'd, the oracle pronounc'd
Wiseest of men.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 274.
What is it to be wise?
'T is but to know how little can be known,
To see all others' faults, and feel our own.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 260.
See also under SELF-KNOWLEDGE.
- 12 He bids fair to grow wise who has discovered that he is a fool. (Non pote non sapere, qui se stultum intellegit.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 598.
- 13 For when I dinna clearly see,
I always own I dinna ken,
And that's the way with wisest men.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Eclogue.
- 14 The doorstep to the temple of wisdom is a knowledge of our own ignorance.
CHARLES HADDEN SPURGEON, Gleanings among the Sheaves: The First Lesson.
- 15 One may almost doubt if the wisest man has learned anything of absolute value by living.
H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.
- 16 Disasters, do the best we can,
Will reach both great and small;
And he is oft the wisest man
Who is not wise at all.
WORDSWORTH, The Oak and the Broom. St. 7.

VI—Wisdom, After the Event

- 17 The wise man must be wise before, not after, the event. (Οὐ μετανοεῖν, ἀλλὰ προνοεῖν χρὴ τὸν ἄνδρα τὸν σοφόν.)
EPICHRMUS, Fabulae Incertae. Frag. 5.
- 18 After the event, even a fool is wise. (Ἐχθὲν δὲ τε νήπιος ἔγνω.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32.
He is a fool
Who only sees the mischiefs that are past.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32. (Bryant, tr.)
You are wise after the event. (Οἶμ' ὡς ἔοικας ὀπὲ τὴν δίκην ἰδεῖν.)
SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1270.
Their hindsight was better than their foresight.
HENRY WARD BEECHER [?].
- 19 Away, thou strange justifier of thyself, to be wiser than thou wert, by the event.
BEN JONSON, The Silent Woman. Act ii, sc. 2.
- 20 The event is the schoolmaster of fools. (Even-tus stultorum magister est.)
LIVY, History. Bk. xx, sec. 39.
- 21 To protect the booty when it is too late.
(Post tempus prædæ præsidium parem.)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 394. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

When the great steed
Is stole, then he taketh heed
And maketh the stable-door fast.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 901.
(c. 1390)

It was not time to shut the stable when the horses be lost and gone.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Æsop, ii, 245. (1484)

It is too late to shut the stable door when the steed is stolen.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues, p. 37. (1579)

When the horse has been stolen, the fool shuts the stable. (Quant le cheval est emblé dounke ferme fols l'estable.)

UNKNOWN, Les Proverbes de Vilain.

1 So that we may not be like the Athenians, who never consulted except after the event done. (Afin que ne semblons es Atheniens, qui ne consultoient jamais sinon après le cas faict.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 24.

2 Nine-tenths of wisdom is being wise in time.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Lincoln, Neb.,
14 June, 1917.

3 The men who were yesterday so cautious and prudent, were now, after the event, ready and vainglorious. (Atque illi modo cauti ac sapientes prompti post enentum ac magniloqui erant.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Ch. 27.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1311.

6 All her commands were gracious, sweet requests.

How could it be then, but that her requests
Must need have sounded to me as commands?

S. T. COLERIDGE, Zapolya. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 1.

7 Yearn not for soft things, lest thou earn the hard. (Μὴ τὰ μαλακὰ μῶσο, μὴ τὰ σκληρὰ ἔχῃς.)

EPICHRMUS. (XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk.
ii, ch. i, sec. 20.)

Don't ask for what you'll wish you hadn't got.
(Postea noli rogare, quod inpetrare nolueris.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec.
2. Quoted as a common saying.

8 If a man could half his wishes he would double his Troubles.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1752.

9 What one has wished for in youth, in old age one has in abundance. (Was man in der Ju-gend wünscht, hat man im Alter die Fülle.)

GOETHE, Wahrheit und Dichtung: Pt. ii,
Motto.

10 Most men let their wishes run away with them. They have no mind to stop them in their career, the motion is so pleasing.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 248.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria. C6. (c. 1520)

Wishers never filled the bag.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

4 As you cannot do what you wish, you should wish what you can do. (Quoniam non potest id fieri quod vis, id velis quod possit.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 305. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

When what you wish does not happen, wish for what does happen.

UNKNOWN. An Arabic proverb.

5 Take this in good part, whatsoever thou be,
And wish me no worse than I wish unto thee.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Think on the Poor.

6 We cannot wish for that we know not. (On ne peut désirer ce qu'on ne connaît pas.)

VOLTAIRE, Zaïre. Act i, sc. 1.

7 I would it were not as I think;
I would I thought it were not.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, A Lament.

O, that I were where I would be,
Then would I be where I am not;
For where I am I would not be,
And where I would be I can not.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, The Ship of Stars. Ch. 12. Quoted.

8 Wishing, of all employments, is the worst;
Philosophy's reverse, and health's decay! . . .
Wishing is an expedient to the poor.

Wishing, that constant hectic of a fool.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 71.

Our wishes lengthen as our sun declines.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 661.

Thy fickle wish is ever on the wing.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 917.

WIT

I—Wit: Definitions

10 Wit without an employment is a disease.

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 2, subs. 6.

11 A witty thing never excited laughter; it pleases only the mind, and never distorts the countenance.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

True wit never made us laugh.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

He is always laughing, for he has an infinite deal of wit.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 475.

I can't say whether we had more wit amongst us now than usual, but I am certain we had more laughing, which answered the end as well.

GOLDSMITH, The Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 32.

12 If you have wit, use it to please, and not to hurt: you may shine like the sun in the temperate zones, without scorching.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

If God gives you wit . . . wear it like your sword in the scabbard, and do not brandish it to the terror of the whole company. . . . A wise man will live as much within his wit as his income.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 July, 1752.

I have too thoughtful a wit: like a penknife in too narrow a sheath, too sharp for its body.

GEORGE HERBERT. (WALTON, Life of Herbert.)

13 Wit is so shining a quality that everybody admires it; most people aim at it, all people fear it, and few love it except in themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 July, 1752.

14 A wit should no more be sincere than a woman constant; one argues a decay of parts, as t'other of beauty.

CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act i, sc. 6.

15 Thus reputation is a spur to wit,
And some wits flag through fear of losing it.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 520.

16 Wit makes its own welcome, and levels all distinctions. No dignity, no learning, no force of character, can make any stand against good wit.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: The Comic.

17 Nothing more smooth than glass, yet nothing more brittle;
Nothing more fine than wit, yet nothing more fickle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6472.

18 There must be more malice than love in the hearts of all wits.

B. R. HAYDON, Table Talk.

19 Wit is the salt of conversation, not the food.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Comic Writers. Lecture i.

Those who cannot miss an opportunity of saying a good thing . . . are not to be trusted with the management of any great question.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 59.

<sup>1</sup> Wit's an unruly engine, wildly striking
Sometimes a friend, sometimes the engineer.
Hast thou the knack? pamper it not with liking:

But if thou want it, buy it not too dear.
Many affecting wit beyond their power,
Have got to be a dear fool for an hour.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 41.

<sup>2</sup> Wit is the clash and reconciliation of incongruities; the meeting of extremes round a corner.

LEIGH HUNT, Wit and Humour.

<sup>3</sup> Wit, at its best, consists in the terse intrusion into an atmosphere of serene mental habit of some uncompromising truth.

PHILANDER JOHNSON, Collymists' Confessional.
(Everybody's Magazine, May, 1920.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 573. (Dryden, tr.)
A man does not please long when he has only one species of wit. (On ne plaît pas longtemps quand on n'a qu'une sorte d'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 413.

One wit, like a knuckle of ham in soup, gives a zest and flavour to the dish, but more than one serves only to spoil the pottage.

SMOLLETT, Humphrey Clinker.

<sup>5</sup> Wit is nothing worth till it be dear bought.

HENRY MEDWALL, Nature. Pt. ii, l. 1292. (c.
1500)

It hath been an old said saw . . . that wit is better if it be the dearer bought.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 34.

Bought wit is best, but may cost too much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1011.

Bought wit is dear.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies.

<sup>6</sup> Impromptu is truly the touchstone of wit.
(L'impromptu est justement la pierre de touche de l'esprit.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Précieuses Ridicules. Sc. ix, l. 152.

<sup>7</sup> Raillery is a mode of speaking in favor of one's wit at the expense of one's better nature. (La raillerie est un discours en faveur de son esprit contre son bon naturel.)

MONTESQUIEU, Pensées Diverses.

<sup>8</sup> Wit is the most rascally, contemptible, beg-garly thing on the face of the earth.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Apprentice.

<sup>9</sup> Wit when temperate is pleasing, when unbridled it offends. (Temperatæ suaves sunt argutiæ: Immodicæ offendunt.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 5, l. 41.

<sup>10</sup> For wit and judgment often are at strife,

Tho' meant each other's aid, like man and wife.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 82.

<sup>11</sup> True wit is nature to advantage dress'd,
What oft was thought, but ne'er so well ex-press'd.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 97.

Wit is that which has been often thought, but never before was well expressed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Paraphrase of Pope. (Lives of the Poets: Cowley.)

So modest plainness sets off sprightly wit:

For works may have more wit than does them good,

As bodies perish thro' excess of blood.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 102.

<sup>12</sup> If faith itself has diff'rent dresses worn,
What wonder modes in wit should take their turn?

Oft, leaving what is natural and fit,
The current folly proves the ready wit;

And authors think their reputation safe,
Which lives as long as fools are pleas'd to laugh.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 246.

<sup>13</sup> Wit is folly unless a wise man hath the keeping of it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174.

<sup>14</sup> Wit, like tierce claret, when 't begins to pall,
Neglected lies, and 's of no use at all,
But in its full perfection of decay
Turns vinegar, and comes again in play.

JOHN WILMOT, Epigram.

<sup>15</sup> Wit and wisdom are born with a man.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Learning.

<sup>16</sup> Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 378.

<sup>17</sup> There's no possibility of being witty without a little ill-nature; the malice of a good thing is the barb that makes it stick.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act i, sc. 1.

Nae wut without a portion o' impertinence.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ.

<sup>18</sup> Surprise is so essential an ingredient of wit that no wit will bear repetition;—at least the original electrical feeling produced by any piece of wit can never be renewed.

SYDNEY SMITH, Lectures on Moral Philosophy,
No. 10.

<sup>19</sup> Wit consists in knowing the resemblance of things which differ, and the difference of things which are alike.

MADAME DE STAËL, Germany. Pt. iii, ch. 8.

1 It is with wits as with razors, which are never so apt to cut those they are employed on as when they have lost their edge.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub: Author's Preface.

As in smooth oil the razor best is whet,
So wit is by politeness sharpest set:
Their want of edge from their offence is seen;
Both pain us least when exquisitely keen.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 119.

Don't put too fine a point to your wit, for fear it should get blunted.

CERVANTES, Exemplary Novels: Little Gypsy.

2 Wit rules the heavens, discretion guides the skies.

TASSO, Gerusalemme. Bk. x, st. 20.

3 Backstair wit. (Esprit de l'escalier.)

M. DE TRÉVILLE. (PIERRE NICOLE, King's English, p. 32, note.)

I never have any wit until I am below stairs. (Je n'ai jamais d'esprit qu'au bas de l'escalier.)

LA BRUYÈRE, according to J.-J. Rousseau.

4 Lucian, well skill'd in scoffing, this has writ:
Friend, that's your folly which you think your wit;

This you vent oft, void both of wit and fear,
Meaning another, when yourself you jeer.

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.

5 Wit is more necessary than beauty; and I think no young woman ugly that has it, and no handsome woman agreeable without it.

WYCHERLEY, The Country Wife. Act i, sc. 1.

6 Against their wills what numbers ruin shun,
Purely through want of wit to be undone!
Nature has shown, by making it so rare,
That wit's a jewel which we need not wear.

YOUNG, Epistle to Mr. Pope. Epis. ii, l. 80.

7 Wit, how delicious to man's dainty taste!
'T is precious, as a vehicle of sense;
But, as its substitute, a dire disease.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1232.

Wit, widow'd of good sense, is worse than nought.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1264.

8 There is nothing breaks so many friendships as a difference of opinion as to what constitutes wit.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

II—Wit: Apothegms

9 Melancholy men of all others are most witty.

ARISTOTLE. (BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, iii, 1, 3.)

10 All this is but a web of the wit; it can work nothing.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

11 I can say a neat thing myself if they will give me time.

J. M. BARRIE, Farewell, Miss Julie Logan, p. 16.

12 An ounce of wit is worth a pound of sorrow.

RICHARD BAXTER, Of Self-Denial.

13 What silly people wits are! (Que les gens d'esprit sont bêtes.)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Barbier de Séville. Act i, sc. 1.

14 Great wits and valours, like great states,
Do sometimes sink with their own weights.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 269.

15 Here lies a king that ruled, as he saw fit,
The universal monarchy of wit.

THOMAS CAREW, Elegy Upon Dr. Donne.

Her wit was more than man, her innocence a child.

DRYDEN, Elegy on Anne Killigrew, l. 70.

As a wit, if not first, in the very first line.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 96.

Of Manners gentle, of Affections mild;
In Wit a man; Simplicity, a child.

POPE, Epitaph on Mr. Gay.

16 Good wits jump; a word to the wise is enough.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 37.

See how good wits jump.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence. Vol. ii, p. 94.

Ah, where thy legs, that witty pair!
For "great wits jump"—and so did they.

THOMAS HOOD, To Grimaldi.

Great wits jump together. (Les beaux esprits rencontrent.)
Pointed out by Notes and Queries (vi, x, 216)
to be the same epigram.

17 Thou hast wit at will.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, May-Day. Act iv, sc. 3.

She's very handsome, and has wit at will.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

18 Wit to persuade and beauty to delight.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Orchestra. St. 5.

19 Wit will shine
Through the harsh cadence of a rugged line.

DRYDEN, To the Memory of Mr. Oldham.

20 Good wits, you know, have short memories.

DRYDEN, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act iv, sc. 1.

Great wits have short memories.

SWIFT, Works. Vol. ix, p. 191.

21 And leave thy peacock wit behind.

EMERSON, Woodnotes. Pt. ii.

22 It is wit to pick a lock and steal a horse, but it is wisdom to let them alone.

- Thy wit is as quick as the greyhound's mouth; it catches.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 2, l. 11.
- Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting: it is a most sharp sauce.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 83.

A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, "Wit, whither wilt?"

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 167.

1 Make the doors upon a woman's wit and it will out at the casement; shut that and 'twill out at the key-hole; stop that, 't will fly with the smoke out at the chimney.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 163.

2 I am not only witty in myself, but the cause that wit is in other men.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 11.

Your wit makes others witty. (Votre esprit en donne aux autres.)

CATHERINE II, Letter to Voltaire.

It is having in some measure a sort of wit to know how to use the wit of others.

STANISLAUS, KING OF POLAND, Maxims and Moral Sentences.

It is by such encounters that wits become acquainted. (Les beaux esprits lernen einander durch dergleichen rencontre erkennen.)

ANDREAS GRYPHIUS, Horribilicribrifax. Act iv, 7.

3 His eye begets occasion for his wit; For every object that the one doth catch, The other turns to a mirth-moving jest.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 69.

This fellow pecks up wit, as pigeons pease, And utters it again when God doth please:

He is wit's pedler, and retails his wares; At wakes and wassails, meetings, markets, fairs; And we that sell by gross, the Lord doth know, Have not the grace to grace it with such show.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 315.

What a wit-snapper are you!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 55.

4 Wilt thou show the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 61.

Repair thy wit, good youth, or it will fall To cureless ruin.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 141.

5 He doth indeed show some sparks that are like wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 194.

Wit now and then, struck smartly, shows a spark.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 663.

6 There's a skirmish of wit between them.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 64.

To leave this keen encounter of our wits, And fall somewhat into a slower method.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 115.

7 He . . . turn'd your wit the seamy side with-out.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 146.

8 Katharina: Where did you study all this goodly speech?

Petruchio: It is extempore, from my mother-wit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 264.

From jiggling veins of rhyming mother wits.

MARLOWE, Tamburlaine the Great: Prologue, l. 1.

9 Look, he 's winding up the watch of his wit; by and by it will strike.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 12.

10 I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that does harm to my wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 89.

11 For what says Quinapalus? "Better a witty fool than a foolish wit."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 39. "Quinapalus" is an imaginary author.

I am a fool, I know it: and yet, heav'n help me, I'm poor enough to be a wit.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 1.

His wit ran him out of his money, and now his poverty has run him out of his wits.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act v, sc. 2.

For though he is a wit, he is no fool.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 106.

12 Of course it's all tommy rot; but it's so brilliant, you know! How the dickens do you think of such things?

G. B. SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act i.

III—Wit: Lack of Wit

13 We grant, although he had much wit,

H' was very shy of using it,

As being loth to wear it out,

And therefore bore it not about;

Unless on holy days or so,

As men their best apparel do.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 45.

14 He says but little, and that little said

Owes all its weight, like loaded dice, to lead.

His wit invites you by his looks to come,

But when you knock it never is at home.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 301.

You beat your pate, and fancy wit will come:

Knock as you please, there 's nobody at home.

POPE, Epigram: An Empty House.

15 Men of quality are above wit.

JOHN CROWNE, Sir Courtly Nice.

16 Who can prove Wit to be witty when with deeper ground

Dulness intuitive declares wit dull?

GEORGE ELIOT, A College Breakfast-party.

1 Of all wit's uses the main one
Is to live well with who has none.

R. W. EMERSON, Life.

2 Their heads sometimes so little that there is no room for wit; sometimes so long, that there is no wit for so much room.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane State.
Bk. iv, ch. 12.

3 Some of them are half-wits,
Two to a wit, there are a set of them.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

4 He must be a dull Fellow indeed, whom neither Love, Malice, nor Necessity, can inspire with Wit.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. iv.

5 No one shall have wit save we and our friends.
(Nul n'aura de l'esprit, hors nous et nos amis.)
MOLÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act iii, sc. 2.

6 Want o' wit is waur than want o' siller.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

7 They have a plentiful lack of wit.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 202.

What a pretty thing man is when he goes in his doublet and hose and leaves off his wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
v, sc. 1, l. 210.

Methinks sometimes I have no more wit than a Christian or an ordinary man has.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 3, l. 88.

WITCH, WITCHCRAFT

8 I have ever believed, and do now know, that there are Witches: they that are in doubt of these . . . are obliquely and upon consequence a sort, not of Infidels, but Atheists.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 30.

9 And, vow! Tam saw an unco sight!
Warlocks and witches in a dance: . . .
Coffins stood round, like open presses,
That shaw'd the dead in their last dresses;
And, by some devilish cantraip sleight,
Each in its could hand held a light:

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter, l. 114.

10 [Witches] steal young children out of their cradles, ministerium dæmonum, and put deformed in their rooms, which we call changelings.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 1, subs. 3.

11 I tell thee, that is Mambrino's helmet.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 7. A helmet of pure gold which rendered the wearer invisible.

12 They that burn you for a witch lose all their coals.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4974.

They who see the Flying Dutchman never, never reach the shore.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, The Flying Dutchman.

13 They are neither man nor woman—
They are neither brute nor human,
They are Ghouls!

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Bells.

14 An' all us other children, when the supper things is done,
We set around the kitchen fire an' has the mostest fun

A-list'nin' to the witch tales 'at Annie tells about

An' the gobble-uns 'at gits you
Ef you Don't Watch Out!

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, *Little Orphant
Annie*.

15 This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet. He begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock.
He . . . squints the eye and makes the hare-lip.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 120.

16 Aroint thee, witch, aroint thee!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 129.

17 What are these,
So wither'd, and so wild in their attire;
That look not like the inhabitants o' th'
earth,
And yet are on 't?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 1, l. 33.

The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 79.

Saw you the weird sisters?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 136.

18 I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 129.

19 The foul witch Sycorax, who with age and envy

Was grown into a hoop.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 258.

16
Lift not the festal mask!—enough to know,
No scene of mortal life but teems with mortal
woe.

SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto ii, st. 1.

17
'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shapes of grief,

That can denote me truly; these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play,
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 76.

My grief lies all within;
And these external manners of laments
Are merely shadows to the unseen grief
That swells with silence in the tortured soul.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 295.

Beholding this, I weep and waste within,
And to myself bewail the unhallowed feast.

<sup>2</sup> A woman is but an animal, and an animal not of the highest order.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. Burke is quoting the opinions of the revolutionists.

<sup>3</sup> Women are only children of a larger growth.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

Women who are either indisputably beautiful, or indisputably ugly, are best flattered upon the score of their understandings; but those who are in a state of mediocrity, are best flattered upon their beauty, or at least their graces; for every woman who is not absolutely ugly thinks herself handsome.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

Women are to be talked to as below men, and above children.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Sept., 1748.

<sup>4</sup> What is woman? only one of Nature's agreeable blunders.

HANNAH COWLEY, Who's the Dupe? Act ii, 2.

The years those mats applaud,—

They keep their men from going in
With muddy feet to God.

MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Door-Mats.

<sup>6</sup> A lady is one who never shows her underwear unintentionally.

LILIAN DAY, Kiss and Tell.

<sup>7</sup> Women are like pictures; of no value in the hands of a fool till he hears men of sense bid high for the purchase.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> Woman, I tell you, is a microcosm, and rightly to rule her requires as great talents, as to govern a state.

Who is 't can read a woman?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 47.

4 There is a tide in the affairs of women
Which, taken at the flood, leads—God knows where.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 2.

5 "Petticoat influence" is a great reproach. . . .

I for one venerate a petticoat—
A garment of a mystical sublimity,
No matter whether russet, silk, or dimity.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 26. PETTICOAT GOVERNMENT, see WIFE: THE CROWING HEN.

I your angels don't like,—I love women.

Oh! no one. No one in particular. A woman of no importance.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
 Act i.

All men are married women's property. That is the only true definition of what married women's property really is.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
 Act ii.

III—Woman: Her Creation

See also under Adam

God, when he made the first woman . . .
 made her not of the head of Adam, for she should not climb to great lordship; . . .
 also certes, God made not woman of the foot of Adam, for she should not be holden too low; for she can not patiently suffer; but God made woman of the rib of Adam, for woman should be fellow unto man.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 79.

That the woman was made of a rib out of the side of Adam; not out of his feet to be trampled upon by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be loved.

MATTHEW HENRY, Note on Genesis, ii, 21, 22.

The woman was not taken

From Adam's head, we know,

To show she must not rule him—

'Tis evidently so.

The woman she was taken

From under Adam's arm,

So she must be protected

From injuries and harm.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, *Adam and Eve's Wedding
 Song*. Written for Sarah Haggard on her marriage to Aaron Grigsby.

Not from his head was woman took,

As made her husband to o'erlook;

Not from his feet, as one designed

The footstool of the stronger kind;

But fashioned for himself, a bride;

An equal, taken from his side.

CHARLES WESLEY, Short Hymns on Select Passages of the Holy Scriptures.

She was not made out of his head, Sir,

To rule and to govern the man;

Nor was she made out of his feet, Sir,

By man to be trampled upon. . . .

But she did come forth from his side, Sir,

His equal and partner to be;

And now they are coupled together,
 She oft proves the top of the tree.
 UNKNOWN. (DIXON, Ballads and Songs of the Peasantry of England.)

Reason and religion teach us that we too are primary existences, that it is for us to move in the orbit of our duty around the holy center of perfection, the companions not the satellites of men.

EMMA WILLARD. Inscribed beneath her bust in Hall of Fame.

1 You see, dear, it is not true that woman was made from man's rib; she was really made from his funny bone.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act iii.

2 Woman, they say, was only made of man: Methinks 'tis strange they should be so unlike!

It may be all the best was cut away,
 To make the woman, and the naught was left Behind with him.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act iii, sc. 2.

3 Auld Nature swears, the lovely dears
 Her noblest work she classes, O:

Her prentice han' she tried on man,
 An' then she made the lasses, O.
 BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes.

Our sex, you know, was after yours designed:
 The last perfection of the Maker's mind:
 Heaven drew out all the gold for us, and left your dross behind.

DRYDEN, Amphitryon: Prologue.

Man was made when Nature was but an apprentice, but woman when she was a skilful mistress of her art.

EDWARD SHEARPHAM, Cupid's Whirligig. (1607)

I have always said it: Nature meant woman to be her masterpiece. (Ich hab' es immer gesagt: das Weib wollte die Natur zu ihrem Meisterstücke machen.)

LESSING, Emilia Galotti. Act v, sc. 7.

4 To chase the clouds of life's tempestuous hours,
 To strew its short but weary way with flow'rs,

New hopes to raise, new feelings to impart,
 And pour celestial balsam on the heart;
 For this to man was lovely woman giv'n,
 The last, best work, the noblest gift of Heav'n.

T. L. PEACOCK, The Vision of Love, l. 1.

5 He beheld his own rougher make softened into sweetness, and tempered with smiles; he saw a creature who had, as it were, Heaven's second thought in her formation.

STEELE, The Christian Hero. Of Adam's first sight of Eve.

6 The man is, as a first creation, genuine;
 The woman is the clearer, softer, and diviner,

For he was from the inorganic dirt unfolded,
 But she came forth from clay which life before had moulded.

UNKNOWN, Woman. (From the Persian.)

IV—Woman: Good and Bad

7 Woman is the salvation or destruction of the family. She carries its destinies in the folds of her mantle.

AMIEL, Journal, 11 Dec., 1872.

8 Woman brings to man his greatest blessing and his greatest plague. (Γυνή κάφελειαν καὶ νόσον ἀνδρὶ φέρει μέγισταν.)

EURIPIDES, Alcæon.

There is no worse evil than a bad woman; and nothing has ever been created better than a good one.

(Τῆς μὲν κακῆς κάκιον οὐτι γίγνεται
 Γυναικός· ἐσθλῆς δ' οὐδὲν εἰς ὑπερβολὴν Πέφυκ' ἔμεινον.)

EURIPIDES, Melanippe Desmotis.

9 Women are ever in extremes; they are either better or worse than men.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes.

10 There's no such thing as picking out the best woman; it's only a question of comparative badness. (Nam optuma nulla potest eligi; Alia alia pejor est.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 139. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

This woman is a bad piece of goods. (Mala mers, era, hæc et callida est.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 707. (Act iv, sc. 2.)

11 And yet believe me, good as well as ill,
 Woman's at best a contradiction still.
 Heav'n, when it strives to polish it can
 Its last best work, but forms a softer man.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 269.

The soft, unhappy sex.

APHRA BEHN, The Wandering Beauty.

12 O Woman! in our hours of ease
 Uncertain, coy, and hard to please,
 And variable as the shade
 By the light quivering aspen made;
 When pain and anguish wring the brow,
 A ministering angel thou!

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 30.

We women seldom fail at a pinch.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i.

'Twas ever thus, when in life's storm
 Hope's star to man grows dim,
 An angel kneels, in woman's form,
 And breathes a prayer for him.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, Pocahontas.

The soul's armour is never well set to the heart unless a woman's hand has braced it.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Of Queens' Gardens.

13 A man gains no possession better than a good woman, nothing more horrible than a bad one.

(Γυναῖκος οὐδὲ χρημ' ἀνὴρ ληΐζεται
Ἐσθλῆς ἀμεινον, οὐδὲ βέλγιον κακῆς.)

SIMONIDES, Iambics. No. 7.

1
Daphne knows, with equal ease,
How to vex and how to please;
But the folly of her sex
Makes her sole delight to vex.

SWIFT, Daphne, l. 1.

Lose not time to contradict her,
Nor endeavour to convict her. . . .
Only take this rule along,
Always to advise her wrong,
And reprove her when she's right;
She may then grow wise for spite.

SWIFT, Daphne, l. 29.

2
Wicked women bother one. Good women bore one.
That is the only difference between them.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

I find that, ultimately, there are only two kinds of women, the plain and the coloured.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray.
Ch. 4; A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

The world is perfectly packed with good women.
To know them is a middle-class education.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

V—Woman: Saint Abroad, Devil at Home

3
A woman is a fury and a hurtful spirit in the house, an angel in the church, an ape in the bed, a mule unbridled in the field, and a goat in the garden.

BERCHER, Nobility of Women, 127. (1559)

We limit the comely parts of a woman to consist in four points: that is to be a shrew in the kitchen, a saint in the church, an angel at the board, and an ape in the bed, as the Chronicle reports by Mistress Shore, paramour to King Edward the Fourth.

RICHARD PUTTENHAM, Art of English Poesie,
299. (1589)

According to that wise saying, women be saints in the church, angels in the street, devils in the kitchen, and apes in your bed.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt, Master-Constable.
Act iii, sc. 3. (1602)

You are pictures out of doors,
Bells in your parlours, wild-cats in your kitchens,
Saints in your injuries, devils being offended, Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 110.
(1604)

4
At home like devils they be,
Abroad like angels pure.

EDWARD MORE, Defence of Women, l. 474.
(1560)

5
God save us all from wives who are angels in the street, saints in the church, and devils at home.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 13.

They are all saints abroad, but ask their maids
what they are at home.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 67.

6
Women are in churches, saints; abroad, angels; at home, devils.

GEORGE WILKINS, *The Miseries of Enforced
Marriage*. Act i.

As holy as saints in church they be,
And in street as angels they were,
At home, for all their hypocrisy,
A devilish life they lead all the year.

UNKNOWN, School House of Women, l. 658.
(1542)

7
A woman is an angel at ten, a saint at fifteen,
a devil at forty, and a witch at fourscore.

UNKNOWN, Sweetnam the Woman-Hater.

VI—Woman: A Blessing

See also Beauty in Women.

8
Loveliest of women! Heav'n is in thy soul,
Beauty and virtue shine for ever round thee,
Bright'ning each other: thou art all divine.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 2.

9
Where women are, the better things are implied if not spoken.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk: Conversation.

10
Not she with trait'rous kiss her Saviour stung,
Not she denied Him with unholy tongue;
She, while apostles shrank, could dangers brave,

Last at the cross and earliest at the grave.

EATON STANNARD BARRETT, Woman. Pt. i, l. 141.

11
There's a woman like a dewdrop, she's so purer than the purest;
And her noble heart's the noblest, yes, and her sure faith's the surest.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Blot in the 'Scutcheon.
Sc. 3.

12
Dear, dead women, with such hair, too—
what's become of all the gold Used to hang and brush their bosoms? I feel chilly and grown old.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Toccata of Galuppi's.

Round and round, like a dance of snow
In a dazzling drift, as its guardians, go
Floating the women faded for ages,
Sculptured in stone, on the poet's pages.
Then follow women fresh and gay,
Living and loving and loved to-day.

ROBERT BROWNING, Women and Roses.

All loved and lovely women dear to rhyme:
Thais, Cassandra, Helen and their fames,
Burn like tall candles through forgotten time,

Lighting the Past's dim arras with their names.

DAVID MORTON, Immortals.

Women, who were summer in men's hearts
Before the smile upon the Sphinx was cold
Or sand had hid the Syrian and his arts.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Sonnets. No. xviii.

1
To see her is to love her
And love but her for ever;
For Nature made her what she is,
And never made another!

BURNS, Bonnie Leslie.

To know her was to love her.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. St. i.

2
There's nought but care on every hand,
In every hour that passes, O:
What signifies the life o' man,
And 't were na for the lasses, O.

ROBERT BURNS, Green Grow the Rashes.

3
There is something in a woman beyond all human delight; a magnetic virtue, a charming quality, an occult and powerful motive.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. 2, mem. i, subs. 2. Paraphrasing Fonseca.

Soft as the memory of buried love,
Pure as the prayer which childhood wafts above.
BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 6.

She was the rainbow to thy sight!
Thy sun—thy heaven—of lost delight!
CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. iii, st. 36.

4
Without the smile from partial beauty won,
Oh! what were man?—a world without a sun!
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 23.

The world was sad; the garden was a wild;
And man, the hermit, sigh'd—till woman smiled!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 37.

If the heart of a man is depressed with cares,
The mist is dispell'd when a woman appears.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 1.

5
For with affections warm, intense, refined,
She mixed such calm and holy strength of
mind,
That, like Heaven's image in the smiling brook,
Celestial peace was pictured in her look.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 188.

A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent!
BYRON, She Walks in Beauty.

She was a queen of noble Nature's crowning,
A smile of hers was like an act of grace.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, The Solitary-Hearted.

Women may be whole oceans deeper than we are, but they are also a whole paradise better.
She may have got us out of Eden, but as a compensation she makes the earth very pleasant.

JOHN OLIVER HOBBS, Ambassador. Act iii.

6
The most precious possession that ever comes to a man in this world is a woman's heart.

J. G. HOLLAND, Lessons in Life: Perverseness.

Do you know you have asked for the costliest thing

Ever made by the Hand above—
A woman's heart, and a woman's life,
And a woman's wonderful love?

MARY T. LATHEROP, A Woman's Answer to a Man's Question.

7
If it was woman who put man out of Paradise, it is still woman, and woman only, who can lead him back.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

The Woman tempted me—and tempts me still!
Lord God, I pray You that she ever will!
EDMUND VANCE COOKE, *From the Book of Ex-
tenuations: Adam*.

8
And where she went, the flowers took thickest
root,

As she had sow'd them with her odorous foot.
BEN JONSON, The Sad Shepherd. Act i, sc. 1.

Her face betokened all things dear and good,
The light of somewhat yet to come was there
Asleep, and waiting for the opening day,
When childish thoughts, like flowers, would drift
away.

JEAN INGELow, Margaret in the Xebec. St. 57.

9
Without women the beginning of our life would be deprived of assistance, the middle portion of pleasure, and the end of consolation. (Sans les femmes le commencement de notre vie seroit privé de secours, le milieu de plaisirs, et le fin de consolation.)

VICTOR J. E. JOUY, Maximes.

10
There in the fane a beauteous creature stands,
The first best work of the Creator's hands,
Whose slender limbs inadequately bear
A full-orbed bosom and a weight of care;
Whose teeth like pearls, whose lips like cherries, show,

And fawn-like eyes still tremble as they glow.
KALIDASA, Sakuntalâ. (Williams, tr.)

11
A Lady with a Lamp shall stand
In the great history of the land,
A noble type of good,
Heroic womanhood.

LONGFELLOW, Santa Filomena. St. 10.

When all the medical officers have retired for the night, and silence and darkness have settled down upon those miles of prostrate sick, she [Florence Nightingale] may be observed alone, with a little lamp in her hand, making her solitary rounds.

MACDONALD, Letter to the London Times, when leaving Scutari. (Pictorial History of the Russian War, p. 310.)

12
'T was kin' o' kingdom-come to look
On sech a blessed cretur.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. St. 7.

For she was jes' the quiet kind
Whose natures never vary,
Like streams that keep a summer mind
Snowhid in Jenooary.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. St. 22.

1 Ah, there's many a beam from the fountain of
day

That, to reach us unclouded, must pass, on its way,

Through the soul of a woman.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1425.

Earth's noblest thing, a Woman perfected.

J. R. LOWELL, Irene, l. 62.

2 A little, tiny, pretty, witty, charming darling
she. (Parvula, pumilio, chariton mia tota merum sal.)

LUCRETIVS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 1158.

She is pretty to walk with,

And witty to talk with,

And pleasant too, to think on.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Brennoralt. Act ii, sc. 1.
Airy, fairy Lillian.

TENNYSON, Lilian.

A rosebud set with little wilful thorns,
And sweet as English air could make her, she!

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 153.

3 She walks—the lady of my delight—
A shepherdess of sheep.

Her flocks are thoughts. She keeps them
white;

She guards them from the steep;

She feeds them on the fragrant height,

And folds them in for sleep.

ALICE MEYNELL, The Shepherdess.

My sheep are thoughts, which I both guide and serve.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, The Arcadia. Bk. ii.

4 A bevy of fair women, richly gay
In gems and wanton dress.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 578.

Fair ladies, you drop manna in the way

Of starved people.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
v, sc. 1, l. 294.

5 When I approach
Her loveliness, so absolute she seems
And in herself complete, so well to know
Her own, that what she wills to do or say,
Seems wisest, virtuousest, discreetest, best.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 546.

O fairest of creation! last and best
Of all God's works! creature in whom excell'd
Whatever can to sight or thought be form'd,
Holy, divine, good, amiable, or sweet!

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 896.

6 O woman! lovely woman! Nature made thee
To temper man: we had been brutes without you.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1.

Without women the world would be like a palette set in the raw umber and white. Women are the colouring matter, the glaze the old painters used.

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 169.

7 I fill this cup to one made up
Of loveliness alone,

A woman, of her gentle sex

The seeming paragon;

To whom the better elements

And kindly stars have given

A form so fair, that, like the air,

'Tis less of earth than heaven.

EDWARD COATE PINKNEY, A Health.

Her very tone is music's own,

Like those of morning birds,

And something more than melody

Dwells ever in her words.

EDWARD COATE PINKNEY, A Health.

Come to the festal board to-night,

For bright-eyed beauty will be there,

Her coral lips in nectar steeped,

And garlanded her hair.

UNKNOWN, The Festal Board. (McGuffey's Third Reader, p. 217.)

8 Here rests a Woman, good without pretence,
Bless'd with plain Reason and with sober
Sense:

No Conquests she but o'er herself desired,

No Arts essay'd but not to be admired. . . .

So unaffected, so composed, a mind,

So firm, yet soft, so strong, yet so refin'd,

Heav'n, as its purest gold, by Tortures tried:

The Saint sustain'd it, but the Woman died.

POPE, Epitaph on Mrs. Corbet.

9 Honor women! they entwine and weave
Heavenly roses in our earthly life.

(Ehret die Frauen! sie flechten und weben Himmlische Rosen in's irdische Leben.)

SCHILLER, Würde der Frauen.

10 She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 49.

She in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hand with any princess of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 493.

Who is Silvia? what is she,

That all our swains commend her?

Holy, fair, and wise is she;

The heaven such grace doth lend her,

That she must admired be.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Act iv, sc. 2, l. 39.

11 She is her self of best things the collection.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, The Arcadia: Thyrsis and Dorus.

12 O Woman, you are not merely the handiwork of God, but also of men; these are ever endowing you with beauty from their hearts.

. . . You are one half woman and one half dream.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 59.

1 O miracle of noble womanhood!

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 48.

Scarce of earth nor all divine.

TENNYSON, Adeline, l. 3.

2 Amoret! as sweet and good
As the most delicious food,
Which, but tasted, does impart
Life and gladness to the heart.

EDMUND WALLER, To Amoret, l. 39.

How small a part of time they share
That are so wondrous sweet and fair!

EDMUND WALLER, Go, Lovely Rose, l. 19.

3 O! what's a table richly spread,
Without a woman at its head?

THOMAS WARTON, The Progress of Discontent.

Now in hot, now in cold,
Full woeful is the household
That wants a woman.

UNKNOWN. (Towneley Plays. No. 13, l. 419.
c. 1388)

4 How all her care was but to be fair,
And all her task to be sweet.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Heart of the Rose.

5 The sweetest woman ever Fate
Perverse denied a household mate,
Who, lonely, homeless, not the less
Found peace in love's unselfishness. . . .
Through years of toil and soil and care,
From glossy tress to thin gray hair,
All unprofaned she held apart
The virgin fancies of the heart.

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 352.

A woman tropical, intense,
In thought and act, in soul and sense,
She blended in a like degree
The vixen and the devotee.

WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 531. Referring to Harriet Livermore.

6 Angels listen when she speaks;
She's my delight, all mankind's wonder;
But my jealous heart would break
Should we live one day asunder.

JOHN WILMOT, *Song: My Dear Mistress
Has a Heart*.

7 She was a Phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely Apparition sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes as stars of Twilight fair;
Like Twilight's, too, her dusky hair;
But all things else about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful Dawn.

WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of Delight.

I saw her upon nearer view,

A Spirit, yet a Woman too! . . .
A Creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles.

WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of Delight.

And now I see with eye serene
The very pulse of the machine; . . .
A perfect Woman, nobly planned,
To warn, to comfort, and command;
And yet a Spirit still, and bright
With something of angelic light.

WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of Delight.

'T is hers to pluck the amaranthine flower
Of Faith, and round the sufferer's temples bind
Wreaths that endure affliction's heaviest shower,
And do not shrink from sorrow's keenest wind.

WORDSWORTH, Weak Is the Will of Man.

8 But Woman is rare beyond compare,
The poets tell us so;

How little they know of Woman
Who only women know!

CAROLYN WELLS, Woman.

VII—Woman: A Curse

9 The wicked woman, full of subtlety,
Worse than a fox in crafty hardihood.

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xvi, st. 13.

10 There is nothing in the world worse than a
woman

By nature shameless—save some other woman.

(Ἄλλ' οὐ γὰρ ἐστὶ τῶν ἀναισχύντων φύσει γυναῖκα οὐδὲν κάκιον εἰς ἅπαντα πλὴν ἂρ' εἰ γυναῖκες.)

ARISTOPHANES, Thesmophoriazusæ, l. 531.

A shameless woman is the worst of men.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 468.

11 Oh the gladness of her gladness when she's glad,

And the sadness of her sadness when she's sad,
But the gladness of her gladness,

And the sadness of her sadness

Are as nothing, Charles,

To the badness of her badness when she's bad.

J. M. BARRIE, Rosalind. (Half Hours, p. 132.)

Quoted.

Oh, the shrewdness of her shrewdness when she's shrewd,

And the rudeness of her rudeness when she's rude;

But the shrewdness of her shrewdness and the rudeness of her rudeness,

Are as nothing to her goodness when she's good.

1 Women are not a hobby—they're a calamity.
ALEXANDER BRAILOWSKY, Interview at Minneapolis, 1931.

2 From Adam's wife, that proved a curse,
Though God had made her for a blessing,
All women born are so perverse
No man need boast their love possessing.

ROBERT BRIDGES [DROCH], Triplet.

3 The world is full of women, and the women full of wile.

GELETT BURGESS, Willy and the Lady.

4 A woman (tho' the phrase may seem uncivil)
As able—and as cruel—as the Devil!

BURNS, Scots Prologue for Mrs. Sutherland, l. 27. Referring to Queen Elizabeth.

5 Pricking her fingers with those cursèd pins,
Which surely were invented for our sins,
Making a woman like a porcupine,
Not to be rashly touch'd.

EURIPIDES, Fragment.

9 Oh, woman, perfect woman! what distraction
Was meant to mankind when thou wast made a devil!

What an inviting hell invented.

JOHN FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act iii, sc. 1.

10 'Tis woman that seduces all mankind;
By her we first were taught the wheedling arts.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i, sc. 2.

Women's feet run still astray
If to ill they know the way.

WILLIAM HABBINGTON, Castara.

12 Mankind, from Adam, have been women's fools;

Women, from Eve, have been the devil's tools:

Heaven might have spar'd one torment when we fell;

Not left us women, or not threatened hell.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The She-Gallants.

Of all the plagues with which the world is curst,
Of every ill, a woman is the worst.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 460.

16 I met a lady in the meads,
Full beautiful—a faery's child;
Her hair was long, her foot was light,
And her eyes were wild. . . .

She took me to her elfin grot,
And there she wept, and sigh'd full sore,
And there I shut her wild, wild eyes
With kisses four. . . .

I saw pale kings, and princes too,
Pale warriors, death-pale were they all:
They cried—"La Belle Dame sans Merci
Hath thee in thrall!"

KEATS, La Belle Dame Sans Merci.

17 When the Himalayan peasant meets the he-

Because of their vices, women have ceased to deserve the privileges of their sex; they have put off their womanly nature and are therefore condemned to suffer the diseases of men.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 21.

There's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers; revenges, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,

Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be named, nay, that hell knows,

Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all;

ALPHONSE DAUDET, The Credo of Love.

A woman, no less than the populace, a grave judge or a chosen senate, will surrender, defeated, to eloquence. (Quam populus iudexque gravis lectusque senatus, Tam debit eloquio victa puella manus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 461.

Nor was it hard to move the lady's mind;
When fortune favours, still the fair are kind.

POPE, January and May, l. 303.

With the easy credulity of women. (Facili fæminarum credulitate.)

TACITUS, Annales. Bk. xiv, sec. 4.

What cannot a neat knave with a smooth tale
Make a woman believe?

JOHN WEBSTER, The Duchess of Malfi. Act i, sc. 2.

<sup>12</sup> A woman who is confuted is never convinced.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

Women have always some mental reservation. (Les femmes ont toujours quelque arrière-pensée.)

DESTOUCHES, Le Dissipateur. Act v, sc. 9.

<sup>13</sup> You are a woman, you must never speak what you think; your words must contradict your thoughts, but your actions may contradict your words.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 11.

She's all sail and no ballast. . . . A fine lady is angry without a cause, and pleased without reason.

FARQUHAR, Sir Harry Wildair. Act i, sc. 1.

She will play with reason and discourse,
And well she can persuade.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 190.

1
Glory and empire are to female blood
More tempting dangerous rivals than a god.

JOHN CROWNE, The Destruction of Jerusalem.
Pt. i, act iii, sc. 2.

2
What soft, cherubic creatures
These gentlewomen are!
One would as soon assault a plush
Or violate a star.

Such dainty convictions.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 130.

3
Women are not compris'd in our laws of friendship; they are feræ naturæ.

DRYDEN, The Mock Astrologer. Act iv. Feræ naturæ, the legal term for animals living in a wild state.

4
A woman's hopes are woven of sunbeams; a shadow annihilates them.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 1.

5
You will find many excuses, for you are a woman. (Πολλὰς ἂν εὔροις μηχανάς· γυνὴ γὰρ εἴ.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 85.

What could a woman's head contrive
Which it would not know how to excuse?
(Was hätt ein Weiberkopf erdacht, das er Nicht zu beschönen wüsste?)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Pt. iii.

Women are never without an excuse.
GEORGE PETTIE, Pallace, ii, 157. (1576)

6
'Tis woman's nature to bear her ills on lip and tongue with mournful pleasure.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 94.

Those women who grieve least make the most lamentation. (Jactantius mœrent, quæ minus dolent.)

TACITUS, Annales. Bk. ii, sec. 77.

But woman's grief is like a summer storm,
Short as it violent is.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Basil. Act v, sc. 3.

7
Pride is the life of a woman, and flattery is
our daily bread.

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iv, sc. 2.

What woman can resist the force of praise?
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 260.

What female heart can gold despise?
What cat's averse to fish?

THOMAS GRAY, On the Death of a Favourite Cat.

A woman's mind is affected by the meanest gifts.
(Parvis mobilis rebus animus muliebris.)

LIVY, Annales. Bk. vi, sec. 34.

Fond of dress and change and praise,

So mere a woman in her ways.

D. G. ROSSETTI, Jenny.

How easy is it for the proper-false
In women's waxen hearts to set their forms!
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 30.

8
With women one should never venture to joke. (Mit Frauen soll man sich nie unter-stehn zu scherzen.)

GOETHE, Faust. The advice of Mephistopheles.

9
Women forgive injuries, but never forget slights.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), *The Old
Judge*. Ch. 15.

10
No fault in woman to make show
Of largeness, when they're nothing so;
When true it is, the outside swells
With inward buckram, little else.

ROBERT HERRICK, No Fault in Women.

11
Nothing agreeth worse
Than a lady's heart and a beggar's purse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

12
A woman dares all things when she loves or hates. (Audax est ad omnia, quæ amat vel odit, femina.)

ST. JEROME, Epistles: Valerius to Rufinus.
Considered spurious.

When greater perils men environ,
Then women show a front of iron;
And, gentle in their manner, they
Do bold things in a quiet way.

THOMAS DUNN ENGLISH, Betty Zane.

When danger comes in an honorable way, a woman's heart grows chill with fear; but if she is doing a bold bad thing her courage never fails.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 94.

What wilt not woman, gentle woman, dare
When strong affection stirs her spirit up?

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Madoc. Pt. ii, canto 2, l. 125.

13
Women commonly eat more sparingly, and are less curious in their choice of meat; but if once you find a woman gluttonous, expect from her very little virtue.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. ii, p. 323.

14
She knifed me one night 'cause I wished she was white,

And I learned about women from 'er!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies.

15
There is a false modesty which is vanity;
a false glory which is levity; a false grandeur which is meanness; a false virtue which is hypocrisy; and a false wisdom which is prud-ery.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Femmes.

16
As soon as a woman begins to be ashamed of what she ought not, she will not be ashamed of what she should. (Næ simul pudere quod non oportet coeperit; quod oportet non pudebit.)

LIVY, Annals. Bk. xxxiv, sec. 4.

<sup>1</sup>
The life of woman is full of woe,
Toiling on and on and on,
With breaking heart, and tearful eyes,
And silent lips, and in the soul
The secret longings that arise,
Which this world never satisfies!
Some more, some less, but of the whole
Not one quite happy, no, not one!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.

<sup>2</sup>
All women are ambitious naturally.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad i, l. 428.

<sup>3</sup>
Feminine policy has a mysterious method;
it is better to leave it to them. (La police feminine a un train mysterieux; il faut le

And life made wretched out of human ken,
And miles of shopping women served by men.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Biography. St. 7.

<sup>5</sup>
However ugly she may be, every woman is pleased with her own looks. (Pessima sit, nulli non sua forma placet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 614.

Haughtiness is natural in the fair, and pride waits on beauty. (Fastus inest pulchris, sequiturque superbia formam.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 419.

As is the body, so is the soul of tender women frail. (Ut corpus, teneris ita mens infirma puellis.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xix, l. 7.

<sup>6</sup>
Regret is a woman's natural food—she thrives upon it.

A. W. PINERO, Sweet Lavender. Act iii.

<sup>7</sup>
Woman indeed was born of delay itself.
(Mulier profecto nata est ex ipsa mora.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1292. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

Women have many faults, but the worst of them all is that they are too pleased with themselves and take too little pains to please the men.
(Multa mulierum sunt vitia, sed hoc e multis maximumst, Quom sibi nimis placent minusque addunt operam, uti placeant viris.)

PLAUTUS, Panulus, l. 1203. (Act v, sc. 4.)

<sup>8</sup>
Nothing so true as what you once let fall,
"Most women have no characters at all,"
Matter too soft a lasting mark to bear,

And best distinguish'd by black, brown, or fair.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 1.

In men, we various ruling passions find;
In women two almost divide the kind;
Those only fix'd, they first or last obey,
The love of pleasure, and the love of sway.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 207.

Pleasures the sex, as children birds, pursue,
Still out of reach, yet never out of view.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 231.

Heav'n gave to woman the peculiar grace
To spin, to weep, and cully human race.

POPE, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 160.

Such, Polly, are your sex—part truth, part fiction;

Some thought, much whim, and all a contradiction.

RICHARD SAVAGE, To a Young Lady.

<sup>11</sup>
If ladies be but young and fair,
They have the gift to know it.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 37.

'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud; . . .

'Tis virtue that doth make them most admired; . . .

'Tis government that makes them seem divine.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 4, l. 128.

There was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 35.

Complacencies of the peignoir, and late
Coffee and oranges in a sunny chair.

WALLACE STEVENS, Sunday Morning.

<sup>12</sup>
A woman moved is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 142.

Why are our bodies soft and weak and smooth,
Unapt to toil and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions and our hearts
Should well agree with our external parts?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 165.

For women are as roses, whose fair flower
Being once display'd, doth fall that very hour.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4,
l. 39.

<sup>13</sup>
In the beginning, said a Persian poet—Allah took a rose, a lily, a dove, a serpent, a little honey, a Dead Sea apple, and a handful of clay. When he looked at the amalgam—it was a woman.

WILLIAM SHARP. (Portfolio, July, 1894, p. 6.)

1 No woman will deny herself the romantic luxury of self-sacrifice and forgiveness when they take the form of doing something agreeable.

BERNARD SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act iii.

2 For a woman glory can only be a splendid mourning for lost happiness. (La gloire ne saurait être pour une femme qu'un deuil éclatant du bonheur.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Pensées Détachées.

3 How foolish and miserably superstitious all we women are! (Ut stultæ et misere omnes sumus Religiosæ!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 649. (Act iv, sc. 1.)

4 I have to thank God I'm a woman,
For in these ordered days a woman only
Is free to be very hungry, very lonely.

ANNA WICKHAM, The Affinity.

Love and grief and motherhood,
Fame and mirth and scorn—
These are all shall befall

Any woman born.

MARGARET WIDDEMER, A Cyprian Woman.

I was, being human, born alone;
I am, being woman, hard beset;
I live by squeezing from a stone
The only nourishment I get.

10 I hate a learned woman. May there never be in my abode a woman knowing more than a woman ought to know. (Σοφὴν δὲ μισῶ. Μὴ γὰρ ἐν γ' ἐμοῖς δόμοις εἴη φρονοῦσα πλεῖον ἢ γυναῖκα χρῆ.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 640.

I hate a woman who is forever poring over the Grammar of Palæmon, who observes all the rules and laws of language, who quotes from ancient poets that I never heard of, and corrects her unlettered friends for slips of speech that no man need trouble about: let husbands at least be permitted to make slips in grammar!

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 451.

Men hate learned women.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 442.

'Tis pity learned virgins ever wed.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 22.

And wiser when she wishes.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Marian. St. 1.

15 A witty woman is a treasure; a witty beauty is a power.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.

I know a thing that 's most uncommon;
(Envy, be silent and attend!)

I know a reasonable woman,
Handsome and witty, yet a friend.
POPE, On a Certain Lady at Court.

Make the door upon a woman's wit, and it will out at the casement.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 162.

16 A learned woman is not of much account in the world. A clever woman rules as much of it as lies in her neighbourhood—that is to say, as much as she cares to rule.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 7.

17 I'd as lief your little head
Should be cumbered up with lead

As with learning, live or dead,
Or with brains.

RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, To Doris.

1 If a young lady has that discretion and modesty, without which all knowledge is little worth, she will never make an ostentatious parade of it, because she will rather be intent on acquiring more, than on displaying what she has.

HANNAH MORE, Thoughts on Conversation.

2 So I wonder a woman, the Mistress of Hearts, Should descend to aspire to be Master of Arts; A Ministering Angel in woman we see, And an angel need covet no other Degree.

CHARLES NEAVES, O Why Should a Woman Not Get a Degree?

3 Be to her virtues very kind;
Be to her faults a little blind;
Let all her ways be unconfin'd;
And clap your padlock—on her mind.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An English Padlock, l. 78.
(c. 1700) Quoted by Bickerstaffe, The Padlock. Act ii, sc. 3.

4 A blue-stocking is the scourge of her husband, children, friends, servants, and every one. (Une femme bel-esprit est le fléau de son mari, de ses enfants, de ses amis, de ses valets, de tout le monde.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. i, ch. 5.

Every blue-stocking will remain a spinster as long as there are sensible men on the earth. (Toute fille lettrée restera fille toute sa vie, quand il n'y aura que des hommes sensés sur la terre.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. i, ch. 5.

I always thought a tinge of blue Improved a charming woman's stocking.

R. M. MILNES, Four Lovers. Pt. ii.

5 She was a woman of no mean endowments: she could write verses, bandy jests, and use language which was modest, or tender, or wanton; in fine, she was possessed of a high degree of wit and charm.

9 If her breath were as terrible as her terminations, there were no living near her; she would infect to the north star.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 256.

For there be women, fair as she,
Whose verbs and nouns do more agree.

BRET HARTE, Mrs. Judge Jenkins.

10 Men call you fair, and you do credit it,
For that yourself ye daily such do see:
But the true fair, that is the gentle wit
And virtuous mind, is much more praised of me.

EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lxxix.

11 Enthusiasm about art is become a function of the average female being, which she performs with precision and a sort of haunting sprightliness.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque. Ch. 1.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 185.

For she was crammed with theories out of books.
TENNYSON, The Princess: Conclusion, l. 35.

13 In the East, women religiously conceal that they have faces; in the West, that they have legs. In both cases they make it evident that they have but little brains.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 31 Jan., 1852.

14 Very learned women are to be found, in the same manner as female warriors; but they are seldom or never inventors.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Women.

We issued gorged with knowledge, and I spoke: "Why, sirs, they do all this as well as we." "They hunt old trails," said Cyril, "very well; But when did woman ever yet invent?"

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 366.

15 There is nothing in the whole world so unbecoming to a woman as a nonconformist conscience.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii.

16 Ladies supreme among amusements reign;
By nature born to soothe, and entertain.
Their prudence in a share of folly lies:
Why will they be so weak, as to be wise?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vi, l. 190.

X—Woman: Her Power

17 Let men say whate'er they will
Woman, woman, rules them still.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Sultan. Act ii, sc. 1.

As Father Adam first was fool'd,
A case that's still too common,
Here lies a man a woman rul'd:

The Devil ruled the woman.

ROBERT BURNS, Epitaph on a Hen-Pecked Country Squire.

Disguise our bondage as we will,
'Tis woman, woman rules us still.

THOMAS MOORE, Sovereign Woman.

Beshrew my heart, but it is wond'rous strange;
Sure there is something more than witchcraft in them,

That masters ev'n the wisest of us all.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act iv, sc. 1.

Why, this it is, when men are ruled by women.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 62.

Women wear the breeches.

GOETHE, Iphigenia auf Tauris. Act i, sc. 2, l. 162.

God in his harmony has equal ends
For cedar that resists and reed that bends;
For good it is a woman sometimes rules.

VICTOR HUGO, Evradnus. Pt. v.

Nature has given women so much power that the law has very wisely given them little.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letters. Vol. i, p. 104.

For them the Ceylon diver held his breath,
And went all naked to the hungry shark;
For them his ears gush'd blood; for them in death,

The seal on the cold ice with piteous bark

Lay full of darts; for them alone did seethe
A thousand men in troubles wide and dark.

KEATS, Isabella. St. 15.

Never any good came out of female domination. God created Adam master and lord of living creatures, but Eve spoiled all.

<sup>6</sup> A woman's advice has little value, but he who won't take it is a fool.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

<sup>7</sup> Let no man value at a little price
A virtuous woman's counsel; her wing'd spirit
Is feather'd oftentimes with heavenly words.
CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> Woman been wise in short avysement.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 936.

<sup>9</sup> For women, with a mischief to their kind,
Pervert, with bad advice, our better mind.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 555.

A woman's counsel brought us first to woe,
And made her man his paradise forego,
Where at heart's ease he liv'd; and might have been
As free from sorrow as he was from sin.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 557.

<sup>10</sup> Take the first advice of a woman and not the second. (Primo dede mulieris consilio, secundo noli.)

GILBERTUS NOXERANUS. (GRYNÆUS, Adagia, p. 130.)

<sup>11</sup> Would men but follow what the sex advise,
All things would prosper, all the world grow wise.

POPE, January and May, l. 67.

<sup>12</sup> Women beat men in evil counsel. (Malo in consilio feminae vincunt viros.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 358.

<sup>13</sup> Woman's counsel is fatal counsel.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred, l. 375. (c. 1250)

Woman's counsel is full often fatal.

CHAUCER, Nonne Preestes Tale, l. 436.

Yet a woman's advice helps at the last.

UNKNOWN. (Towneley Plays. No. xiii, 342. 1388.)

XII—Woman: Her Falseness

<sup>14</sup> More false than fair.

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto vi, st. 14.

Unchaste and false as ever water went.

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso, xvi, 14. (Harington, tr.)

She was false as water.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 134. (1604)

As false as fair.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

As false as hell.

THOMAS D'URFEX, Virtuous Wife. Act iv, sc. 3. (1680)

As false as the devil.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 139. (1639)

<sup>15</sup> Woman's love is writ in water!

Woman's faith is traced on sand!

W. E. AYTOUN, Charles Edward at Versailles, l. 201.

This record will for ever stand,

"Woman, thy vows are traced in sand."

BYRON, To Woman, l. 21.

Woman's faith, and woman's trust—

Write the characters in dust.

SCOTT, The Betrothed. Ch. 20.

<sup>16</sup> But when I trust a wild fool, and a woman,
May I lend gratis, and build hospitals.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act iii.

Trust a woman?

I'll trust the devil first; for he dare be Better than 's word sometime.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act ii, sc. 1.

A woman's oaths are wafers, break with making.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>17</sup> Believe a woman or an epitaph,

Or any other thing that's false.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 78.

1 Women I know are dressed in rags,
Women I know in lace,
And one in a dusky robe of gold
With a hooded cloak of mace;
But every robe and every rag
Is a secret hiding place.

ESTHER LILIAN DUFF, Not Three—But One.

2 A woman-friend! He that believes that weakness

Steers in a stormy night without a compass.

JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act ii, sc. 1.

Who to a woman trusts his peace of mind,
Trusts a frail bark, with a tempestuous wind.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters.
Act ii, sc. 1.

Who trusts himself to women, or to waves,
Should never hazard what he fears to lose.

JOHN OLDMIXON, Governor of Cyprus.

3 Her promise of friendship for any avail
Is as sure to hold as an eel by the tail.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

He that hath a woman hath an eel by the tail.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Scornful Lady.
Act ii, sc. 1.

A woman and a wet eel both have slippery tails.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Arcadia. Act v, sc. 1.

4 As false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son;
Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

As false as Cressid.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 198.

5 Women have tongues of craft, and hearts of guile,
They will, they will not; fools that on them
trust;
For in their speech is death, hell in their
smile.

(Femmina è cosa garrula e fallace:
Vuole e disvuole, è folle uom chi sen fida,
Sì tra se volge.)

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. xix, st. 84.

6 Commit thy ship unto the wind,
But not to faith of womankind;
For there's more credit in a wave
Than any faith that women have.

UNKNOWN, Woman's Unfaith. (c. 1693)

7 False, but, however false, beloved still. (Perfida, sed, quamvis perfida, cara tamen.)

8 Thy favours are but like the wind,
That kisseth everything it meets.

SIR ROBERT AYTON, I Do Confess.

Thy favours are the silly wind,
That kisses ilka thing it meets.

BURNS, I Do Confess Thou Art Sae Fair. A paraphrase of Ayton.

9 She's as inconstant as the seas and winds,
Which ne'er are calm but to betray adventurers.

APHRA BEHN, The Forced Marriage. Act i, sc. 1.

10 Their tricks an' craft hae put me daft,
They've ta'en me in, and a' that;
But clear your decks, an' Here's the sex!

I like the jads for a' that.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars. Air vii.

An' fareweel, dear, deluding Woman,
The joy of joys!

BURNS, Epistle to James Smith. St. 14.

O thou delicious, damned, dear, destructive
woman!

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act iii, sc. 2.

11 The fault was Nature's fault, not thine,
Which made thee fickle as thou art.

BYRON, To a Youthful Friend, l. 15.

12 And every century
Spawn divers queens who die with Antony
But live a great while first with Julius.

JAMES BRANCH CABELL, Retractions.

13 Lo, which sleights and subtleties
In women been!

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale: Epilogue, l. 3.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 335.

14 Dust is lighter than a feather,
And the wind more light than either:
But a woman's fickle mind
More than feather, dust, or wind.
(Quid pluma levius?—Pulvis. Quid pulvere?
Ventus.

Quid vento? Mulier. Quid muliere? Nihil.)

WALTER DAVISON, Poetical Rhapsody. (1602)

Davison quotes the Latin as Incerti Auctoris.

What is lighter than the wind? a feather.

What is lighter than a feather? fire.

What lighter than fire? a woman.

What lighter than a woman? Nothing.

(Vente quid levius? fulgur. Quid fulgure? flamma.

Flamma quid? mulier. Quid mulier? nihil.)

UNKNOWN. (Harleian MS. Fo. 47, No. 3362.)

Pray, what is lighter than a feather?

Dust, my friend, in summer weather.
 What's lighter than the dust, I pray?
 The wind that blows them both away.
 What is lighter than the wind?
 The lightness of a woman's mind.
 And what is lighter than the last?
 Ah, now, my friend, you have me fast!

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries, 11 Aug., 1866.)

A woman often is but a feather in the wind.
 (Une femme souvent N'est qu'une plume au vent.)

VICTOR HUGO, Le Roi S'Amuse. Act iv, sc. 2. (1832)

Woman is as fickle as a feather in the wind.
 (La donna è mobile Qual piuma al vento.)

F. M. PIAVE. (VERDI, Rigoletto.) Piave wrote the libretto. (1851)

<sup>2</sup> He ploughs in sand, and sows against the wind,

That hopes for constant love of woman kind.
 THOMAS FULLER, Medicina Gymnastica. Vol. x, p. 7.

He ploughs the waves, and sows the sand,
 And seeks to gather the wind in a net,
 Whose hopes on the heart of a woman are set.
 (Ne l'onde solca, e ne l'arena semina,
 E'l vago vento spera in rete accogliere
 Chi sue speranze fonda in cor di femina.)

JACOPO SANNAZARO, Ecloga Octava.

He waters, plows, and soweth in the sand,
 And hopes the flick'ring wind with net to hold,
 Who hath his hopes laid upon woman's hand.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii.

<sup>3</sup> Whimsey, not reason, is the female guide.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The Vision, l. 81.

Women, giddy women!

In her the blemish of your sex you prove,
 There is no reason for your hate or love.

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act v, sc. 2.

<sup>4</sup> What is there in this vile earth that more commendeth a woman than constancy?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England.

<sup>5</sup> There is no accounting for the actions of a woman.

NAPOLEON I. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

<sup>6</sup> How many pictures of one-nymph we view,
 And how unlike each other, all how true!
 Arcadia's countess here, in ermined pride,
 Is there, Pastora by a fountain side:
 Here Fannia, leering on her own good man,

And there a naked Leda with a swan. . . .
 Whether the charmer sinner it, or saint it,
 If folly grow romantic, I must paint it.
 Come then, the colours and the ground prepare;

Dip in the rainbow, trick her off in air;
 Choose a firm cloud before it fall, and in it
 Catch, ere she change, the Cynthia of this minute.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 5.

Papilia, wedded to her am'rous spark,
 Sighs for the shades—"How charming is a park!"

A park is purchased; but the Fair he sees
 All bathed in tears—"Oh, odious, odious trees!"

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 37.

Ladies, like variegated tulips show;
 'Tis to their changes half their charms they owe;
 Fine by defect, and delicately weak,
 Their happy spots the nice admirer take.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 41.

She went from Op'ra, Park, Assembly, Play,
 To morning walks, and prayers three hours a
 day;

To part her time 'twixt reading and Bohea,
 To muse, and spill her solitary tea;
 Or o'er cold coffee trifle with the spoon,
 Count the slow clock, and dine exact at noon.

POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount on Leaving Town, l. 13.

To give the sex their due,
 They scarcely are to their own wishes true;
 They love, they hate, and yet they know not why;

"Constant in nothing but inconstancy."

POPE. Quoting Richard Barnfield. See under FORTUNE.

<sup>7</sup> No, no, I'll love no more; let him who can Fancy the maid who fancies every man;
 In some lone place I'll find a gloomy cave,
 There my own hands shall dig a spacious grave:

Then all unseen I'll lay me down and die
 Since woman's constancy is—all my eye.

WILLIAM BARNES RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

<sup>8</sup> The vows of women
 Of no more bondage be, to where they are made,
 Than they are to their virtues; which is nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 110.

They are not constant, but are changing still.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 30.

Hamlet: Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Ophelia: 'T is brief, my lord.

Hamlet: As woman's love.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 162.

<sup>9</sup> Constant you are; But yet a woman.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 111.

<sup>10</sup> Look to her, Moor; if thou hast eyes to see:

She has deceived her father, and may thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 293.

Framed to make women false.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 404.

<sup>1</sup> The fickleness of the woman I love is only equalled by the infernal constancy of the women who love me.

BERNARD SHAW, The Philanderer. Act ii.

<sup>2</sup> Yet do not my folly reprove;

She was fair—and my passion begun:

She smiled—and I could not but love;

She is faithless—and I am undone.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Pastoral Ballad. Pt. iv.

<sup>3</sup> I know the nature of women: they won't when you would; when you won't, they long for it all the more. (Novi ingenium mulierum: Nolunt ubi velis, ubi nolis cupiunt ultro.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 812. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

When I say that I know women, I mean I know that I don't know them. Every single woman I ever knew is a puzzle to me, as, I have no doubt, she is to herself.

THACKERAY, Mr. Brown's Letters.

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 569.

My lord, you know what Virgil sings—

Woman is various and most mutable.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 77.

<sup>5</sup> Shall I, wasting in despair,
Die because a woman's fair?
Or make pale my cheeks with care
'Cause another's rosy are?

Be she fairer than the day,
Or the flow'ry meads in May,
If she think not well of me,
What care I how fair she be?

GEORGE WITHER, The Lover's Resolution.

Be she meeker, kinder, than

Turtle-dove or pelican,

If she be not so to me,

What care I how kind she be?

GEORGE WITHER, The Lover's Resolution.

If she undervalue me,

What care I how fair she be?

SIR WALTER RALEIGH [?], His Further Resolution.

<sup>6</sup> O faithless world, and thy most faithless part,
A woman's heart!

The true shop of variety, where sits

Nothing but fits

And fevers of desire, and pangs of love,

Which toys remove.

SIR HENRY WOTTON, The World.

<sup>7</sup> Why should I sing of woman
And the softness of night,

When the dawn is loud with battle

And the day's teeth bite,

And there's a sword to lay my hand to
And a man's fight?

W. H. WRIGHT, Song Against Women.

I fear no power a woman wields

While I can have the woods and fields.

ERNEST MCGAFFEY, Song.

<sup>8</sup> Woman's love is but a blast,
And turneth like the wind.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, The Careful Lover Complaineth.

XIV—Woman: Her Tongue

<sup>9</sup> As men

Do walk a mile, women should talk an hour,
After supper: 'tis their exercise.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Philaster. Act ii, sc. 4.

The pleasure of talking is the inextinguishable passion of a woman, coeval with the act of breathing.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 7.

<sup>10</sup> I have but one simile, and that's a blunder,
For wordless woman, which is silent thunder.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 57.

<sup>11</sup> I am a woman, needs must I speak.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 1061.

Do you not know I am a woman? when I think,
I must speak.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 263.

<sup>12</sup> Let your women keep silence in the churches.
New Testament: I Corinthians, xiv, 34.

<sup>13</sup> The sweetest noise on earth, a woman's tongue;

A string which hath no discord.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Rafaele and Fornarina. Sc. 2.

<sup>14</sup> The old proverb, Many women, many words.
THOMAS DELONEY, Thomas of Reading. Ch. 12. (c. 1600)

Geese with geese and women with women.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1645.

<sup>15</sup> Thus through a woman was the secret
known;

Tell us, and in effect you tell the town.

DRYDEN, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 201.

A free-tongued woman,
And very excellent at telling secrets.

MIDDLETON AND MASSINGER, The Old Law. Act iv, sc. 2.

How hard it is for women to keep counsel!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 9.

<sup>16</sup> Half the sorrows of women would be averted if they could repress the speech they know to be useless—nay, the speech they have resolved not to utter.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 2.

1 I am very fond of the company of ladies. I like their beauty, I like their delicacy, I like their vivacity, and I like their silence.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (SEWARD, Johnsoniana, 617.)

Silence in woman is like speech in man, Deny 't who can.

BEN JONSON, Epicæne. Act ii, sc. 2.

2 Such a clatter of words pours from her tongue that you would think all the pots and bells were being clashed together. (Verborum tanta cadit vis, Tot pariter pelves ac tintinabula dicas Pulsari.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 440.

I know that we women are all justly accounted chatterboxes; and then there is that old proverb, "Never now, nor in any age, such a wonder as a dumb woman." (Nam multum loquaces merito omnes habemur, Nec mutam profecto repertam ullum esse Aut hodie dicunt mulierem aut ullo in sæclo.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 124. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

3 High flights she had, and wit at will; And so her tongue lay seldom still: For in all visits who but she To argue, or to repartee?

MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel, l. 5.

4 It is better to dwell in a corner of the house-top than with a brawling woman in a wide house.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 9.

5 One tongue is enough for a woman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 59. This proverb is sometimes ascribed to John Milton, because he used it when asked if he intended to teach his daughters Greek and Latin.

You wished me to a wife, fair, rich and young, That had the Latin, French and Spanish tongue. I thank't, and told you I desir'd none such, And said, One language may be tongue too much.

Then love I not the learned? yes, as my life; A learned mistress, not a learned wife.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Of Women Learned in the Tongues. (Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 261.)

6 And the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for 't.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 338.

Think you a little din can daunt mine ears? Have I not in my time heard lions roar? Have I not heard the sea puff'd up with winds Rage like an angry boar chafed with sweat? Have I not heard great ordnance in the field, And heaven's artillery thunder in the skies? Have I not in a pitched battle heard Loud 'larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets' clang?

And do you tell me of a woman's tongue, That gives not half so great a blow to hear As will a chestnut in a farmer's fire?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 200.

I will board her, though she chide as loud As thunder when the clouds in autumn crack.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 95.

Say that she rail; why then I'll tell her plain She sings as sweetly as a nightingale: Say that she frown; I'll say she looks as clear As morning roses newly wash'd with dew: Say she be mute and will not speak a word; Then I'll commend her volubility, And say she uttereth piercing eloquence.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 171.

7 To be slow in words is a woman's only virtue.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 338.

8 Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet

Could rule them both without ten women's wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1007.

9 Silence gives grace to woman. (Γυναιξὶ κόσμον ἢ σιγὴ φέρεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 293.

A silent woman is always better than a talkative one. (Tacitast melior mulier semper quam loquens.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1114. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

Silence is the best ornament of a woman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 24.

10 Yet will the woman have the last word.

UNKNOWN, School House of Women, l. 76. (1542)

Whilst women strive for the last word.

FULLER, Church History of Britain, ix, 3.

XV—Woman: Her Untruthfulness

11 Now what I love in women is, they won't Or can't do otherwise than lie, but do it So well, the very truth seems falsehood to it.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 36.

12 For half so boldly can there no man Swear and lyen as a woman can.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 227.

For never was it given to mortal man To lie so boldly as we women can.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 62.

13 Deceit, weeping, spinning, God hath give To women kindly, while they may live.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 401. A rendering of a medieval proverb: "Fallere, flere, nere, Dedit deus in muliere."

1 Hang art, madam! and trust to nature for dissembling.

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act iii, sc. 1.

2 Women never confess; even when they seemingly resign themselves to such a course, they are never sincere. . . . A woman scoffs at evidence. Show her the sun, tell her it is daylight, at once she will close her eyes and say to you, "No, it is night."

ÉMILE GABORIAU, Monsieur Lecoq. Ch. 10.

When a woman writes her confession she is never further from the truth.

JAMES HUNEKER, Pathos of Distance, p. 58.

3 O woman! thou wert fashioned to beguile: So have all sages said, all poets sung.

JEAN INGELow, The Four Bridges. St. 68.

4 There's no effrontery like that of a woman caught in the act; her very guilt inspires her with wrath and insolence. (Nihil est audacius illis Deprensus: iram atque animos a crimine sumunt.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 284.

5 Talk to me tenderly, tell me lies; I am a woman and time flies.

VIVIAN YEISER LARAMORE, Talk to Me Tenderly.

6 Women were liars since the world began.

MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street.

7 I open an old book, and there I find, That "Women still may love whom they deceive."

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 14.

O woman, born first to believe us;

Yea, also born first to forget;

Born first to betray and deceive us,

Yet first to repent and regret!

JOAQUIN MILLER, Charity. St. 11.

Wisest men

Have err'd, and by bad women been deceiv'd; And shall again, pretend they ne'er so wise.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 210.

8 There are three things that are not to be credited, a woman when she weeps, a merchant when he swears, nor a drunkard when he prays.

BARNABE RICH, My Lady's Looking Glass, 34. (1616)

9 A very honest woman, but something given to lie.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 2, l. 252.

XVI—Woman: Her Virtue

But Too Well

10 Nothing is so delicate as the reputation of a woman; it is at once the most beautiful and most brittle of all human things.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Letter 39.

11 Cease, ye prudes, your envious railing!

Lovely Burns has charms: confess!

True it is she had ae failing:

Had ae woman ever less?

ROBERT BURNS, Under the Portrait of Miss Burns.

She had all the virtues but one.

12 The woman who is resolved to be respected can make herself so even amidst an army of soldiers. (La muger que se determina á ser honrada entre un ejército de soldados lo puede ser.)

CERVANTES, La Gitanilla.

13 A man with a bad heart has been sometimes saved by a strong head; but a corrupt woman is lost forever.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk.

14 Still for all slips of hers
One of Eve's family.

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

All that remains of her

Now is pure womanly.

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

15 The trav'ler, if he chance to stray,
May turn uncensured to his way;
Polluted streams again are pure,
And deepest wounds admit a cure;
But woman no redemption knows;
The wounds of honour never close.

EDWARD MOORE, Fables. No. 15.

16 By no art can chastity, once injured, be made whole. (Nulla reparabilis arte Læsa pudicitia est.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. v, l. 103.

When lovely woman stoops to folly,
And finds too late that men betray,
What charm can soothe her melancholy?
What art can wash her guilt away?

The only art her guilt to cover,
To hide her shame from every eye,
To give repentance to her lover,
And wring his bosom, is—to die.
GOLDSMITH, Song. (Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 24.)

And one false step entirely damns her fame.
In vain with tears the loss she may deplore,
In vain look back on what she was before;
She sets like stars that fall, to rise no more.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act i.

But the sin forgiven by Christ in heaven
By man is curst alway!

N. P. WILLIS, Unseen Spirits.

17 She made it plain that human passion

Was order'd by predestination;
That if weak women went astray,
Their stars were more in fault than they.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel, l. 9.

1 As a jewel of gold in a swine's snout, so is a fair woman which is without discretion.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 22.

2 Women are not
In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure
The ne'er touch'd vestal.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 12, l. 29.

Though flattery fail,
Presents with female virtue must prevail.
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 279.

3 Frailty, thy name is woman!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 146.

4 O, she is fallen
Into a sea of ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 141.

Death is the fairest cover for her shame.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 117.

5 "Yes," I answered you last night;
"No," this morning, sir, I say:
Colours seen by candle-light
Will not look the same by day.
E. B. BROWNING, The Lady's "Yes."

And her yes, once said to you,
SHALL be Yes for evermore.
E. B. BROWNING, The Lady's Yes.

6 A little while she strove, and much repented,
And whispering "I will ne'er consent"— consented.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 117.

But yet she listen'd—'tis enough,
Who listens once will listen twice;
Her heart, be sure, is not of ice,
And one refusal no rebuff.
BYRON, Mazeppa, l. 278.

7 Between a woman's Yes and No
There is not room for a pin to go.
(Entre el Si y el No de la mujer,
No me atrevera yo á poner una punta de al-filer.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote.

8 Take not the first refusal ill:
Tho' now she won't, anon she will.
THOMAS D'URFEY, A Song Set by Mr. Beren-clow.

Never take No for an answer.

J. F. MITCHELL. Title and refrain of a popular song. (1886)

9 The swain did woo; but she was nice;
Following fashion, nay'd him twice.
ROBERT GREENE, The Shepherd's Ode.

10 Maids' nays are nothing, they are shy,
But to desire what they deny.
ROBERT HERRICK, Maid's Nays Are Nothing.
The lass saith no, and would full fain:
And this is Love, as I hear saine.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, What Is Love?
Maids, in modesty, say "No" to that
Which they would have the profferer construe
"Ay."
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 2, l. 55.

11 To say why gals acts so or so,
Or don't, 'ould be persumin';
Mebby to mean yes an' say no
Comes nateral to women.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

12 Woman's behaviour is a surer bar
Than is their No! That fairly doth deny Without denying. Thereby kept they are Safe even from hope. In part to blame is she
Which hath without consent been only tried.
He comes too near that comes to be denied.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Wife. St. 36.

While vain coquets affect to be pursued,
And think they're virtuous if not grossly lewd,
Let this great maxim be my virtue's guide:
In part she is to blame that has been try'd—
He comes too near, that comes to be deny'd.
LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, The Lady's Resolve.

13 Make denials Increase your services.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 53.

14 Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?
SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 339.
Take no repulse, whatever she doth say;
For, "get you gone," she doth not mean, "away."
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 100.

15 Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and take it.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 51.

16 No is no negative in a woman's mouth.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iii.
I have not skill
From such a sharp and waspish word as "No"
To pluck the sting.
HENRY TAYLOR, Philip Van Artevelde. Act i,
sc. 2.

18 When Venus said "Spell no for me,"

"N-O," Dan Cupid wrote with glee,
And smiled at his success:
"Ah, child," said Venus, laughing low,
"We women do not spell it so,
We spell it Y-E-S."
CAROLYN WELLS, The Spelling Lesson.

XVIII—Woman: A Woman's Reason

1 It is a woman's reason to say I will do such a thing because I will.

JEREMIAH BURROUGHS, On Hosea. Vol. iv. (1652)

A woman's reason—because it is so.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act iv, sc. 3.

Women's reasons; they would not because they would not.

JOHN LYLY, Love's Metamorphosis, iv, 1.

Besides, I have a woman's reason, I will not dance, because I will not dance.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt, Master-Constable. Act i, sc. 1.

2

Shall I lose

The privilege of my sex, which is my will,
To yield a reason like a man?

MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act i, sc. 1.

3

Woman's reason is in the milk of her breasts.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 43.

4

If a man should importune me to give a reason why I loved him, I find it could no otherwise be expressed than by making answer, Because it was he; because it was I.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 27.

5

He may go forward like a stoic Roman
Where pangs and terrors in his pathway lie—
Or, seizing the swift logic of a woman,
Curse God and die.

E. A. ROBINSON, The Man Against the Sky.

He owns her logic of the heart,
And reason of unreason.

WHITTIER, Among the Hills.

6

I have no other but a woman's reason:

I think him so, because I think him so.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 2, l. 23.

7

You sometimes have to answer a woman according to her womanishness, just as you have to answer a fool according to his folly.

BERNARD SHAW, An Unsocial Socialist. Ch. 18.

XIX—Woman: A Woman's Vengeance

8

The fool that willingly provokes a woman
Has made himself another evil angel,
And a new hell, to which all other torments
Are but mere pastime.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Cupid's Revenge. Act iii.

9

Women do most delight in revenge.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 12.

Sweet is revenge—especially to women.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 124.

And their revenge is as the tiger's spring,
Deadly, and quick, and crushing.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 199.

No vengeance like a woman's.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters. Act v, sc. 2.

Not ev'n the soldier's fury, rais'd in war,
The rage of tyrants, when defiance stings 'em!
The pride of priests, so bloody when in power!
Are half so dreadful as a woman's vengeance.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Sir Thomas Overbury.

10

I've seen your stormy seas and stormy women,

And pity lovers rather more than seamen.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 53.

And her brow clear'd, but not her troubled eye;
The wind was down, but still the sea ran high.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 110.

And femininely meaneth furiously,
Because all passions in excess are female.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act iii, sc. 1.

11

We shall find no fiend in hell can match the fury of a disappointed woman,—scorned, slighted, dismissed without a parting pang.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love's Last Shift. Act iv, sc. 1.

Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turn'd,
Nor hell a fury like a woman scorn'd.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act iii, sc. 8. Last line.

Is any Panther's, Lioness's rage
So furious, any Torrent's fall so swift
As a wrong'd woman's hate?

NATHANIEL LEE, Alexander the Great. Act i, sc. 1.

A slighted woman knows no bounds.

VANBRUGH, The Mistake. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 1.

Oh, woman wronged can cherish hate
More deep and dark than manhood may!

WHITTIER, Mogg Megone. Pt. i, st. 21.

12

To work a fell revenge a man's a fool,
If not instructed in a woman's school.

JOHN FLETCHER, Spanish Curate. Act v, sc. 1.

13

Revenge, we find,
Ever the pleasure of a petty mind,
And hence so dear to poor weak womankind.
(Quippe minuti

Semper et infirmi est animi exiguique voluptas

Ultio. Continuo sic collige, quod vindicta Nemo magis gaudet quam femina.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 189.

Then, my boy, beware of Daphne. Learn a lesson from the rat:

What is cunning in the kitten may be cruel in the cat.

R. U. JOHNSON, Daphne.

1 Offend her, and she knows not to forgive;
Oblige her, and she'll hate you while you live:
But die, and she'll adore you—then the bust
And temple rise—then fall again to dust.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 137.

2 I am a woman! nay, a woman wrong'd!
And when our sex from injuries take fire,
Our softness turns to fury—and our thoughts
Breathe vengeance and destruction.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Sir Thomas Overbury.

3 What an enraged woman can accomplish!
(Quid femina possit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 6.

4 Prince, a precept I'd leave for you,
Coined in Eden, existing yet:
Skirt the parlor, and shun the zoo—
Women and elephants never forget.

DOROTHY PARKER, Ballade of Unfortunate Mammals.

XX—Woman: A Woman's Will

5 He is a fool who thinks by force or skill
To turn the current of a woman's will.

CALDERON, Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3, l. 483. (Samuel Tuke, tr.)

Where is the man who has the power and skill
To stem the torrent of a woman's will?
For if she will, she will, you may depend on't;
And if she won't, she won't; so there's an end on't.

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on pillar, Dane John Field, Canterbury, Eng. (London Examiner, 31 May, 1829.)

6 She is one of them to whom God bade who;
She will all have, and will right nought forego.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

7 First, then, a woman will, or won't,—depend on't;
If she will do't, she will; and there's an end on't.

But, if she won't, since safe and sound your trust is,
Fear is affront: and jealousy injustice.

AARON HILL, Zara: Epilogue.

8 Man has his will—but woman has her way!
O. W. HOLMES, Prologue. (Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 2.)

9 Women because they cannot have their wills when they die, they will have their wills while they live.

JOHN MANNINGHAM, Diary, p. 92. (1602)

Men, dying, make their wills, but wives

Escape a task so sad;
Why should they make what all their lives
The gentle dames have had?
J. G. SAXE, Woman's Will.

10

Thus it shall befall

Him, who to worth in women overtrusting,
Lets her will rule; restraint she will not brook;

And left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
She first his weak indulgence will accuse.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1182.

11

What I will, I will, and there an end.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 3, l. 65.

12

Many men have many minds,
But women have but two,
Everything would they have,
And nothing would they do.

UNKNOWN, Women's Minds. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iii, vol. 8, p. 494.)

XXI—Woman and the Home

13

The works of women are symbolical.

We sew, sew, prick our fingers, dull our sight,
Producing what? A pair of slippers, sir,
To put on when you're weary.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 466.

Dusting, darning, drudging, nothing is great or small,
Nothing is mean or irksome, love will hallow it all.

WALTER CHALMERS SMITH, Hilda Among the Broken Gods. Bk. ii.

14

She was so diligent, with-outen sloth,
To serve and pleasen everich in that place,
That all her loved that looked upon her face.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 432.

Her natural turn is grave and domestic; and she seems to have been raised by her aunts à la grace, instead of being raised in a hot bed, as most young ladies are of late.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Sept., 1757.

In her very style of looking
There was cognisance of cooking!
From her very dress were peeping
Indications of housekeeping!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, White Rose and Red.

15

Her best and safest club is the home. . . .
Sensible and responsible women do not want to vote. The relative positions to be assumed by man and woman in the working out of our civilization were assigned long ago by a higher intelligence than ours.

GROVER CLEVELAND. (Ladies' Home Journal, April and October, 1905.)

When housewives all the house forsake,
And leave good men to brew and bake,
Withouten guile, then be it said,

That house doth stand upon its head.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 3. Quoted as by "Messahalah the Arabian."

1 A woman should be good for everything at home, but abroad good for nothing.

EURIPIDES, Meleager. Frag. 525.

The woman and the hen by gadding about soon got lost.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 49.

The house goes mad when women gad.

SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 4.

2 A dishonest woman cannot be kept in, and an honest one will not out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 76.

She will stay at home, perhaps, if her leg be broke.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 79.

A woman is to be from her house three times: When she is christened, married, and buried.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 480.

3 A wife, domestic, good, and pure, Like snail, should keep within her door; But not, like snail, with silver track, Place all her wealth upon her back.

W. W. HOW, Good Wives.

Apples us'd to paint a good housewife upon a snail, which intimated that she would be as slow from gadding abroad, and when she went she should carry her house upon her back; that is, she should make all sure at home.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 58. (1660)

Phidias made the statue of Venus at Elis with one foot upon the shell of a tortoise, to signify two great duties of a virtuous woman, which are to keep home and be silent.

W. DE BRITAIN, Human Prudence, p. 134.

All virtuous women, like tortoises, carry their house on their heads, and their chapel in their heart, and their danger in their eye, and their souls in their hands, and God in all their actions.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Life of Christ. Pt. i, bk. ii, ch. 4.

4 The foot on the cradle, the hand on the distaff, a sign of a good housewife.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 2. (1659)

5 A hearth is no hearth unless a woman sit by it.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Field-Play. See also under HOME.

6 A woman, the more curious she is about her face, is commonly the more careless about her house.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Munda et Sordida.

Ladies grow handsome by looking at themselves in the glass.

HAZLITT, The Plain Speaker. Vol. ii, p. 52.

7 You married that thin-flanked woman, as white and as stale as a bone,

An' she gave you your social nonsense; but where's that kid o' your own?

I've seen your carriages blocking the half o' the Cromwell Road,

But never the doctor's brougham to help the missus unload.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The "Mary Gloster."

8 Seek to be good, but aim not to be great; A woman's noblest station is retreat.

GEORGE LYTTLETON, Advice to a Lady.

Be plain in dress, and sober in your diet;

In short, my deary, kiss me! and be quiet.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, In Summary of Lord Lyttleton's "Advice to a Lady."

9 To give Society its highest taste; Well-ordered home man's best delight to make;

And, by submissive wisdom, modest skill, With every gentle, care-eluding art,

To raise the virtues, animate the bliss, . . .

And sweeten all the toils of human life:

This be the female dignity and praise!

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 602.

10 But give me the fair one, in country or city, Whose home and its duties are dear to her heart.

SAMUEL WOODWORTH, The Needle.

XXII—Woman and Woman

11 Gayer insects fluttering by Ne'er droop the wing o'er those that die,

And lovelier things have mercy shown

To every failing but their own,

And every woe a tear can claim,

Except an erring sister's shame.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 416.

12 A woman should always stand by a woman.

(Γυναῖκα γὰρ δὴ συμπονεῖν γυναῖκι χρῆ.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 329.

Woman is woman's natural ally.

EURIPIDES, Alope. Frag. 109.

13 To cheat a man is nothing; but the woman must have fine parts, indeed, who cheats a woman.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 1.

14 It's a very venerable and useful superstition that one woman is perfectly safe if another woman is pretending to look after her.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES, The Triumph of the Philistines. Act. i.

15 One woman reads another's character Without the tedious trouble of deciphering.

BEN JONSON, New Inn. Act iv, sc. 4.

16 No friendship is so cordial or so delicious as that of girl for girl; no hatred so intense and immovable as that of woman for woman.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Epicurus, Leontion and Ternissa.

<sup>1</sup> Two women placed together makes cold weather.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 22.

<sup>2</sup> The woman is so hard Upon the woman.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 205.

<sup>3</sup> Two women in one house,
Two cats and one mouse,
Two dogs and one bone,
May never accord in one.

UNKNOWN, Woman and Woman. (Reliq. Antiquæ, i, 233.)

XXIII—Woman: Find the Woman

ALEXANDRE DUMAS, PÈRE, Les Mohicans de Paris. Bk. iii, ch. 10. Used several times in the novel, and in Act iii, sc. 7 of the play. Attributed to Joseph Fouché, Minister of Police under Napoleon. Sometimes the expression takes the form, "Où est la femme?" (in German, "Wo ist sie?" or "Wie heisst sie?"): "Where is the woman?"

"Look for the woman"—it was Solomon who first said it.

ÉMILE GABORIAU, Other People's Money. Ch. 29.

<sup>5</sup> Tell me the cause: I know there is a woman in't.

JOHN FLETCHER, Humorous Lieutenant. Act iv, sc. 2.

They talk about a woman's sphere,
As though it had a limit.

There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given. . . .
Without a woman in it.

KATE FIELD, Woman's Spirit.

<sup>6</sup> And when a lady's in the case,
You know all other things give place.

JOHN GAY, The Hare and Many Friends.

In all the woes that curse our race
There is a lady in the case.

W. S. GILBERT, Fallen Fairies.

A woman doth the mischief brew
In nineteen cases out of twenty.

W. S. GILBERT, Fallen Fairies.

<sup>7</sup> There never was a case in which the quarrel was not started by a woman. (Nulla ferre causa est in qua non femina litem Moverit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 242.

You forget there is a woman in this case. That is so all the world over.

GEORGE EBERS, Uarda. Bk. ii, ch. 14.

<sup>3</sup> Such a plot must have a woman in it.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison. Vol. i, letter 24.

<sup>9</sup> There is not a war in the world, no, nor an injustice, but you women are answerable for it; not in that you have provoked, but in that you have not hindered.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Of Queens' Gardens.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 364.

<sup>11</sup> There is no mischief, but a woman is at one end of it.

UNKNOWN, Wit Restor'd, 150. (1658)

There is no mischief done but a woman is one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

XXIV—Woman and Love

See also Love in Man and Woman

<sup>12</sup> Women wish to be loved without a why or a wherefore; not because they are pretty, or good, or well-bred, or graceful, or intelligent, but because they are themselves.

AMIEL, Journal, 17 March, 1868.

<sup>13</sup> A woman can be anything that the man who loves her would have her be.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 31.

As a man thinketh, so is she.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

A woman, like the Koh-i-noor,
Mounts to the price that's put on her.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House: The Koh-i-noor.

A woman who is loved always has success.

VICKI BAUM, Grand Hotel, p. 132.

<sup>14</sup> If I ever really love it will be like Mary Queen of Scots, who said of her Bothwell that she could follow him round the world in her nighty.

J. M. BARRIE, What Every Woman Knows. Act ii.

THROUGH THICK AND THIN, see under PROVERBS.

<sup>15</sup> A compliment for a woman in love is like a sudden warmth falling around her—it is intoxication—it is like strong wine, one grows drunk with it.

HENRY BERNSTEIN, The Thief. Act ii.

A woman . . . always feels herself complimented by love, though it may be from a man incapable of winning her heart, or perhaps even her esteem.

ABEL STEVENS, Life of Madame de Staël. Ch. 3.

The heart of woman tastes no truer joy,
Is never flatter'd with such dear enchantment—
'Tis more than selfish vanity—as when
She hears the praises of the man she loves.

JAMES THOMSON, Tancred and Sigismunda. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>16</sup> For women (I am a woman now like you)

There is no good of life but love.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

1 All women love great men
If young or old; it is in all the tales.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

Such great achievements cannot fail
To cast salt on a woman's tail.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 277.

I love you for the sake of what you are,
And not of what you do.

JEAN INGELOW, Honours. Pt. i, st. 43.

Intellect may subdue women—make slaves of them; and they worship beauty perhaps as much as you do. But they only love forever and are mated when they meet a noble nature.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Richard Feverel. Ch. 13.

It is always interesting, in the case of a great man, to know how he affected the women of his acquaintance.

JOHN MORLEY, Burke, p. 116.

Mrs. Allonby: We women adore failures. They lean on us.

Lord Illingworth: You worship successes. You cling to them.

Mrs. Allonby: We are the laurels to hide their baldness.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act i.

2 And all because a lady fell in love.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 51.

So loving and so lovely.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 193.

If women could be fair and yet not fond.

EDWARD DE VERE, Woman's Changeableness.

3 Why did she love him? Curious fool!—be still—

Is human love the growth of human will?

BYRON, Lara. Canto ii, st. 22.

4 There are women whose talent it is to serve.
And some are great lovers.

JOHN DRINKWATER, Mary Stuart.

5 The hearts of women sicken for love more than do the hearts of men, but honor curbs desire.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 220.

Every woman loves more than a man loves, but out of shame she hides the sting of love, although she be mad for it. (Πᾶσα γυνή φιλέει πλέον ἀνέρος· αἰδομένη δὲ κεύθει κέντρον ἔρωτος, ἐρωμανέουσα καὶ αὐτή.)

NONNUS, Dionysius, xlii, 209. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 120.)

6 How a little love and conversation improve a woman!

FARQUHAR, The Beaux' Stratagem. Act iv, sc. 2.

7 A curse attends that woman's love
Who always would be pleasing.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

8 "I love you" is all the secret that many, nay, most women have to tell. When that is said, they are like China-crackers on the morning of the fifth of July.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 8.

9 And beaux were turn'd to flambeaux where she came.

THOMAS HOOD, Bianca's Dream, l. 12.

10 How could I tell I should love thee to-day
Whom that day I held not dear?

How could I know I should love thee away
When I did not love thee anear?

JEAN INGELOW, Supper at the Mill.

11 Never will you find a woman who spares the man who loves her; for though she be herself aflame, she delights to torment him.
(Nullum invenies quæ parcat amanti; Ardeat ipsa licet, tormentis gaudet amantis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 208.

Nowhere in stone, paint, or poem is a lady in my line portrayed as using a lover well. (Nam neque fictum usquamst neque pictum necque scriptum in poematis Ubi lena bene agat cum quiquam amante.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 174. (Act i, sc. 3.)

The woman that spares her lover spares herself too little. (Quæ amanti parcat, eadem sibi parcat parum.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 177. (Act i, sc. 3.)

Womankind more joy discovers

Making fools, than keeping lovers.

JOHN WILMOT, A Dialogue, l. 71.

12 Men love us, or they need our love.

JOHN KEBLE, *The Christian Year: 7th Sunday
after Trinity*.

13 One can find women who have never had one love affair, but it is rare indeed to find any who have had only one. (On peut trouver des femmes qui n'ont jamais eu de galanterie, mais il est rare d'en trouver qui n'en aient jamais eu qu'une.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 73.

Women in love pardon great indiscretions more easily than little infidelities. (Les femmes qui aiment pardonnent plus aisément les grandes indiscretions que les petites infidélités.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 429.

A lover without indiscretion is no lover at all.

THOMAS HARDY, Hand of Ethelberta. Ch. 20.

14 How unhappy the woman who is in love and virtuous at the same time! (Qu'une femme est à plaindre, quand elle a tout ensemble de l'amour et de la vertu!)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No.
548,

1 It is better to poison her with the sweet bait of love.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

Steal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet: Act ii, Prologue, l. 8.

2 Women hate revolutions and revolutionists. They like men who are docile, and well-regarded at the bank, and never late at meals.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iv, p. 252.

3 The great ambition of women, believe me, is to inspire love. (La grande ambition des femmes est, croyez-moi, d'inspirer de l'amour.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Sicilien. Sc. 6, l. 39.

4 All women can be caught; spread but your nets and you will catch them. (Cunctas Posse capi; capies, tu modo tende plagas.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 269.

Every woman thinks herself lovable. (Sibi quæque videtur amanda.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 613.

5 Whether they give or refuse, it delights women to have been asked. (Quæ dant, quæque negant, gaudent tamen esse rogatæ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 345.

Women often wish to give unwillingly what they really like to give. (Quod juvat, invitæ sæpe dedisse volunt.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 674.

6 'Tis never for their wisdom that one loves the wisest; or for their wit that one loves the wittiest; 'tis for benevolence and virtue and honest fondness one loves people; the other qualities make one proud of loving them, too.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI, Letter to Fanny Burney, 1781.

7 Oh! say not Woman's love is bought
With vain and empty treasure!

Oh! say not Woman's heart is caught
By ev'ry idle pleasure!

When first her gentle bosom knows
Love's flame, it wanders never,
Deep in her heart the passion glows;
She loves, and loves for ever!

ISAAC POCOCK, Song. From a musical entertainment, The Heir of Vironi, produced at Covent Garden, London, 27 Feb., 1817. Often wrongly ascribed to Thomas Love Peacock.

8 There swims no goose so grey, but soon or late

She finds some honest gander for her mate.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 98.

This I set down as a positive truth. A woman with fair opportunities and without a positive hump, may marry whom she likes.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 4.

Any woman will love any man that bothers her enough.

HENRY WALLACE PHILLIPS, Mr. Scroggs.

9 How quaint an appetite in woman reigns!
Free gifts we scorn, and love what costs us pains.

Let men avoid us, and on them we leap;
A glutted market makes provision cheap.

POPE, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 259.

No woman ever hates a man for being in love with her, but many a woman hates a man for being a friend to her.

POPE, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

10 She should be humble, who would please;
And she must suffer, who can love.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Chloe Jealous. St. 5.

11 Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 97.

12 Every woman who hasn't any money is a matrimonial adventurer.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii.

Vitality in a woman is a blind fury of creation.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

13 They say there are sixty-seven different ways in which a woman can like a man.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Walls of Jericho. Act i.

14 Shepherd, be advised by me,
Cast off grief and willow-tree:

For thy grief brings her content;

She is pleased if thou lament.

UNKNOWN, The Willow Tree. (Ancient Black-letter Ballad.)

WONDER

15 Wonder—which is the seed of knowledge.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning.

Men love to wonder and that is the seed of our science.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

Wonder is the foundation of all philosophy. (L'admiration est fondement de toute philosophie.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

Wonder is the feeling of a philosopher, and philosophy begins in wonder.

SOCRATES. (PLATO, Theætetus. Sec. 155.)

16 Has a man done wondering at women?—there follow men, dead and alive, to wonder at. Has he done wondering at men?—there's God to wonder at.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. i.

17 The man who cannot wonder, who does not habitually wonder (and worship), . . . is but a pair of spectacles, behind which there is no Eye.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. i, ch. 10.

1 How great is the wonder of heavenly and earthly things! (Quanta sit admirabilitas cœlestium rerum atque terrestrium.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, sec. 36.

2 To wonder at nothing when it happens; to consider nothing impossible before it has come to pass. (Nihil admirari cum acciderit, nihil, ante quam evenierit, non evenire posse arbitrari.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 14, sec. 30. Cicero refers to this attitude of mind as the ideal of wisdom.

NIL ADMIRARI, see under ADMIRATION.

3 And Katterfelto, with his hair on end
At his own wonders, wond'ring for his bread.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 86.

I've made bread from the bump of wonder:
That's my business, and there's my tale.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Juggling Jerry.

4 Long stood the noble youth oppress'd with awe

And stupid at the wondrous things he saw,
Surpassing common faith, transgressing nature's law.

DRYDEN, Theodore and Honoria, l. 217.

5 Wonder is the daughter of ignorance.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578)

6 Wonders will never cease.

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence. Vol. ii, p. 174.

The world will never starve for want of wonders;
but only for want of wonder.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Tremendous Trifles.

7 On account of that wonderful event, a nine days' solemn feast was celebrated by the Romans. (Romanis quoque ab eodem prodigio novendiale sacrum publice susceptum est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. i, sec. 31.

A wonder last but nine night never in town.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 588. (c. 1374)

This wonder (as wonders last) lasted nine days.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

Edward: You 'ld think it strange if I should marry her. . . .

Gloucester: That would be ten days' wonder at the least.

Clarence: That's a day longer than a wonder lasts.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 112.

No wonder lasts more than three days. (Niuna meraviglia dura più che tre giorni.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

8 Things too wonderful for me, which I knew not.

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 3.

There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not: The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 18, 19.

There be triple ways to take, of the eagle or the snake,

Or the way of a man with a maid.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Long Trail.

There be three things full hard to be known which way they will draw. The first is of a bird sitting upon a bough. The second is of a vessel in the sea. And the third is the way of a young man.

UNKNOWN. (Reliq. Antiquæ, i, 233. 1417)

9 Nay, I'll speak that Which you will wonder at.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 94.

I am to discourse wonders.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 29.

10 O wonderful, wonderful, and most wonderful wonderful! and yet again wonderful, and after that, out of all hooping!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 201.

O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 164.

There is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 385.

Can such things be,

And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 110.

11 Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound To pity too.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 4, l. 81.

'Twas strange, 'twas passing strange;

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 160.

12

This man so complete

Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 2, l. 118.

13

You shall see wonders.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act v, sc. 1, l. 13.

I am . . . attired in wonder.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 146.

Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act v, sc. 2, l. 106.

Wonder and amazement Inhabits here.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 104.

<sup>1</sup>
I do not envy, but I rather wonder. (Non equidem invideo; miror magis.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 11.

<sup>2</sup>
There's something in a flying horse,
There's something in a huge balloon;
But through the clouds I'll never float
Until I have a little Boat,
Shaped like the crescent moon.

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell: Prologue, l. 1.

<sup>3</sup>
We nothing know, but what is marvellous;
Yet what is marvellous, we can't believe.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1423.

Nothing can satisfy, but what confounds;
Nothing, but what astonishes, is true.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 836.

Wonder is involuntary praise.

YOUNG, The Revenge. Act iii, sc. 1.

WOODS

I—Woods: Apothegms

<sup>5</sup>
He that fears leaves, let him not go into the wood.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>6</sup>
Ye cannot see the wood for the trees.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

<sup>7</sup>
It is foolish to carry timber to the wood.
(In silvam non ligna feras insanius.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 34.

<sup>8</sup>
This is the forest primeval.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. i.

<sup>9</sup>
In a moment the ashes are made, but a forest is a long time growing. (Momento fit cinis:
diu sylva.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Bk. iii, sec. 27.

<sup>10</sup>
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 95.

<sup>11</sup>
Don't shout till you are out of the wood.
(Μήπω μέγ' εἴτης πρὶν τελευτᾶναι ἴδης.)

SOPHOCLES. (CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 8.)

We are not yet out of the wood.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary. Vol. iii, p. 473.

<sup>12</sup>
Woods have tongues As walls have ears.

TENNYSON, Balin and Balan, l. 522.

<sup>13</sup>
Even the gods dwell in the woods. (Habi-tarunt di quoque sylvas.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 60.

[A wood] made sacred by the religious mysteries of our fathers, and by ancient awe. (Auguriis patrum et prisca formidine sacram.)

TACITUS, Germania. Sec. 39.

The groves were God's first temples.

BRYANT, A Forest Hymn.

<sup>14</sup>
Again, ye woods, farewell. (Ipsæ rursus concedite silvæ.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. x, l. 63.

<sup>15</sup>
The woods are full of them.

ALEXANDER WILSON, *American Ornithology:
Preface*. (1808) Quoting the story of a boy returning from gathering wild-flowers.

<sup>16</sup>
Chop your own wood and it will warm you twice.

UNKNOWN. Motto over Henry Ford's Fireplace, Dearborn, Mich.

II—Woods: Description

<sup>17</sup>
This forest looks the way
Nightingales sound.

GRACE HAZARD CONKLING, Frost on a Window.

<sup>18</sup>
In the midway of this our mortal life,
I found me in a gloomy wood astray,
Gone from the path direct.
(Nel mezzo del cammin di nostra vita
Mi ritrovai per una selva oscura,
Che la diritta via era smarrita.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto i, l. 1.

<sup>19</sup>
As soft as on the earth I've lain
I've died and come to life again
For only men who are brave and good
Can come out changeless from a wood.

MARY CAROLYN DAVIES, Out of the Earth.

<sup>20</sup>
At the gates of the forest, the surprised man of the world is forced to leave his city estimates of great and small, wise and foolish.
The knapsack of custom falls off his back.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

When a lady rallied Adam Smith on his plain dress, he pointed to his well-bound library, and said, "You see, Madame, I am a beau in my books." The farmer in this month [October] is very patient of his coarse attire, and thinks, "at least, I am a beau in my woods."

EMERSON, Journals, October, 1864.

The woods appear
With crimson blotches deeply dashed and crossed,—
Sign of the fatal pestilence of Frost.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Mon-da-Min. St. 38.

<sup>21</sup>
To linger silent among the healthful woods, musing on such things as are worthy of a wise and good man. (Tacitum silvas inter reptare salubres, Curantem quicquid dignum sapiente bonoque est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 4.

<sup>22</sup>
The perplex'd paths of this drear wood,
The nodding horror of whose shady brows
Threats the forlorn and wand'ring passenger.

MILTON, Comus, l. 38.

1
Thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks

In Vallombrosa, where th' Etrurian shades
High over-arch'd imbrow'r.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 302.

Groves whose rich trees wept odorous gums and balm.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 248.

A pillar'd shade
High overarch'd, and echoing walks between.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1106.

2
Hath not old custom made this life more sweet

Than that of painted pomp? Are not these woods

More free from peril than the envious court?

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 2.
Under the shade of melancholy boughs,
Lose and neglect the creeping hours of time.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 111.

Unfrequented woods
I better brook than flourishing peopled towns.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act v, sc. 4, l. 2.

3
The ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 53.
With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 65.

4
Good is an Orchard, the Saint saith,
To meditate on life and death.

KATHARINE TYNAN, Of an Orchard.

5
The woods please us above all things. (Nobis placeant ante omnia sylva.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ii, l. 62.

In such green palaces the first kings reign'd,
Slept in their shades, and angels entertain'd;
With such old counsellors they did advise,
And, by frequenting sacred groves, grew wise.

EDMUND WALLER, On St. James' Park, l. 71.

6
One impulse from a vernal wood
May teach you more of man,
Of moral evil and of good,
Than all the sages can.

WORDSWORTH, The Tables Turned. St. 6.

There is a spirit in the woods.

WORDSWORTH, Nutting, l. 56.

ROBERT BROWNING, Youth and Art.

11
Had sigh'd to many though he loved but
one.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 5.

And, oh! he had that merry glance
That seldom lady's heart resists.
Lightly from fair to fair he flew,
And loved to plead, lament, and sue—
Suit lightly won, and short-lived pain,
For monarchs seldom sigh in vain.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 9.

12
Barkis is willin'!

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 1.

"When a man says he's willin'," said Mr. Barkis,
"it's as much as to say, that man's a-waitin' for a answer."

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 8.

Sure, I said, heav'n did not mean,
Where I reap thou shouldst but glean,
Lay thy sheaf adown and come,
Share my harvest and my home.

THOMAS HOOD, Ruth. St. 5.

Come live in my heart and pay no rent.

SAMUEL LOVER, *Vourneen! When Your Days
Were Bright*.

15
Love is uniform, but courtship is perpetually varying: the different arts of gallantry, which beauty has inspired, would of themselves be sufficient to fill a volume.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 95.

16
If I am not worth the woong, I surely am not worth the winning.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish.
Pt. iii.

17
Archly the maiden smiled, and, with eyes
overrunning with laughter,

Said, in a tremulous voice, "Why don't you speak for yourself, John?"

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. iii, conclusion.

<sup>1</sup> Erelong the time will come, sweet Preciosa, When that dull distance shall no more divide us;

And I no more shall scale thy wall by night To steal a kiss from thee, as I do now.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>2</sup> Her virtue and the conscience of her worth, That would be woo'd, and not unsought be won.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 502.

<sup>3</sup> The time I've lost in wooing, In watching and pursuing

The light that lies In woman's eyes,

Has been my heart's undoing.

THOMAS MOORE, The Time I've Lost in Wooing.

The heart of the wooer is warm, but warmer the heart of the wooing.

RICHARD REALF, Indirection.

<sup>4</sup> I touch her, like my beads, with devout care, And come unto my courtship as my prayer.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, A Devout Lover.

<sup>5</sup> It was a happy age when a man might have wooed his wench with a pair of kid leather gloves, a silver thimble, or with a tawdry lace; but now a velvet gown, a chain of pearl, or a coach with four horses will scarcely serve the turn.

BARNABE RICH, My Lady's Looking Glass.

<sup>6</sup> Afraid he would now, and now, and now, pop the question; which he had not the courage to put.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, vi, xx, 101.

<sup>7</sup> And frame love ditties passing rare, And sing them to a lady fair.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 7.

<sup>8</sup>

Most fair,

Will you vouchsafe to teach a soldier terms Such as will enter at a lady's ear And plead his love-suit to her gentle heart?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 98.

I was not born under a rhyming planet, nor I cannot woo in festival terms.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 2, l. 41.

Now, as I said before, I was never a maker of phrases.

I can march up to a fortress and summon the place to surrender,

But march up to a woman with such a proposal, I dare not.

I'm not afraid of bullets, nor shot from the mouth of a cannon,

But of a thundering "No!" point-blank from the mouth of a woman,

That I confess I'm afraid of, nor am I ashamed to confess it!

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. ii.

<sup>9</sup>

She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd: She is a woman, therefore to be won.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act v, sc. 3, l. 78.

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore may be won.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 82.

Was ever woman in this humour woo'd?

Was ever woman in this humour won?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 228.

For nature framed all women to be won.

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. ii, st. 15.

<sup>10</sup>

Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts To courtship and such fair ostents of love As shall conveniently become you there.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 8, l. 43.

You have brought her into such a canaries as 'tis wonderful.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 61.

<sup>11</sup>

If you were men, as you are men in show, You would not use a gentle lady so; To vow and swear and superpraise my parts, When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 151.

<sup>12</sup>

She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd

That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me,

And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,

I should but teach him how to tell my story, And that would woo her.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 162.

<sup>13</sup>

Gentle thou art and therefore to be won, Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed; And when a woman woos, what woman's son Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed?

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xli.

<sup>14</sup>

Women are angels, wooing:

Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:

That she belov'd knows nought that knows not this:

Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 2, l. 312.

Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 118.

1 There is a young lady I have set my heart on; though whether she is a-goin' to give me hern, or give me the mitten, I ain't quite satisfied.

SAM SLICK, Human Nature, p. 90.

II—Woong: Its Delights

5 All soft and sweet the maid appears,
With looks that know no art,

And though she yields with trembling fears,
She yields with all her heart.

APHERA BEHN, The Emperor of the Moon. Act iii, sc. 3.

6 Much ado there was, God wot!
He would love and she would not.
She said, Never was man true;
He said, None was false to you.
He said, He had lov'd her long;
She said, Love should have no wrong.
Coridon would kiss her then;
She said, Maids must kiss no men
Till they did for good and all.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Phyllida and Coridon.

But 'neath yon crimson tree,
Lover to listening maid might breathe his flame,
Nor mark, within its roseate canopy,
Her blush of maiden shame.

BRYANT, Autumn Woods.

7 Duncan Gray cam here to woo
(Ha, ha, the woong o't!)
On blythe Yule-Night when we were fou
(Ha, ha, the woong o't!).
Maggie coost her head fu' high,
Look'd asklent and unco skeigh,
Gart poor Duncan stand abeigh—
Ha, ha! the woong o't!

BURNS, Duncan Gray.

He kin o' l'itered on the mat,
Some doubtfle o' the sekle,
His heart kep' goin' pity-pat,
But hern went pity Zekle.
LOWELL, The Courtin'. St. 15.
He stood a spell on one foot fust,

Then stood a spell on t'other,
An' on which one he felt the wust
He couldn't ha' told ye nuther.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. St. 19.

8 With a hey, Dolly! ho, Dolly!
Dolly shall be mine,
Before the spray is white with May,
Or blooms the eglantine.
AUSTIN DOBSON, The Milkmaid.

9 What is the greatest bliss
That the tongue o' man can name?
'Tis to woo a bonnie lassie
When the kye comes hame.
JAMES HOGG, When the Kye Comes Hame.

My Peggy is a young thing,
And I'm na very auld,
Yet weel I like to meet her at
The wauking o' the fauld.
ALLAN RAMSAY, My Peggy.

O ruddier than the cherry!
O sweeter than the berry!
O nymph more bright
Than moonshine night,
Like kidlings, blithe and merry!
Ripe as the melting cluster!
No lily has such lustre;
Yet hard to tame
As raging flame,
And fierce as storms that bluster!
JOHN GAY, Acts and Galatea. Pt. ii.

10 I sat with Doris, the Shepherd maiden;
Her crook was laden with wreathèd flowers;
I sat and wooed her through sunlight wheeling,
And shadows stealing for hours and hours.
ARTHUR JOSEPH MUNBY, Pastoral.

11 Wooed, and married, and a',
Married, and wooed, and a'!
And was she nae very weel aff
That was wooed, and married, and a'?
ALEXANDER ROSS, Wooed and Married and A'.

12 A heaven on earth I have won by woong
thee.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 66.

Woong thee, I found thee of more value
Than stamps in gold or sums in sealed bags;
And 'tis the very riches of thyself
That now I aim at.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 4, l. 15.

III—Woong: Advice

13 Woo the fair one when around
Early birds are singing;
When o'er all the fragrant ground
Early herbs are springing:
When the brookside, bank, and grove
All with blossom laden,

Shine with beauty, breathe of love,
Woo the timid maiden.

BRYANT, Love's Lessons.

1 She that with poetry is won,
Is but a desk to write upon;
And what men say of her they mean
No more than on the thing they lean.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 591.

2 Maidens, like moths, are ever caught by glare,
And Mammon wins his way where seraphs might despair.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 9.

The miller, he hecht her a heart leal and loving;
The laird did address her wi' matter mair moving:
A fine pacing-horse, wi' a clear, chained bridle,
A whip by her side, and a bonie side-saddle!

ROBERT BURNS, Meg o' the Mill.

3 He that will win his dame must do
As love does when he draws his bow;
With one hand thrust the lady from,
And with the other pull her home.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto 1, l. 449.

4 A man shall win us best with flattery.
CEAUCER, Wife of Bath's Tale, l. 76.

Have you not found out that every woman is infallibly to be gained by every sort of flattery, and every man by one sort or other?

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 March, 1752.

The firmest purpose of a woman's heart
To well-timed, artful flattery may yield.

GEORGE LILLO, Elmerick.

5 He behaved as most professed admirers do.
Said some civil things of my face, talked much of his want of merit, and the greatness of mine; mentioned his heart, gave a short tragedy speech, and ended with pretended rapture.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act v, l. 1.

6 If doughty deeds my lady please,
Right soon I'll mount my steed;
And strong his arm and fast his seat,
That bears frae me the meed. . . .
Then tell me how to woo thee, Love,
O tell me how to woo thee!

For thy dear sake nae care I'll take,
Tho' ne'er another trow me.

ROBERT CUNNINGHAME-GRAHAM, Tell Me How to Woo Thee.

7 But, alas! alas! for the Woman's fate,
Who has from a mob to choose a mate
'Tis a strange and painful mystery!
But the more the eggs, the worse the hatch;
The more the fish, the worse the catch;
The more the sparks, the worse the match;
Is a fact in Woman's history.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Courtship. St. 7.

8 The surest way to hit a woman's heart is to take aim kneeling.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Way to a Woman's Heart.

9 If I speak to thee in friendship's name,
Thou think'st I speak too coldly;
If I mention Love's devoted flame,
Thou say'st I speak too boldly.

THOMAS MOORE, How Shall I Woo?

10 Frivolous minds are won by trifles: many have found useful the deft arranging of a cushion; it has helped, too, to stir the air with a light fan, or to set a stool beneath a dainty foot.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 159.

Employ soft flatteries, and words which delight the ear. (Blanditias molles, auremque juvantia verba Adfer.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 159.

If you can, truly; if not, at any rate readily. (Si poteris, vere; si minus, apta tamen.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 228.

11 Do not begin your wooing with the maid.
(Non tibi ab ancilla est incipienda venus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 386.

Who could not win the mistress wooed the maid.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 106.

Well, I will love, write, sigh, pray, sue, and groan:
Some men must love my lady and some Joan.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 206.

12 He that would the daughter win,
Must with the mother first begin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

13 Friendship is constant in all other things
Save in the office and affairs of love:
Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues;

Let every eye negotiate for itself
And trust no agent.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 182.

14 If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully.
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown and be perverse and say thee nay,
So thou wilt woo: but else, not for the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 94.

15 Win her with gifts, if she respect not words;
Dumb jewels often in their silent kind
More than quick words do move a woman's mind.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 89.

Flatter and praise, commend, extol their graces;
Though ne'er so black, say they have angels' faces.

That man that hath a tongue, I say, is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 102.

Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighs, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry and with your tears
Moist it again, and frame some feeling line.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 73.

Giving presents to a woman to secure her love, is as vain as endeavouring to fill a sieve with water.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy, 23. (1716)

For courtesy wins woman all as well
As valour may.

TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 702.

Perhaps if you address the lady
Most politely, most politely—
Flatter and impress the lady,
Most politely, most politely—
Humbly beg and humbly sue—
She may deign to look on you.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act i.

IV—Woong: Faint Heart and Fair Lady

2
And let us mind, faint heart ne'er wan
A lady fair:

Wha does the utmost that he can
Will whyles do mair.

BURNS, Epistle to Dr. Blacklock.

Remember the old saying, "Faint heart never won fair lady."

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 10.

Ah fool! faint heart fair lady ne'er could win.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Britain's Ida. Canto v, st.
1. Sometimes wrongly attributed to Edmund Spenser.

Then have amongst ye once again,
Faint hearts fair ladies never win.

UNKNOWN, A Proper Ballad in Praise of My Lady Marquess. (1569)

Faint heart, hath been a common phrase,
Fair lady never wives.

UNKNOWN, The Roche of Regard. (1576)

3
Brisk confidence still best with woman copes;
Pique her and soothe in turns, soon passion crowns thy hopes.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 34.

Thus the Soldier arm'd with Resolution
Told his soft Tale, and was a thriving Wooer.

CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act ii, sc. 1.

4
But as men say, Where heart is failed,
There shall no castle be assailed.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l.
6573. (c. 1390)

Come not cringing to sue me!
Take me with triumph and power,
As a warrior storms a fortress!
I will not shrink or cower.
Come, as you came in the desert
Ere we were women and men,

When the tiger passions were in us,
And love as you loved me then!
WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, Cleopatra.

From the Desert I come to thee
On a stallion shod with fire,
And the winds are left behind
In the speed of my desire.
BAYARD TAYLOR, Bedouin Song.

5
To get thine ends, lay bashfulness aside;
Who fears to ask, doth teach to be deny'd.
ROBERT HERRICK, No Bashfulness in Begging.

6
I'll woo her as the lion woos his brides.
JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act i, sc. 1.

I now will court her in the conqueror's style;
"Come, see, and overcome."
MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour. Act ii, sc. 1.

7
The adventurous lover is successful still.
POPE, Prologue for Mr. D'Urfey's Last Play.

A pressing lover seldom wants success,
Whilst the respectful, like the Greek, sits down
And wastes a ten years' siege before one town.
NICHOLAS ROWE, To the Inconstant: Epilogue,
l. 18.

8
He her chamber-window will ascend
And with a corded ladder fetch her down.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 39.

He that climbs the tall tree has won right to the fruit,
He that leaps the wide gulf should prevail in his suit.
SCOTT, The Talisman. Ch. 26.

Ah, me! it was he that won her
Because he dared to climb!
THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Nocturne.

9
Never give her o'er;
For scorn at first makes after-love the more.
If she do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you:
If she do chide, 'tis not to have you gone,
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 94.

Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 573.

He that after ten denials
Dares attempt no further trials,
Hath no warrant to acquire
The dainties of his chaste desire.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Woong Stuff.

10
Bring therefore all the forces that ye may,
And lay incessant battery to her heart;
Plaints, prayers, vows, ruth, sorrow, and dis-
may;
Those engines can the proudest love convert.

And, if those fail, fall down and die before her;
So dying live, and living do adore her.
EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet xiv.

V—Wooing: Pursuer and Pursued

1 While I am I, and you are you,
So long as the world contains us both,
Me the loving and you the loth,
While the one eludes, must the other pursue.
ROBERT BROWNING, Life in a Love.

In fact, 'tis the season of billing and cooing,
Amorous flying and fond pursuing.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Fine Weather on the Di-gentia. Pt. i, st. 1.

2 'Tis leap year, lady, and therefore very good to enter a courtier.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act i, sc.
1. (1608) The custom of women proposing in leap year is said to have originated from a law passed in Scotland in 1228; another legend attributes it to St. Patrick.

Alas! to seize the moment
When heart inclines to heart,
And press a suit with passion,
Is not a woman's part.

If man come not to gather
The roses where they stand,
They fade among their foliage;
They cannot seek his hand.
BRYANT, Song. From the Spanish of Iglesias.

What then in love can woman do?
If we grow fond they shun us;
And when we fly them, they pursue,
And leave us when they've won us.
JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We should be woo'd and were not made to woo.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 241.

Though I lov'd you well, I woo'd you not;
And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,
Or that we women had men's privilege
Of speaking first.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc.
2, l. 134.

3 Most complying, When denying,
And to be follow'd only flying.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, Simile to Jupiter.

4 Flee it [love], and it will flee thee,
Follow it, and it will follow thee.
THOMAS HOWELL, H. His Devises, 64. (1581)

I have pursued her as love hath pursued me;
which hath been on the wing of all occasions. . . .
And that hath taught me to say this:
"Love like a shadow flies when substance love
pursues;
Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues."

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 208. (1600)

5 Follow a shadow, it still flies you,
Seem to fly it, it will pursue:
So court a mistress, she denies you;
Let her alone, she will court you.
Say are not women truly, then,
Styled but the shadows of us men?
BEN JONSON, That Women Are but Men's Shadows.

Flee, and she follows; follow, and she'll flee;
Than she there's none more coy; there's none more fond than she.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 4.

6 Coy Hebe flies from those that woo,
And shuns the hands would seize upon her;
Follow thy life, and she will sue
To pour for thee the cup of honor.
J. R. LOWELL, Hebe. St. 7.

7 You pursue, I fly; you fly, I pursue. Such is my mind. (Insequeris, fugio; fugis, insequor; hæc mihi mens est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 83.

8 'Tis the quarry that flees that the hunter follows; what he takes he leaves behind, and ever strains to the prey ahead. (Venator sequitur fugientia; sapta relinquit Semper et inventis ulteriora petit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 9, l. 9.

Many women desire what flees them; they hate what is too forward. (Quod refugit, multæ cupiunt: odere quod instat.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 717.

9 Ah, whither shall a maiden flee,
When a bold youth so swift pursues,
And siege of tenderest courtesy,
With hope perseverant, still renews?
COVENTRY PATMORE, The Angel in the House:
Canto xii, The Chase.

10 You think that you are Ann's suitor; that you are the pursuer and she the pursued; that it is your part to woo, to persuade, to prevail, to overcome. Fool: it is you who are the pursued, the marked-down quarry, the destined prey.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act ii.

Pursued man loves to think himself pursuer.
EDMUND VANCE COOKE, *From the Book of Ex-
tenuations: Ruth*.

A man always chases a woman until she catches
him.

UNKNOWN. (Columnist in El Paso Times.)

11 My love is male and proper-man
And what he'd have he'd get by chase,
So I must cheat as women can
And keep my love from off my face.
'Tis folly to my dawning, thrifty thought
That I must run, who in the end am caught.
ANNA WICKHAM, The Contemplative Quarry.

VI—Wooring and Repenting

1 Of her scorn the maid repented,
And the shepherd of his love.
ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Leave Me, Simple Shepherd.

2 And she, she lies in my hand as tame
As a late pear basking over the wall;
Just a touch to try and off it came;
'Tis mine—can I let it fall?

ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

That you're in a terrible taking,
By all these sweet oglings I see,
But the fruit that will fall without shaking,
Indeed is too mellow for me.

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, To a Lady Making Love.

3 For this is a sort of engagement, you see,
Which is binding on you but not binding on me.

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Nothing to Wear.

4 I'm jilted, forsaken, outwitted;
Yet think not I'll whimper or bawl—
The lass is alone to be pitied
Who ne'er has been courted at all; . . .
What though at my heart he has tilted,
What though I have met with a fall?

Better be courted and jilted
Then never be courted at all.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Jilted Nymph.

Never wedding, ever wooring,
Still a love-lorn heart pursuing,
Read you not the wrong you're doing
In my cheek's pale hue?

All my life with sorrow strewing—
Wed, or cease to woo.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Maid's Remonstrance.

5 It's better to change your attitude an' pay some heart balm than to be dug up later an' analyzed.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 85.

6 A fool there was and he made his prayer
(Even as you and I!)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair
(We called her the woman who did not care)
But the fool he called her his lady fair—
(Even as you and I!)

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Vampire. St. 1.

7 Ye shall know my breach of promise.
Old Testament: Numbers, xiv, 34.

Chops and Tomato sauce. Yours, Pickwick.
Chops! Gracious heavens! and Tomato sauce!
Gentlemen, is the happiness of a sensitive and confiding female to be trifled away by such shallow artifices as these?

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

Thou didst swear to me upon a parcel-gilt goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-coal fire, on Wednesday in Wheeson week, when the prince broke thy head for liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, thou didst swear to me then, as I was washing thy wound, to marry me, and make me my lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 93.

8 Who wooed in haste, and means to wed at leisure.

SHAKESPEARE, Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 11.

13 For what are the voices of birds
Ay, and of beasts—but words, our words,
Only so much more sweet?

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. iv.

14 Articulate words are a harsh clamor and dis-sonance. When man arrives at his highest perfection, he will again be dumb!

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, *American Note-
Books*, April, 1841.

15 A word is not a crystal, transparent and unchanging, it is the skin of a living thought and may vary greatly in color and content according to the circumstances and time in which it is used.

JUSTICE O. W. HOLMES, Decision. (Towne v. Eisner, 245 U.S. 418.)

Life and language are alike sacred. Homicide and verbiicide—that is, violent treatment of a word

<sup>5</sup> Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools!
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 146.

Weasel words are words that suck all the life out of the words next to them, just as a weasel sucks an egg and leaves the shell.

STEWART CHAPLIN, The Stained-Glass Political Platform. (Century Magazine, June, 1900,
p. 305.)

One of our defects as a nation is a tendency to use what have been called "weasel words." When a weasel sucks an egg, the meat is sucked out of the egg; and if you use a "weasel word" after another there is nothing left of the other.

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 525. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

So spake those wary foes, fair friends in look,

And so in words great gifts they gave and took,
And had small profit, and small loss thereby.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. viii, l. 379.

1 Smooth words make smooth ways.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Soft words break no bones.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Fair words break never bone,

Foul words break many ane.

2 JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

His plausible words

He scatter'd not in ears, but grafted them,
To grow there and to bear.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 53.

Whose words all ears took captive.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 17.

Let not his smoothing words Bewitch your hearts.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 156.

VII—Words: Bitter Words

3 A blow with a word strikes deeper than a blow with a sword.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4.

Sharp words make more wounds than surgeons can heal.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Mirror of Man. Sig.
A4. (1594)

An acute word cuts deeper than a sharp weapon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 575.

More sharp word than sword.

UNKNOWN, Ancrene Riwe, 74. (c. 1220)

4 Your little words are hard and cold,

You try to use them in a sling

As David did to slay the bold

Goliath—but they only sting!

MAY BRINKLEY, Pebbles.

5 Religion, freedom, vengeance, what you will—
A word's enough to raise mankind to kill.

BYRON, Lara. Canto ii, l. 222.

A single little word can strike him dead. (Ein Wörtlein kann ihn fällen.)

LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 430. Referring to the Pope.

6 She dealt her pretty words like blades,
As glittering they shone,

And every one unbared a nerve

Or wanted with a bone.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 29.

7 Whatsoever word thou speakest, that shalt thou also hear. (Ὅπποῖόν κ' εἴρησθα ἔπος, τοῖόν κ' ἐπακούσῃς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 250. See also RETRI-BUTION.

8 I'll sauce her with bitter words.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 69.

These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 133.

Here are a few of the unpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 254.

These words are razors to my wounded heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 314.

9 Thy words are like a cloud of winged snakes.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act i, l. 632.

10 From sharp words and wits men pluck no
fruit;

And gathering thorns they shake the tree at root.

SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

VIII—Words: Verbosity

Loquacity

11 See how your words come from you in a crowd!

ROBERT BROWNING, A Soul's Tragedy. Act i.

What so wild as words are?

ROBERT BROWNING, A Woman's Last Word.

Words like wildfire.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 217.

12 What is so insane as the empty sound of words, however well-chosen and elegant, if there is no foundation of sense or sagacity?
(Quid enim est tam furiosum quam verborum vel optimorum atque arnatissimorum sonitus inanis, nulla subjecta sententia nec scientia?)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. i, sec. 51.

What is so furious and Bethlem-like as a vain sound of chosen and excellent words?

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Lingua Sapientis.

13 A barren superfluity of words.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto ii, l. 95.

A meaningless torrent of words. (Inanis ver-borum torrens.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk.
x, ch. 7, sec. 23.

14 Do not go forth on the gale with every sail set into an ocean of words.

HIPPIAS. (PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 338.)

15 He multiplieth words without knowledge.

Old Testament: Job, xxxv, 16.

Who is this that darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge?

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 2.

- <sup>1</sup> A glutton of words.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Passus i, l. 139.
- <sup>2</sup> He can compress the most words into the smallest ideas of any man I ever met.
ABRAHAM LINCOLN, of a fellow lawyer. (Gross, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 36.)
- <sup>3</sup> The world pays itself with words; there is little plumbing of the depths of things. (Le monde se paye de paroles; peu approfondissement les choses.)
BLAISE PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales, ii.
- <sup>4</sup> Words are like leaves, and where they most abound,
Much fruit of sense beneath is rarely found.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 109.
- Putting all his words together,
'Tis three blue beans in one blue bladder.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto i, l. 27.
- <sup>5</sup> He that uses many words for the explaining any subject, doth, like the cuttle fish, hide himself for the most part in his own ink.
JOHN RAY, On the Creation.
- <sup>6</sup> Words enough, but little wisdom. (Satis eloquentiæ, sapientiæ parum.)
SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 5, sec. 5.
- Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 108.
- A fine volley of words, gentlemen, and quickly shot off.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 33.
- The artillery of words.
SWIFT, Ode to Sancho, l. 13.
- <sup>7</sup> Zounds! I was never so bethump'd with words Since I first call'd my brother's father dad.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 466.
- I was ne'er so thrummed since I was a gentleman.
DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Act iv, sc. 2.
- <sup>8</sup> Thou wilt be like a lover presently And tire the hearer with a book of words.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 309.
- Discourse fustian with one's own shadow.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 282.
- This helpless smoke of words.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 147.
- You cram these words into my ears against The stomach of my sense.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 106.
- <sup>9</sup> He utters empty words, sound without thought. (Dat inania verba, Dat sine mente sonum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 639.

VOLTAIRE, Sur la Carrousell de l'Impératrice de Russie. Referring to Pindar.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, 2.

IX—Words: Reticence

See also Silence

<sup>12</sup> Our words are our own if we keep them within.

ALEXANDER BROME, (Roxburghe Ballads, viii, 109.)

<sup>13</sup> A word that is not spoken never does any mischief.

CHARLES A. DANA, The Making of a Newspaper Man. Maxim 4.

<sup>14</sup> Be not rash with thy mouth; . . . let thy words be few.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, v, 2.

When looks were fond and words were few.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, Poet's Bridal-day Song.

<sup>15</sup> Few words, but proceeding from a heart filled with truth. (Pauca Verba sed a pleno venientia pectore veri.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bl. ix, l. 188.

<sup>16</sup> He that hath knowledge spareth his words.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 27.

As it is the mark of great minds to be able to say much in few words, so it is the mark of little ones to speak much and to say nothing. (Comme c'est le caractère des grands esprits de faire entendre en peu de paroles beaucoup de choses, les petits esprits, au contraire, ont le don de beaucoup parler, et de ne rien dire.)

<sup>17</sup> Men of few words are the best men.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 39.

I know thou'rt full of love and honesty, And weigh'st thy words before thou givest them breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 118.

<sup>18</sup> Deep in my heart subsides the infrequent word,

And there dies slowly throbbing like a wounded bird.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Her Portrait. St. 3.

X—Words: Their Beauty

<sup>19</sup> What things have we seen

Done at the Mermaid! heard words that have been

So nimble and so full of subtile flame
As if that every one from whence they came
Had meant to put his whole wit in a jest,
And resolved to live a fool the rest
Of his dull life.

FRANCIS BEAUMONT, Letter to Ben Jonson.

1
God wove a web of loveliness,
Of clouds and stars and birds,
But made not any thing at all
So beautiful as words.

ANNA HEMPSTEAD BRANCH, Her Words.

2
My words are little jars
For you to take and put upon a shelf.
Their shapes are quaint and beautiful,
And they have many pleasant colours and lustres

To recommend them.
Also the scent from them fills the room
With sweetness of flowers and crushed grasses.

AMY LOWELL, A Gift.

Such little, puny things are words in rhyme:
Poor feeble loops and strokes as frail as hairs;
You see them printed here, and mark their chime,
And turn to your more durable affairs.
Yet on such petty tools the poet dares
To run his race with mortar, bricks and lime,
And draws his frail stick to the point, and stares
To aim his arrow at the heart of Time.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Quickening.

3
Words, like fine flowers, have their colours too.

ERNEST REYS, Words.

4
I love smooth words, like gold-enameled fish
Which circle slowly with a silken swish,
And tender ones, like downy-feathered birds:
Words shy and dappled, deep-eyed deer in herds.

ELINOR WYLIE, Pretty Words.

XI—Words: Their Finality

5
A word once spoken revoked can not be.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Skyp of Folsys, l. 108.
(1509)

Boys flying kites haul in their white winged birds.
You can't do that way when you're flying words.
"Careful with fire," is good advice we know;
"Careful with words," is ten times doubly so.
Thoughts unexpressed may sometimes fall back
dead;

But God Himself can't kill them when they're said.

WILL CARLETON, First Settler's Story. St. 21.

6
A word spoken is an arrow let fly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 486.

The arrow belongs not to the archer when it has once left the bow; the word no longer belongs to the speaker when it has once passed his lips.

HEINE, Religion and Philosophy: Preface.

7
Winged words. ("Ἔπεα πτερόεντα.")

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 331. This phrase occurs 46 times in the Iliad and 58 times in the Odyssey.

Winged words. (Geflügelte Worte.)

GEORGE BÜCHMANN. Title of his book on proverbs and famous phrases.

Our words have wings, but fly not where we would.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

8
It is as easy to recall a stone thrown violently from the hand as a word which has left your tongue. (Ὅτ' ἐκ χειρὸς μεθέντα καρτερὸν λίθον ῥᾶν κατασχέιν, οὐτ' ἀπὸ γλώσσης λόγον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 1092.

The word once spoken flies beyond recall. (Semel emissum volat irrevocabile verbum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 71.

The written word, unpublished, can be destroyed,
but the spoken word can never be recalled.
(Delere licebit Quod non edideris; nescit vox missa reverti.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 389.

9
Look out how you use proud words.

When you let proud words go, it is not easy to call them back.

CARL SANDBURG, Primer Lesson.

10
O! many a shaft, at random sent,
Finds mark the archer little meant!
And many a word at random spoken
May soothe or wound a heart that's broken!
SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto v, st. 18.

XII—Word and Deed

and Practice.

11
There is no man but speaketh more honestly than he can do or think.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

12
Do as we say, and not as we do. (Faites ce que nous disons, et ne faites pas ce que nous faisons.)

BOCCACCIO, Decameron. Day iii, tale 7. (French translation by Sabatier de Castres.)

Do you that good which I say, but not that ill which I do.

JAMES MABBE, Celestina, 27. (1631)

The common saying of "Do as I say, not as I do,"
is usually reversed in the actual experience of life.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 12.

13
I see that saying and doing are two things, and hereafter I shall better observe this distinction.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

Saying and doing are two things.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Matthew, xxi; JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, ii, 5.

Saying is one thing, doing another. (Le dire est autre chose que le faire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 31.

Without doubt it is a delightful harmony when doing and saying go together. (C'est sans doute une belle harmonie, quand le faire et le dire vont ensemble.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 31.

<sup>1</sup> This, young man, is harder for me to say than to do.

JULIUS CÆSAR, to Metellus. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar.)

Such things are easier said than done, I see. (Magis istuc percipimus lingua dici, quam factis fore.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 162. (Act i, sc. 3.)

Easier said than done. (Id dictu quam re, ut pleraque, facilius.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxi, sec. 38.

That is . . . sooner said than done.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>2</sup> A controversy that affords
Actions for arguments, not words.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 871.

<sup>3</sup> It's a long step from saying to doing.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

<sup>4</sup> Plato saith, who-so that can him read,
The words must be cousin to the deed.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 741.

The wise Plato saith, as ye may read,
The word must needs accorde with the deed.

CHAUCER, Maunciples Tale, l. 205.

<sup>5</sup> His deeds do not agree with his words. (Facta ejus cum dictis discrepant.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, sec. 30.

Let deeds correspond with words. (Dictis facta suppetant.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 108. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Thy actions to thy words accord.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 9.

<sup>6</sup> Say well and do well, end with a letter,
Say well is good, but do well is better.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 194.

<sup>7</sup> Though language forms the preacher,
'Tis "good works" make the man.

ELIZA COOK, Good Works.

<sup>8</sup> Good words and ill deeds deceive wise and fools.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, 46. (1611)

That you can speak so well, and do so ill!

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 4.

What pity 'tis, one that can speak so well,

Should, in his actions, be so ill.

MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act iii, sc. 3.

<sup>9</sup> Feeble deeds are vainer far than words.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

<sup>10</sup> Go put your creed into the deed,
Nor speak with double tongue.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Ode: Concord.

Words and deeds are quite indifferent forms of the divine energy. Words are also actions, and actions are a kind of words.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

<sup>11</sup> Never should this thing have been,
That words with men should more avail than deeds.

(Ἀνθρώποισιν οὐκ ἐχρῆν ποτε τῶν πραγμάτων τὴν γλῶσσαν ἰσχύειν πλέον.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 1187.

<sup>12</sup> Deeds not words.

FLETCHER, The Lover's Progress. Act iii, sc. 6.

For now the field is not far off
Where we must give the world a proof
Of deeds, not words.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 867.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578) "Le parole son femmine, i fatti son maschi" has a point in Italian which it lacks in English.

They say in Italy, that deeds are men, and words are but women.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 5, letter 21. (1655)

Words are women, deeds are men.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)
In frequent use thereafter.

I am not yet so lost in lexicography as to forget that words are the daughters of the earth, and that things are the sons of heaven.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language: Preface.

Words are the daughters of earth, and deeds are the sons of heaven.

SIR WILLIAM JONES. Translating a Hindoo proverb.

Words are men's daughters, but God's sons are things.

SAMUEL MADDEN, Boulter's Monument. Said to have been inserted by Dr. Johnson.

<sup>14</sup> Well done is better than well said.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1737.

Saying and doing have quarrelled and parted.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1756.

<sup>15</sup> Good words without deeds are rushes and reeds.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6247.

<sup>16</sup> If you'd pooh-pooh this monarch's plan,
Pooh-pooh it;

But when he says he'll hang a man
He'll do it.

W. S. GILBERT, Princess Ida. Act ii.

- 1 It is as folk do, and not as folk say.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
- 2 An acre of performance is worth a whole land of promise.
JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. iv, 33.
- 3 A man of words and not of deeds
Is like a garden full of weeds.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 20; HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes. No. 166.
- 4 Deeds are better things than words are,
Actions mightier than boastings.
LONGFELLOW, The Song of Hiawatha. Pt. ix.
- 5 And I am tired of the cruelty of men,
With their words like gods and their deeds like lice.
MARIE LUHRS, Ennui of an Empress.
- 6 Trust on the deed and not in gay speeches.
JOHN LYLX, Secreta Secretorum.
- 7 The smallest actual good is better than the most magnificent promises of impossibilities.
MACAULAY, Essays: Lord Bacon.
- 8 It seems to me to be common sense to look at what is done, and not to what is said. (Acta exteriora indicant interiora secreta.)
SIR JAMES MARTIN, Caine v. Coulson. (1 H
& C. 764.)
- 9 All words, And no performance.
MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act iv, sc. 2.
You have said,
Gallants, so much, and hitherto done so little,
That, till I learn to speak, and you to do,
I must take time to thank you.
MASSINGER, The Picture. Act ii, sc. 2.
- 10 Great talkers are never great doers.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act i, sc. 1.
- Speaking much is also a sign of vanity; for he that is lavish of words is a niggard in deed.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Instructions to His Son.
Ch. 4.
- Talkers are no good doers; be assured
We come to use our hands and not our tongues.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 352.
- 11 Just deeds are the best answer to injurious
words.
MILTON, Observations upon the Articles of Peace with the Irish Rebels.
- 12 Some men never spake a wise word, yet do wisely; some on the other side do never a wise deed, and yet speak wisely.
SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Crumms Fal'n from King James Talk.
- 13 No need of words; trust deeds. (*Non opus est
verbis, credite rebus.*)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. ii, l. 734.
- Begin to supplement your promises with deeds.
(Incipe pollicitis addere facta tuis.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 16, l. 48.
- 14 What then does it signify that you are generous in talk, if, when it comes to the point, your help has died out? (Quid te igitur retulit Beneficium esse oratione, si ad rem auxilium emortuum est?)
PLAUTUS, Epidicus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 14.
- "He wishes well" is worthless, unless the deed go with it. (Nequam illud verbum est, Bene vult, nisi qui benefacit.)
PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 4.
- 15 A word spoken in season is like an apple of silver, and actions are more precious than words.
JOHN PYM, *Debate on a Message from Charles
I*, 1628.
- 16 It is not as far from the heart to the mouth,
as it is from the mouth to the hand.

- 19 Ill deeds are doubled with an evil word.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 20.
- 20 Have not I
An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not
My dagger in my mouth.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 76.
- I profess not talking: only this—
Let each man do his best.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 92.
- I have no words: My voice is in my sword.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 8, l. 6.
- 21 And ever may your highness yoke together,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 150.
- 'T is a kind of good deed to say well,
And yet words are no deeds.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 153.
- Your large speeches may your deeds approve,
That good effects may spring from words of love.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 187.
- So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honour both.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 2, l. 43.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act ii, sc. 2.

2 You do the deeds,
And your ungodly deeds find me the words.

(Σὺ γὰρ ποεῖς

Τοῦργον· τὰ δ' ἔργα τοὺς λόγους εὐρίσκειται.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 624.

3 Such distance is between high words and deeds!

In proof, the greatest vaunter seldom speeds.
ROBERT SOUTHWELL, St. Peter's Complaint.

4 Every recreant who proved his cowardice in the hour of danger, was afterwards boldest in words and tongue.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 62.

Not one of those men who in words are valiant, And when it comes to action skulk away.

SCHILLER, Die Piccolomini. Act iv, sc. 4. (Coleridge, tr.)

5 Thy leaf has perish'd in the green,
And, while we breathe beneath the sun,
The world which credits what is done
Is cold to all that might have been.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. LXXV, st. 4.

6 Done and said. (Factis et dictis.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 941. (Act v, sc. 3.)

7 A slender acquaintance with the world must convince every man that actions, not words, are the true criterion.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Social Maxims: Friendship.

8 God blesses still the generous thought,
And still the fitting word He speeds,
And Truth, at His requiring taught,
He quickens into deeds.

WHITTIER, Channing. St. 23.

Each crisis brings its word and deed.

WHITTIER, The Lost Occasion, l. 58.

9 On wings of deeds the soul must mount!
When we are summoned from afar,
Ourselves, and not our words, will count—
Not what we said, but what we are!

WILLIAM WINTER, George Fawcett Rowe.

10 To harps preferring swords,
And everlasting deeds to burning words!

XIII—Word and Bond

13 No less flattering in her word,
That purely, her simple record
Was found as true as any bond.

CHAUCER, Book of the Duchesse, l. 935.

His word is as good as his bond.
FRANCIS LENTON, Characterismi. (1631)

Your word is as good as the Bank, sir.
THOMAS HOLCROFT, The Road to Ruin. Act i, sc. 3, l. 235.

His words are bonds, his oaths are oracles.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 75.

14 He who lightly assents will seldom keep his word.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 63.

15 An honest man's word is as good as his bond.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 103. (1670)

Every honest man is as good as his word.
GEORGE LILLO, Silvia. Act i, sc. 9.

16 Dearer is love than life, and fame than gold;
But dearer than them both your faith once plighted hold.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto xi, st. 63.

To honour his own word as if his God's.
TENNYSON, Guinevere, l. 469.

WORDSWORTH, WILLIAM

17 Time may restore us in his course
Goethe's sage mind and Byron's force;
But where will Europe's latter hour
Again find Wordsworth's healing power?
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Memorial Verses.

18 No poet ever took himself more seriously than did William Wordsworth; however wide his outlook, he lived as a sectary in a closed system, and imagined that whatever he happened to think was of primary importance.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Collected Essays. Vol. ii.

19 Just for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat—
Found the one gift of which fortune bereft us,
Lost all the others she lets us devote.
ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Leader. Wordsworth's acceptance of the laureateship and a pension had seemed a defection from the Liberal cause.

20 That mild apostate from poetic rule,
The simple Wordsworth, framer of a lay
As soft as evening in his favourite May, . . .
Who, both by precept and example, shows

That prose is verse, and verse is merely prose.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
I. 236.

Yet not to vulgar Wordsworth let us stoop,
The meanest object of the lowly group,
Whose verse, of all but childish prattle void,
Seems blessed harmony to Lamb and Lloyd.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
I. 903.

Let simple Wordsworth chime his childish verse.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
I. 917.

1
One finds also a kind of sincerity in his speech.
But for prolixity, thinness, endless dilution, it excels all the other speech I have heard from mortals.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Essays: Wordsworth.

2
Is Wordsworth a bell with a wooden tongue?

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1863.

3
This will never do!

FRANCIS LORD JEFFREY, Review, of Wordsworth's Excursion. (Edinburgh Review.)

Although Jeffrey completely failed to recognize Wordsworth's real greatness, he was yet not wrong in saying of the Excursion as a work of poetic style, "This will never do!"

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Poems of William Wordsworth: Preface.

4
A modern Moses who sits on Pisgah with his back obstinately turned to that promised land, the Future; he is only fit for those old maid
tabbies, the Muses.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Review of Wordsworth's Poems.

5
To William Wordsworth, true philosopher and inspired poet, who, by the special gift and calling of Almighty God, whether he sang of man or of nature, failed not to lift up men's hearts to holy things.

JOHN KEEBLE, Lectures on Poetry: Dedication.

6
Wordsworth in sonnet is a classic too
And on that grass plot sits at Milton's side.

W. S. LANDOR, To the Author of Festus.

We are not called upon to place great men of his stamp as if they were collegians in a class-list.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Introduction to Wordsworth.

8
To his own self not always just,
Bound in the bonds that all men share,—
Confess the failings as we must,
The lion's mark is always there!
Nor any song so pure, so great,
Since his, who closed the sightless eyes,
Our Homer of the war in Heaven,
To wake in his own Paradise.

FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE, William Wordsworth.

9
This laurel greener from the brows
Of him that utter'd nothing base.

TENNYSON, To the Queen.

10
Wordsworth, thy music like a river rolls
Among the mountains, and thy song is fed
By living springs far up the watershed.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Wordsworth.

11
What hadst thou that could make such large amends

For all thou hadst not, and thy peers possessed,

Motion and fire, swift means to radiant ends?
Thou hadst, for weary feet, the gift of rest.

WILLIAM WATSON, Wordsworth's Grave. Pt.
ii, st. 3.

No word-mosaic artificer, he sang
A lofty song of lowly weal and dole.

Right from the heart, right to the heart it sprang,
Or from the soul leapt instant to the soul.

WILLIAM WATSON, Wordsworth's Grave. Pt.
iii, st. 3.

12
He [Wordsworth] found in stones the sermons he had already hidden there.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself.

II—Work: Its Necessity

1 It is the first of all problems for a man to find out what kind of work he is to do in this universe.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Inaugural Address, Edinburgh, 2 April, 1866.

That which each can do best, none but his Maker can teach him.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

On bravely through the sunshine and the showers, Time hath his work to do, and we have ours.

EMERSON, The Man of Letters: Motto.

2 I must work the works of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no man can work.

New Testament: John, ix, 4.

Man goeth forth unto his work and to his labour until the evening.

Old Testament: Psalms, civ, 23.

3 Hear ye not the hum of mighty workings?

KEATS, Sonnet. No. xiv.

4 Heirs of more than royal race,
Framed by heaven's peculiar grace
God's own work to do on earth!

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Palm Sunday.

5 My new-cut ashlar takes the light
Where crimson-blank the windows flare;
By my own work, before the night,
Great Overseer, I make my prayer.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Dedication.

Father, I scarcely dare to pray,
So clear I see, now it is done,

How I have wasted half my day,
And left my work but just begun.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, A Last Prayer.

6 But till we are built like angels—with hammer and chisel and pen,
We will work for ourself and a woman, for ever and ever, amen.

RUDYARD KIPLING, An Imperial Rescript.

This we learned from famous men,
Knowing not its uses,
When they showed, in daily work,
Man must finish off his work—
Right or wrong, his daily work—
And without excuses.

RUDYARD KIPLING, A School Song.

7 The Sons of Mary seldom bother, for they have inherited that good part;
But the Sons of Martha favour their Mother of the careful soul and the troubled
heart.

And because she lost her temper once, and because she was rude to the Lord her Guest,
Her Sons must wait upon Mary's Sons, world without end, reprieve, or rest.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Sons of Martha. St. 1.

And the Sons of Mary smile and are blessed—they know the angels are on their side.

They know in them is the Grace confessed, and for them are the Mercies multiplied.

They sit at the Feet—they hear the Word—they see how truly the Promise runs.

They have cast their burden upon the Lord, and —the Lord He lays it on Martha's Sons!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Sons of Martha. St. 8.

And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful; and Mary has chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

New Testament: Luke, x, 41, 42.

8 Each morning sees some task begin,
Each evening sees it close;

Something attempted, something done,
Has earned a night's repose.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Village Blacksmith.

9 No man is born into the world whose work
Is not born with him; there is always work,
And tools to work withal, for those who will.

J. R. LOWELL, A Glance Behind the Curtain,
l. 202.

10 The field, the wheel, the desk have called once
more,

And we have stooped to pick the slender threads

By which we weave the patterns of our pride.
SCUDDER MIDDLETON, Jezebel.

11 Man hath his daily work of body or mind Appointed.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 618.

12 The work of the world must still be done,
And minds are many though truth be one.

HENRY NEWBOLT, The Echo.

13 Establish thou the work of our hands upon us: yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

Old Testament: Psalms, xc, 17.

14 Work, as though work alone thine end could gain;

But pray to God as though all work were vain.

D'ARCY WENTWORTH THOMPSON, Sales Attici.

15 O men, the greatest part of our work is accomplished; away with all fear as to what remains. (Maxima res effecta, viri; timor omnis abesto Quod superest.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 14.

III—Work: A Blessing

See also Labor: A Blessing

16 It is work which gives flavor to life.

AMIEL, Journal, 21 March, 1881.

1
Don't worry and fret, faint-hearted,
The chances have just begun,
For the best jobs haven't been started,
The best work hasn't been done.
BERTON BRALEY, No Chance.

2
Get leave to work
In this world,—'tis the best you get at all.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii, l. 164.

Free men freely work:
Whoever fears God, fears to sit at ease.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. viii, l. 784.

Man's work is to labour and leaven—
As best he may—earth here with heaven;
'Tis work for work's sake that he's needing.
ROBERT BROWNING, Of Pacchiarotto. St. 21.

4
Work is a grand cure for all the maladies and miseries that ever beset mankind—honest work, which you intend getting done.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Inaugural Address, Edinburgh, 2 April, 1866.

Genuine Work alone, what thou workest faithfully, that is eternal, as the Almighty Founder and World-Builder himself.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

All work . . . is noble; work is alone noble.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

The "wages" of every noble work do yet lie in Heaven or else nowhere.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 12.

5
The best worship, however, is stout working.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to His Wife.

The glory of a workman, still more of a master-workman, that he does his work well, ought to be his most precious possession; like the "honour of a soldier" dearer to him than life.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Shooting Niagara. Sec. 7.

6
Work, and your house shall be duly fed:

Work, and rest shall be won;

I hold that a man had better be dead
Than alive when his work is done.

ALICE CARY, Work.

Work and thou wilt bless the day
Ere the toil be done;

They that work not, can not pray,
Can not feel the sun.

God is living, working still,
All things work and move;
Work, or lose the power to will,
Lose the power to love.

J. S. DWIGHT, Working.

7
Honor lies in honest toil.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomination for President, 18 August, 1884.

8
Night and day! night and day!

Sound the song the hours rehearse!
Work and play! work and play!
The order of the universe.

JOHN DAVIDSON, Piper, Play.

Give me simple laboring folk,
Who love their work,
Whose virtue is a song
To cheer God along.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.

9
There is no substitute for hard work.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

As a cure for worrying, work is better than whiskey.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Interview on Prohibition.

Hard work is the best investment a man can make.

C. M. SCHWAB, Ten Commandments of Success.

10
The high prize of life, the crowning fortune of a man, is to be born with a bias to some pursuit, which finds him in employment and happiness.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Truly, one thing is sweet

Of things beneath the Sun;

This, that a man should earn his bread and eat,
Rejoicing in his work which he hath done.

JOSEPHINE PRESTON PEABODY, The Singing Man.

11
I look on that man as happy, who, when there is question of success, looks into his work for a reply.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Too busy with the crowded hour to fear to live or die.

EMERSON, Quatrains: Nature.

The sum of wisdom is, that the time is never lost that is devoted to work.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success.

12
The gods sell us all good things for hard work.

(Τῶν πόνων πωλοῦσιν ἡμῖν πάντα τὰγαθὰ θεοί.) EPICHRMUS. (XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk.
ii, ch. 1, sec. 20.)

To generous souls, every task is noble. (Φεῖ τοῖσι γενναίοισιν ὡς ἅπαν καλόν.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. (NAUCK, p. 671.)

14
Our best friend is ever work. (Notre meilleur ami, c'est encor le travail.)

COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, Mœurs du Jour, i, 4.

15
Your work and labour of love.

New Testament: Hebrews, vi, 10.

And only the Master shall praise us, and only the Master shall blame;
And no one shall work for money, and no one shall work for fame;

But each for the joy of the working, and each,
in his separate star,
Shall draw the Thing as he sees It, for the God of Things as They Are!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Seven Seas: L'Envoi.

1 He that works after his own manner, his head aches not at the matter.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

If you work for yourself you do it for your own amusement, which is all right; if you work for others, you reap nothing but ingratitude.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, Waiter, A Bock.

Work is something you want to get done; play is something you just like to be doing.

HARRY LEON WILSON, The Spenders, p. 26.

2 Any man who has a job has a chance.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

3 Wit can spin from work a golden robe
To queen it in.

JEAN INGELow, Gladys and Her Island.

4 Every child should be taught that useful work is worship and that intelligent labor is the highest form of prayer.

R. G. INGERSOLL, How to Reform Mankind.

5 If you will let me, I will wish you in your future what all men desire—enough work to do, and strength enough to do your work.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Address to Medical Students, 1908.

6 But finding ample recompense
For life's ungarlanded expense

In work done squarely and unwasted days.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm.

7 In the morning, when thou art sluggish at rousing, let this thought be present: "I am rising to a man's work." (Ἐπὶ ἀνδρῶν ἔργον ἐγείρομαι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 1.

Give us this day our daily work.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 51.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues which the idle will never know.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Town and Country Sermons.

8 The sick man is not to be pitied who has a remedy in his sleeve. (Le malade n'est pas à plaindre, qui a la guérison en sa manche.) i.e., his arm, capable of work.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

9 Work is the sustenance of noble minds. (Ge-

For men must work, and women must weep,
And there's little to earn, and many to keep,
Though the harbour bar be moaning.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Three Fishers. St. 1.

For men must work, and women must weep,
And the sooner it's over the sooner to sleep;

And good-bye to the bar and its moaning.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Three Fishers. St. 3.

1 Who first invented work, and bound the free
And holy-day rejoicing spirit down
To the ever-haunting importunity
Of business? . . . Sabbathless Satan!

CHARLES LAMB, Sonnet: Work. See also under BUSINESS.

2 Hard toil can roughen form and face,
And want can quench the eye's bright grace.
WALTER SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 28.

3 Work is not a good. Then what is a good? The scorning of work. (Labor bonum non est.
Quid ergo est bonum? Laboris contemptio.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxi, 4.

4 As for work, we haven't any of consequence.
We have the Saint Vitus' dance, and cannot possibly keep our heads still.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 2.

5 The more we work, the more we may;
It makes no difference to our pay.

UNKNOWN, We Are the Royal Sappers. British war song, 1915.

6 Let us be grateful to Adam, our benefactor.
He cut us out of the "blessing" of idleness and won for us the "curse" of labor.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

I—World: Definitions

7 The world is a great poem, and the world's
The words it is writ in, and we souls the thoughts.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Everywhere.

8 The created world is but a small parenthesis in eternity.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 29.

The world was made to be inhabited by beasts,
but studied and contemplated by man.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 16.

The world to me is but a dream or mock-show, and we all therein but Pantaloons and Antics, to my severer contemplations.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 50.

For the world, I count it not an inn, but an hospital, and a place, not to live, but to die in.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, par. 12. See also LIFE: AN INN.

9 The severe schools shall never laugh me out of the philosophy of Hermes, that this visible world is but a picture of the invisible, wherein, as in a portrait, things are not truly, but in equivocal shapes, and as they counterfeit some more real substance in that invisible fabric.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 15.

Hath this world, without me wrought,
Other substance than my thought?
Lives it by my sense alone,
Or by essence of its own?

FREDERIC HENRY HEDGE, Questionings.

The visible world is but man turned inside out that he may be revealed to himself.

HENRY JAMES THE ELDER. (J. A. KELLOG, Digest of the Philosophy of Henry James.)

This outer world is but the pictured scroll

Of worlds within the soul;

A coloured chart, a blazoned missal-book,

Whereon who rightly look

May spell the splendours with their mortal eyes,
And steer to Paradise.

ALFRED NOYES, The Two Worlds.

My God, I would not live
Save that I think this gross hard-seeming world
Is our misshaping vision of the Powers
Behind the world, that make our griefs our gains.

TENNYSON, The Sisters, l. 223.

The true mystery of the world is the visible, not the invisible.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 2.

10 What, in fact, is the world? A glass which shines,

Which a breath has made, and which a breath can destroy.

(Quel est-il en effet? C'est un verre qui luit, Qu'un souffle a produit, et qu'un souffle peut détruire.)

GILLES DE CAUX, L'Horloge de Sable. (D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature.)

11 The world is a wheel, and it will all come round right.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 70.

12 The world is a divine dream, from which we may presently awake to the glories and certainities of day.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Spirit.

The existing world is not a dream, and cannot with impunity be treated as a dream; neither is it a disease; but it is the ground on which you stand, it is the mother of whom you were born.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: The Conservative.

13 Our Copernican globe is a great factory or shop of power, with its rotating constellations, times, and tides.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Resources.

The world is a proud place, peopled with men of positive quality, with heroes and demigods standing around us, who will not let us sleep.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plutarch.

<sup>1</sup> This world's a city, full of straying streets,
And death's the market place, where each one meets.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Two Noble Kinsmen.
Act i, sc. 5.

This world's a city full of crooked streets,
Death's the market-place where all men meet;
If life were merchandise that men should buy,
The rich would always live, the poor might die.
UNKNOWN, Epitaph to John Gadsden (d.
1739), at Stoke Goldington, England. (SUF-FLING, Epitaphia, p. 401.)

<sup>2</sup> The world is a ladder for some to go up and some down.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4841. From the Italian, "Il mondo è fatto a scale, Chi le scende, e chi le sale."

<sup>3</sup> The world is a beautiful book, but of little use to him who cannot read it. (Il mondo è un bel libro, ma poco serve a chi non lo sa leggere.)

GOLDONI, Pamela. Act i, sc. 14.

The world is woman's book. (Le monde est le livre des femmes.)

ROUSSEAU.

<sup>4</sup> The world is nothing but vanity cut out into several shapes.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 240.

<sup>5</sup> 'The world!—it is a wilderness,
Where tears are hung on every tree.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 13.

<sup>6</sup> There are two worlds; the world that we can measure with line and rule, and the world that we feel with our hearts and imaginations.

LEIGH HUNT, Men, Women, and Books: Fiction and Matter-of-Fact.

<sup>7</sup> The world, in its best state, is nothing more than a larger assembly of beings, combining to counterfeit happiness which they do not feel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 120.

<sup>8</sup> The world is a nettle; disturb it, it stings.
Grasp it firmly, it stings not.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto 3, sec. 2.

Let any man once show the world that he feels
Afraid of its bark, and 'twill fly at his heels:
Let him fearlessly face it, 'twill leave him alone:
But 'twill fawn at his feet if he flings it a bone.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto 2, st. 7.
See also BOLDNESS: ITS VIRTUES.

<sup>9</sup> The world is but a perpetual see-saw. (Le monde n'est qu'une bransloire perenne.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2.

<sup>10</sup> This world is all a fleeting show,
For man's illusion given;
The smiles of joy, the tears of woe,

Deceitful shine, deceitful flow,—
There's nothing true but Heaven!

THOMAS MOORE, This World Is All a Fleeting Show.

<sup>11</sup> The world is not a "prison house" but a kind of spiritual kindergarten where millions of bewildered infants are trying to spell God with the wrong blocks.

E. A. ROBINSON, Letter to the Bookman, 1896.

<sup>12</sup> The world is a looking glass, and gives back to every man the reflection of his own face.
Frown at it and it will in turn look sourly upon you; laugh at it and with it, and it is a jolly kind companion.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 2.

The world is a mirror of infinite beauty, yet no man sees it. It is a Temple of Majesty, yet no man regards it. It is a region of Light and Peace, did not men disquiet it. It is the Paradise of God.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.

<sup>13</sup> The world is but a frozen kind of gas,
A transient ice we sport on, where, alas!
Diverted by the pictures in the glass,
We heed not the Realities that pass.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Idealist.

<sup>14</sup> What is this world? A net to snare the soul.

GEORGE WHEATSTONE, The World.

<sup>15</sup> The world is a comedy to those who think, a tragedy to those who feel.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Sir Horace Mann,
31 Dec., 1769.

<sup>16</sup> The world's a prophecy of worlds to come.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 16.

<sup>17</sup> What a dark world—who knows?—
Ours to inhabit is!

One touch and what a strange

Glory might burst on us,

What a hid universe!

ISRAEL ZANGWILL, Blind Children.

<sup>18</sup> The world, the flesh, and the devil.
Book of Common Prayer: Litany.

<sup>19</sup> A Mad World, My Masters.

NICHOLAS BRETON. Title of dialogue. (1603);

THOMAS MIDDLETON. Title of play. (1608)

'Tis a mad world (my masters) and in sadness
I travail'd madly in these days of madness.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Wandering to See the Wonders of the World. (1649)

Mad world! mad kings! mad composition!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 561.

<sup>20</sup> The world, which took but six days to make,
is like to take six thousand to make out.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii,
sec. 5.

<sup>1</sup> Without, or with, offence to friends or foes,
I sketch your world exactly as it goes.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto viii, st. 89.

<sup>2</sup> I value not the world a button.
SUSANNAH CENTILVRE, The Wonder. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>3</sup> A world where nothing is had for nothing.
ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, The Bothie of Tober-na-Vuolich. Sec. 8, l. 5.

<sup>4</sup> The world, like an accomplished hostess, pays most attention to those whom it will soonest forget.
CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

<sup>5</sup> Such stuff the world is made of.
COWPER, Hope, l. 211.

'Tis pleasant through the loop-holes of retreat
To peep at such a world; to see the stir
Of the great Babel, and not feel the crowd.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 88.

<sup>6</sup> And for the few that only lend their ear,
That few is all the world.
SAMUEL DANIEL, Musophilus. St. 97.

There was all the world and his wife.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

How he welcomes at once all the world and his
wife,
And how civil to folk he ne'er saw in his life!
CHRISTOPHER ANSTEY, New Bath Guide, 130.
(1766)

<sup>7</sup> Come, follow me, and leave the world to its babblings. (Vien dietro a me, e lascia dir le genti.)
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto v, l. 13.

<sup>8</sup> Behold the world, how it is whirl'd round,
And for it is so whirl'd is named so.
SIR JOHN DAVIES, Orchestra. St. 34.

<sup>9</sup> What a world of gammon and spinnage it is,
though, ain't it?
DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 22.

<sup>10</sup> I am a citizen of the world.
DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. vi, sec. 63.) See under COSMOPOLITANISM.

<sup>11</sup> We must see that the world is rough and surlly.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.
The world is always equal to itself.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

<sup>12</sup> The world is too narrow for two fools a quarrelling.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4844.

This world surely is wide enough to hold both thee and me.
LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii,
ch. 12.

I have my beauty,—you your Art—
Nay, do not start:
One world was not enough for two
Like me and you.
OSCAR WILDE, Her Voice.

<sup>13</sup> It moves, nevertheless! (E pur si muove!)

GALILEO. A phrase which he is said to have whispered to a friend as he rose from signing his recantation of his theory that "the sun is the centre of the universe, and immovable, and that the earth moves." (1615) Von Gebler (Galileo Galilei and the Roman Curia) doubts that he ever uttered them. Generally considered apocryphal.

Does the world go round?
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 232.

Roll on, thou ball, roll on Through pathless realms of space,
Roll on! [It rolls on.]
W. S. GILBERT, To the Terrestrial Globe.

Long and long has the grass been growing,
Long and long has the rain been falling,
Long has the globe been rolling round.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Exposition. Pt. i.

<sup>14</sup> Creation's heir, the world, the world is mine!
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 50.

<sup>15</sup> If the world were good for nothing else, it is a fine subject for speculation.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 108.

To understand the world, and to like it, are two things not easily to be reconciled.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 230.

FRANCIS BACON, The World.

6 Happy the man who . . . gets acquainted with the world early enough to make it his bubble, at an age when most people are the bubbles of the world!

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 May, 1751.

7 Or may I think when toss'd in trouble,
This world at best is but a bubble.

MICHAEL MOOR, Bubbles.

8 The pleasure, honour, wealth of sea and land
Bring but a trouble;

The world itself, and all the world's command
Is but a bubble.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 6.

My soul, what's lighter than a feather? Wind.
Than wind? The fire. And what than fire? The mind.

What's lighter than the mind? A thought. Than thought?

This bubble world. What than this bubble?
Nought.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 4. See also under WOMAN: HER FICKLENESS.

9 The world is full of care, and much like unto a bubble;

Women and care and care and women, and women and care and trouble.

10 God is the author, men are only the players.
These grand pieces which are played upon earth have been composed in heaven. (Dieu est le poète, les hommes ne sont que les acteurs. Ces grandes pièces qui se jouent sur la terre ont été composées dans le ciel.)

BALZAC, Socrate Chrétien.

11 All our pride is but a jest;
None are worst and none are best;
Grief and joy, and hope and fear
Play their pageants everywhere:
Vain opinion all doth sway,
And the world is but a play.

THOMAS CAMPION, *Song: Whether Men Do
Laugh or Weep*.

12 The world's a stage where God's omnipotence,
His justice, knowledge, love and providence,
Do act the parts.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 1.

I take the world to be but as a stage,
Where net-masked men do play their personage.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes: Dialogue Between Heraclitus and Democritus.

Pythagoras said that this world was like a stage, Whereon many play their parts; the lookers-on the sage

Philosophers are, saith he, whose part is to learn
The manners of all nations, and the good from the bad to discern.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pythias.

13 If this world be a stage, what hours we give
To tedious make-up in the tiring-room.

JOHN ERSKINE, At the Front. Sonnet iii.

14 Shall I speak truly what I now see below?
The World is all a carcass, smoke and vanity,
The shadow of a shadow, a play
And in one word, just Nothing.

OWEN FELLTEAM, Resolves. (1696) A paraphrase of the Latin lines said to have been left by Lipsius, to be inscribed on his tomb.

<sup>1</sup> The world's a theatre, the earth a stage,
Which God and nature do with actors fill.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Author to His Book.

<sup>2</sup> The world's a stage,—as Shakespeare said,
one day;

The stage a world—was what he meant to say.

O. W. HOLMES, Prologue, l. 9.

There is that smaller world which is the stage,
and that larger stage which is the world.

ISAAC GOLDBERG, The Theatre of George Jean Nathan, p. 3.

<sup>3</sup> The world's a stage on which all parts are played.

MIDDLETON, A Game of Chess. Act v, sc. 2.

<sup>4</sup> Is it not a noble farce wherein kings, republics, and emperors have for so many ages played their parts, and to which the vast universe serves for a theatre?

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 36.

All the world must practice stage-playing. We must play our parts duly.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

<sup>5</sup> I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano;
A stage where every man must play a part.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 77.

All the world's a stage.

And all the men and women merely players:

They have their exits and their entrances;

And one man in his time plays many parts,

His acts being seven ages. At first the infant,

Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms.

And then the whining school-boy, with his satchel

And shining morning face, creeping like snail

Unwillingly to school. And then the lover,

Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad

Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier,

Full of strange oaths and bearded like the pard,

Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel,

Seeking the bubble reputation

Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the justice,

In fair round belly with good capon lined,

With eyes severe and beard of formal cut,

Full of wise saws and modern instances;

And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts

Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloon,

With spectacles on nose and pouch on side,

His youthful hose, well saved, a world too wide

For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice,

Turning again toward childish treble, pipes

And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all,

That ends this strange eventful history,

Is second childishness and mere oblivion,

Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans every thing.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l.
139.

The child, who by now can utter words and set firm step upon the ground, delights to play with his mates, flies into a passion and as lightly puts it aside, and changes every hour. The beardless youth, freed at last from his tutor, finds joy in horses and hounds and the grass of the sunny Campus, soft as wax for moulding to evil, peevish with his counsellors, slow to make needful provision, lavish of money, spirited, of strong desires, but swift to change his fancies. With altered aims, the age and spirit of the man seeks wealth and friends, becomes a slave to ambition.

. . . Many ills encompass an old man; . . . he lacks fire and courage, is dilatory and slow to form hopes.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 158.

<sup>6</sup> Almost the whole world are players. (Quod fere totus mundus exerceat histrionem.)

Motto over the Door of Shakespeare's Theatre, the Globe, Bankside, London. An adaptation from Petronius. (Frag. 10.)

They are a nation of actors. (Natio comæda est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 100. Of the Greeks.

<sup>7</sup> In this playhouse of infinite forms I have had my play.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, Gitanjali. No. 96.

<sup>8</sup> Life's little stage is a small eminence,

Inch-high the grave above.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 360.

V—World: Its Beauty and Happiness

<sup>9</sup> O world, as God has made it! All is beauty:
And knowing this, is love, and love is duty.

What further may be sought for or declared?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Guardian-Angel.

However, you're a man, you've seen the world—

The beauty and the wonder and the power,

The shapes of things, their colours, lights and shades,

Changes, surprises—and God made it all!

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi, l. 276.

This world's no blot for us,

Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good:

To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi, l. 313.

<sup>10</sup> I say the world is lovely
And that loveliness is enough.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Artist and Model.

<sup>11</sup> The world is good in the lump.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Torrent.
Act i, sc. 2.

<sup>12</sup> Of this fair volume which we World do name,
If we the sheets and leaves could turn with care,

Of him who it corrects, and did it frame,

We clear might read the art and wisdom rare.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, The Book of the World.

Let the great book of the world be your serious study; read it over and over, get it by heart, adopt its style, and make it your own.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

1
For the world is not painted or adorned, but is from the beginning beautiful; and God has not made some beautiful things, but Beauty is the creator of the universe.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

2
I found many who were continually wishing for beauty. I went to them with a sunset and a spray of mist, but they had already contented themselves in a shop with little painted candlesticks.

CHARLOTTE HARDIN, Coins and Medals.

It is not accident that wherever we point the telescope we see beauty, that wherever we look with the microscope there we find beauty. It beats in through every nook and cranny of the mighty world.

RUFUS M. JONES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God,
p. 61.)

The world is not respectable; it is mortal, tormented, confused, deluded for ever; but is shot through with beauty, with love, with glints of courage and laughter; and in these the spirit blooms timidly, and struggles to the light among the thorns.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Platonism and the Spiritual Life.

3
There's too much beauty upon this earth
For lonely men to bear.

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Ballad of Too Much Beauty.

Oh, what a glory doth this world put on
For him who, with a fervent heart, goes forth
Under the bright and glorious sky, and looks
On duties well performed, and days well spent!

LONGFELLOW, Autumn, l. 30.

Glorious indeed is the world of God around us,
but more glorious the world of God within us.
There lies the Land of Song; there lies the poet's native land.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 8.

5
This world is full of beauty, as other worlds
above;
And, if we did our duty, it might be full of love.

GERALD MASSEY, This World Is Full of Beauty.

6
O world, I cannot hold thee close enough!
EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, God's World.

The world stands out on either side
No wider than the heart is wide;
Above the world is stretched the sky,—
No higher than the soul is high.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Renascence.

7
An idle poet, here and there
Looks round him, but for all the rest,
The world, unfathomably fair,
Is duller than a witling's jest.

COVENTRY PATMORE, The Revelation.

8
The world is full of poetry—the air

Is living with its spirit; and the waves
Dance to the music of its melodies.

J. G. PERCIVAL, The Prevalence of Poetry.

9
Great, wide, beautiful, wonderful World,
With the wonderful water round you curled,
And the wonderful grass upon your breast,
World, you are beautifully dressed.

W. B. RANDS, The Wonderful World.

10
The whole world is the temple of the immortal gods. (Totum mundum Deorum esse immortalium templum.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 7.

11
The world is such a happy place,
That children, whether big or small,
Should always have a smiling face,
And never, never sulk at all.

GABRIEL SETOUN, The World's Music.

The world is so full of a number of things,
I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings.

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Happy Thought.

12
The world was never less beautiful though viewed through a chink or knothole.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 16 Jan., 1838.

I swear the earth shall surely be complete to him or her who shall be complete,
The earth remains jagged and broken only to him or her who remains jagged and broken.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Rolling Earth.
Pt. iii.

14
Not in Utopia, subterranean fields,
Or some secreted island, Heaven knows where!
But in the very world, which is the world
Of all of us,—the place where in the end
We find our happiness, or not at all!

WORDSWORTH, French Revolution, l. 36.

VI—World: Its Ugliness and Misery

15
This restless world
Is full of chances, which by habit's power
To learn to bear is easier than to shun.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. ii, l. 453.

16
It's a weary world, and nobody bides in 't.
J. M. BARRIE, The Little Minister. Ch. 4.

A brave world, sir, full of religion, knavery, and change! We shall shortly see better days.

APHRA BEHN, The Roundheads. Act i, sc. 1.

17
This bad, twisted, topsy-turvy world,
Where all the heaviest wrongs get uppermost.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 981.

18
This world has been harsh and strange;
Something is wrong: there needeth a change.

ROBERT BROWNING, Holy-Cross Day.

- <sup>1</sup>
The world is naturally averse
To all the truth it sees or hears,
But swallows nonsense, and a lie,
With greediness and gluttony.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 2, l. 805.
- <sup>2</sup>
'Tis but a worthless world to win or lose.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 40.
The world is full of strange vicissitudes.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 51.
Well, my deliberate opinion is—it's a jolly strange world.
ARNOLD BENNETT, The Title. Act i.
- <sup>3</sup>
Ah, World of ours, are you so grey
And weary, World, of spinning,
That you repeat the tales today
You told at the beginning?
For lo! the same old myths that made
The early "stage-successes,"
Still "hold the boards," and still are played,
"With new effects and dresses."
AUSTIN DOBSON, The Drama of the Doctor's Window.
- <sup>4</sup>
Good-bye, proud world! I'm going home.
I am going to my own hearth-stone,
Bosomed in yon green hills alone,— . . .
A spot that is sacred to thought and God.
EMERSON, Good-Bye.
- <sup>5</sup>
For every worldes thing is vain,
And ever go'th the wheel about. . . .
Now here, now there, now to, now fro,
Now up, now down, the world go'th so,
And ever hath done and ever shall.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis: Prologue, l. 560.
- So go'th the world; now woe, now weal.
JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. viii.
Well—well, the world must turn upon its axis,
And all mankind turn with it, heads or tails,
And live and die, make love and pay our taxes,
And as the veering wind shifts, shift our sails.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 4.
- <sup>6</sup>
The world is with me, and its many cares,
Its woes—its wants—the anxious hopes and fears
That wait on all terrestrial affairs— . . .
Heavens! what a wilderness the earth appears,
Where Youth, and Mirth, and Health are out of date!
THOMAS HOOD, Sonnet.
- <sup>7</sup>
We live together in a world that is bursting with sin and sorrow.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. i, p. 301.
The world's as ugly, ay, as Sin,—
And almost as delightful.
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, The Jester's Plea.
- <sup>8</sup>
Yes, Heaven is thine; but this

- Is a world of sweets and sour;
Our flowers are merely—flowers,
And the shadow of thy perfect bliss
Is the sunshine of ours.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Israfel.
- <sup>9</sup>
O what a crocodilian world is this!
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 4.
O who would trust this world, or prize what's in it,
That gives and takes, and chops and changes every minute.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i, No. 9.
- <sup>10</sup>
O how full of briars is this working-day world!
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 3, l. 12.
How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable,
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 133.
Would I were dead! if God's good will were so:
For what is in this world but grief and woe?
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 19.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 365.
The world is grown so bad,
That wrens make prey where eagles dare not perch.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 70.
- <sup>11</sup>
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law;
The world affords no law to make thee rich;
Then be not poor, but break it.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 72.
Ah, how the poor world is pestered with such waterflies, diminutives of nature.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 1, l. 37.
- <sup>12</sup>
A maniac world,
Homeless and sobbing through the deep she goes.
ALEXANDER SMITH, Unrest and Childhood.
- <sup>13</sup>
Meseems the world is run quite out of square
From the first point of his appointed source;
And being once amiss grows daily worse and worse.
SPENSER, The Faerie Queene: Bk. v, Introduction. St. 1.
- <sup>14</sup>
Strange the world about me lies
Never yet familiar grown—
Still disturbs me with surprise,
Haunts me like a face half known.
In this house with starry dome,
Floored with gem-like plains and seas,
Shall I never feel at home,
Never wholly be at ease?
WILLIAM WATSON, World-Strangeness.
- <sup>15</sup>
When the fretful stir
Unprofitable, and the fever of the world

Have hung upon the beatings of my heart.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 52.

1 Let not the cooings of the world allure thee:
Which of her lovers ever found her true?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1272.

VII—World: Knowledge Of, Worldliness

2 The more a man drinketh of the world, the more it intoxicateth.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age.

3 He sees that this great roundabout,
The world, with all its motley rout,

Church, army, physic, law,
Its customs and its businesses,

Is no concern at all of his,
And says—what says he?—Caw.

VINCENT BOURNE, The Jackdaw. (Cowper, tr.)

4 Worldly in this world,
I take and like its way of life.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Of the world most worldly, who never compromised himself by an ungentelemanly action, and was never guilty of a manly one.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 25.

5 Such is the world. Understand it, despise it, love it; cheerfully hold on thy way through it, with thy eye on highest loadstars!

CARLYLE, Essays: Count Cagliostro.

The true Sovereign of the world, who moulds the world like soft wax, according to his pleasure, is he who lovingly sees into the world.

CARLYLE, Essays: Death of Goethe.

6 Knowledge of the world is to be acquired only in the world, not in the closet.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 4 Oct., 1746.

The world is a country which no one yet ever knew by description; one must travel through it oneself to be acquainted with it. . . . Courts and camps are the only places to learn the world in.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.

The preposterous notions of a systematical man who does not know the world, tire the patience of a man who does.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 May, 1753.

7 The world is a lively place enough, in which we must accommodate ourselves to circumstances, sail with the stream as glibly as we can, be content to take froth for substance, the surface for the depth, the counterfeit for the real coin.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 12.

8 Map me no maps, sir; my head is a map, a map of the whole world.

FIELDING, Rape upon Rape. Act i, sc. 5.

Geographers crowd into the outer edges of their maps the parts of the world which they know nothing about, adding a note, "What lies beyond is sandy desert full of wild beasts," or "blind marsh," or "Scythian cold," or "frozen sea."

PLUTARCH, Lives: Theseus. Ch. i, sec. 1.

So geographers, in Afric maps,
With savage pictures fill their gaps,
And o'er unhabitable downs
Place elephants for want of towns.

SWIFT, Poetry, a Rhapsody.

9 Unworldliness based on knowledge of the world is the finest thing on earth; but unworldliness based on ignorance of the world is less admirable.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 172.)

10 To know the world is necessary, . . . and to know it early is convenient, if it be only that we may learn early to despise it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 80.

The world will, in the end, follow only those who have despised as well as served it.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 365.

11 That observation which is called knowledge of the world will be found much more frequently to make men cunning than good.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 4.

12 If there is one beast in all the loathsome fauna of civilization I hate and despise, it is a man of the world.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES, The Liars. Act i.

Man of the World (for such wouldst thou be call'd)—

And art thou proud of that inglorious style?

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 8.

Long ago a man of the world was defined as a man who in every serious crisis is invariably wrong.

UNKNOWN, Armageddon—and After. (Fortnightly Review, Nov., 1914, p. 736.)

13 For to admire an' for to see,
For to be'old this world so wide—

It never done no good to me,
But I can't drop it if I tried!

RUDYARD KIPLING, "For to Admire."

14 A man may know the world without leaving his own home.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 47.

15 If all the world must see the world
As the world the world hath seen,
Then it were better for the world
That the world had never been.

C. G. LELAND, The World and the World.

16 Be wisely worldly, be not worldly wise.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, No. 2.

<sup>1</sup> Here's three on 's are sophisticated!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 111.

<sup>2</sup> You have too much respect upon the world:
They lose it that do buy it with much care.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 74.

The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers.
WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i,
No. 33.

<sup>3</sup> The world, well known, will give our hearts to Heaven,
Or make us demons, long before we die.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 379.
To know the world, not love her, is thy point.
She gives but little, nor that little, long.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1276.

MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity,
l. 120.

In his hand
He took the golden compasses, prepar'd
In God's eternal store, to circumscribe
This universe, and all created things:
One foot he centred, and the other turn'd
Round through the vast profundity obscure,
And said, "Thus far extend, thus far thy bounds,
This be thy just circumference, O World."
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 224.

Open, ye heavens, your living doors; let in

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

9 Tell me, sweet lord, what is 't that takes from thee

Thy stomach, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 43.

Some strange commotion
Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground,
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard, and anon he casts
His eye against the moon.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 112.

10 'Gainst minor evils let him pray,

11 He wales a portion with judicious care,
And "Let us worship God!" he says, with solemn air.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 12.

12 Worship is transcendent wonder.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture 1.

Man always worships something: always he sees the Infinite shadowed forth in something finite; and indeed can and must so see it in any finite thing, once tempt him well to fix his eyes thereon.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe's Works.

Yet, if he would, man cannot live all to this world. If not religious, he will be superstitious. If he worship not the true God, he will have his idols.

THEODORE PARKER, A Lesson for the Day.

13 And what greater calamity can fall upon a nation than the loss of worship.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: An Address at Cambridge, 15 July, 1838.

14 They that worship God merely from fear,
Would worship the devil too, if he appear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6419.

15 The various modes of worship which prevailed in the Roman world were all considered by the people as equally true; by the philosopher as equally false; and by the magistrate as equally useful.

dolence. (Paulum sepultæ distat inertie Celata virtus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 29.

15 Slow rises worth, by poverty depress'd:
But here more slow, where all are slaves to gold,
Where looks are merchandise, and smiles are sold.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 177.

16 Life is continually weighing us in very sensitive scales, and telling every one of us precisely what his real weight is to the last grain of dust.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscle trained: know'st thou when Fate

Thy measure takes, or when she'll say to thee,
"I find thee worthy; do this deed for me"?

J. R. LOWELL, Sayings.

17 Ye are worth thy weight of gold.

I—Writing: Definitions

<sup>4</sup> Writing is not literature unless it gives to the reader a pleasure which arises not only from the things said, but from the way in which they are said.

STOPFORD A. BROOKE, Primer of English Literature.

That writer does the most, who gives his reader the most knowledge, and takes from him the least time.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Preface.

<sup>5</sup> Certainly the Age of Writing is the most miraculous of all things man has devised.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

With the art of Writing, of which Printing is a simple, an inevitable and comparatively insignificant corollary, the true reign of miracles for mankind commenced.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

<sup>6</sup> Miscellanists are the most popular writers among every people; for it is they who form a communication between the learned and the unlearned, and, as it were, throw a bridge between those two great divisions of the public.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius: Miscellanists.

There are two things which I am confident I can do very well: one is an introduction to any literary work, stating what it is to contain, and how it should be executed in the most perfect manner.

<sup>7</sup> All writing comes by the grace of God.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

No man can write anything who does not think that what he writes is, for the time, the history of the world.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

The nobler the truth or sentiment, the less imports the question of authorship.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

<sup>8</sup> All great men have written proudly, nor cared to explain. They knew that the intelligent reader would come at last, and would thank them.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Thoughts on Modern Literature.

<sup>9</sup> Composition is, for the most part, an effort of slow diligence and steady perseverance, to which the mind is dragged by necessity or resolution.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer. No. 138.

To write and to live are very different. Many who praise virtue do no more than praise it.

JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iii, p. 83. (Hawkins, ed.)

<sup>10</sup> If the works of the great poets teach anything, it is to hold mere invention somewhat cheap. It is not the finding of a thing, but the making something out of it after it is found, that is of consequence.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Chaucer.

<sup>11</sup> The art of the pen is to rouse the inward vision. . . . That is why the poets, who spring imagination with a word or a phrase, paint lasting pictures.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 15.

II—Writing: Apothegms

<sup>12</sup> With pen and with pencil we're learning to say

Nothing, more cleverly, every day.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

<sup>13</sup> The reason why so few good books are written, is that so few people who can write know anything.

BAGEHOT, Literary Studies: Shakespeare.

<sup>14</sup> The very dust of whose writings is gold.

RICHARD BENTLEY, On Phalaris. Referring to Bishop Pearson.

<sup>15</sup> And tell prose writers, stories are so stale,
That penny ballads have a better sale.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Pasquil. (1600)

<sup>16</sup> In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaister of the wall of the king's palace. . . . And this is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.

Old Testament: Daniel, v, 5, 25. Hence, "Writing on the wall."

1 When I want to read a book I write one.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Remark. Attributed to him in Blackwood's review of Lothair.

2 The lover of letters loves power too.
EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs.

3 Write with the learned, pronounce with the vulgar.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

4 Written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond.
Old Testament: Jeremiah, xvii, 1.

5 Oh that . . . mine adversary had written a book.
Old Testament: Job, xxxi, 35.

6 What I have written I have written.
New Testament: John, xix, 22. (Quod scripsi, scripsi.—Vulgate.) Pilate's reply to the priest who protested against the title, "Jesus of Nazareth the King of the Jews," which he had written and placed upon the cross.

7 A man may write at any time if he set himself doggedly to it.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1773.)

8 No man but a blockhead ever wrote except for money.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

As soon as any art is pursued with a view to money, then farewell, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, all hope of genuine good work.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 171.

A man starts upon a sudden, takes Pen, Ink, and Paper, and without ever having had a thought of it before, resolves within himself he will write a Book; he has no Talent at Writing, but he wants fifty Guineas.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 15.

The impulse to create beauty is rather rare in literary men. . . . Far ahead of it comes the yearning to make money. And after the yearning to make money comes the yearning to make a noise.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser v, p. 189.

9 No great work, or worthy of praise or memory, but came out of poor cradles.
BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Bonis et Malis.

10 Our literary masonry, nowadays, is well done, but our architecture is poor. (En littérature, aujourd'hui, on fait bien la maçonnerie, mais on fait mal l'architecture.)
JOURBERT, Pensées. No. 256.

11 Damn the age; I will write for antiquity.
CHARLES LAMB. (JERROLD, Bon Mots by Charles Lamb.)

12 He was the author, our hand finished it. (Invenit ille, nostra perfecit manus.)
PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. vi, l. 20.

Washington's Farewell Address was written by Alexander Hamilton. Andrew Jackson's famous proclamation on nullification, when South Carolina threatened to secede, was written by Edward Livingston. As a rule, however, Presidents have employed "ghost writers" only on the endless list of routine speeches their hard lot forced them to make. No President ever used this device to such a great extent as Coolidge.

CHARLES WILLIS THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p. 380.

13 I think this piece will help to boil thy pot.
JOHN WOLCOT, The Bard Complimenteth Mr. West on His "Lord Nelson". (c. 1790) The first recorded use of "pot-boiler" in this particular sense, though Sir Roger L'Estrange, in 1692, remarked in his Fables of Æsop, p. 305, that "Money makes the pot boil."

To employ them, as a literary man is always tempted, to keep the domestic pot a boiling.
J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 139.

14 A dedication is a wooden leg.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 192.

Presumption or meanness are both too often the only articles to be found in a preface.
GEORGE CRABBE, Inebriety: Preface.

III—Writing: The Matter

15 Write to the mind and heart, and let the ear Glean after what it can.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

What comes from the heart goes to the heart.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk. Of composition.

He that writes to himself writes to an eternal public.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Spiritual Laws.

16 'Tis mean for empty praise of wit to write, As fopplings grin to show their teeth are white.

JOHN BROWN, Essay on Satire. St. 2.

17 Not pickt from the leaves of any Author, but bred amongst the weeds and tares of mine own brain.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 36.

Some hold translations not unlike to be The wrong side of a Turkey tapestry.
JAMES HOWELL, Of Translations.

The greatest part of a writer's time is spent in reading, in order to write; a man will turn over half a library to make one book.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

What boots all your grist? it can never be ground

Till a breeze makes the arms of the windmill go round.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 83.

'Tis well to borrow from the good and great;
'Tis wise to learn; 'tis God-like to create!

JOHN GODFREY SAXE, The Library.

Let these describe the undescribable.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 53.

Choose a subject, ye who write, suited to your strength. (Sumite materiam vestris, qui scribitis, æquam Viribus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 38.

Dear authors! suit your topics to your strength,
And ponder well your subject and its length;
Nor lift your load, before you're quite aware
What weight your shoulders will, or will not,
bear.

BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 59.

Notes are often necessary, but they are necessary evils.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Shakespeare: Preface.

O thou sculptor, painter, poet!
Take this lesson to thy heart:

That is best which lieth nearest;
Shape from that thy work of art.

LONGFELLOW, Gaspar Becerra. St. 7.

It may be glorious to write

Thoughts that will glad the two or three High souls, like those far stars that come in sight

Once in a century;—

But better far it is to speak

One simple word, which now and then
Shall waken their free natures in the weak
And friendless sons of men.

J. R. LOWELL, An Incident in a Railroad Car.
St. 19.

Thou art the cause, O reader, that I write on lighter topics, when I would prefer serious ones. (Seria cum possim, quod delectantia malim Scribere, tu causa es lector.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 16, l. 1.

Authors hear at length one general cry,
Tickle and entertain us, or we die!

COWPER, Retirement, l. 707.

To write upon all is an author's sole chance
For attaining, at last, the least knowledge of any.

Thus, great with child to speak, and helpless
in my throes,
Biting my truant pen, beating myself for spite:

Fool! said my Muse to me, look in thy heart,
and write.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet i.

Look, then, into thine heart and write.

LONGFELLOW, Voices of the Night: Prelude.
St. 19.

"Give me a theme," the little poet cried—

"And I will do my part."

"'Tis not a theme you need," the world replied;
"You need a heart."

R. W. GILDER, Wanted: A Theme.

Authors—essayist, atheist, novelist, realist, rhymester, play your part,
Paint the mortal shame of nature with the living hues of art.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After,
l. 139.

IV—Writing: The Manner

See also Style; Words: Their Use

Thus I set pen to paper with delight,
And quickly had my thoughts in black and white.

For having now my method by the end,
Still as I pull'd it came; and so I penn'd
It down, until at last it came to be
For length and breadth the bigness which you see.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book.

Honest John [Bunyan] was the first that I know of who mixed narration and dialogue; a method of writing very engaging to the reader.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

How doth it make judicious readers smile,
When authors are detected by their style!
Though every one, who knows this author,
knows

He shifts his style much oftener than his clothes.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 140.

So that the jest is clearly to be seen,
Not in the words—but in the gap between:
Manner is all in all, whate'er is writ,
The substitute for genius, sense, and wit.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 540.

Though such continual zigzags in a book,
Such drunken reelings, have an awkward look.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 861. Condemning digressions.

By my rambling digressions I perceive myself to be grown old. I used to write more methodically. But one does not dress for private company as for a public ball.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

1 The ablest writer is a gardener first, and then a cook. His tasks are, carefully to select and cultivate his strongest and most nutritive thoughts, and, when they are ripe, to dress them wholesomely, and so that they may have a relish.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

2 And since, I never dare to write
As funny as I can.

O. W. HOLMES, The Height of the Ridiculous.

I can't write what I feel: I'm coarse, when terse.
DON MARQUIS, Savage Portraits.

3 Do not seek to render word for word, like a slavish translator. (Nec verbo verbum curabis reddere fidus Interpres.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 133.

4 Nothing is ended with honour which does not conclude better than it began.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 207.

5 Nothing is fashionable till it be deformed, and this is to write like a gentleman.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Vere Argutis.

6 In creating, the only hard thing's to begin; A grass-blade's no easier to make than an oak;

If you've once found the way, you've achieved the grand stroke.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 534.

The last thing one settles in writing a book is what one should put in first.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. i, No. 19.

7 Make 'em laugh; make 'em cry; make 'em wait.

CHARLES READE, Recipe for a Successful Novel.

8 It is ignoble to say one thing and mean another; how much more so to write one thing and mean another! (Turpe est aliud loqui, aliud sentire; quanto turpius aliud scribere, aliud sentire!)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiv, 19.

V—Writing: Good and Bad

9 This writing seemeth to me . . . not much better than that noise or sound which musicians make while they are in tuning their instruments; which is nothing pleasant to hear, but yet is a cause why the music is sweeter afterwards.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

10 It is scarcely possible for authors to be admired and at the same time to excel.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Præfatio.

He who pleases many must have some species of merit.

JOHNSON, Works, ii, 279. (Hawkins, ed.)

So must the writer, whose productions should Take with the vulgar, be of vulgar mood.

EDMUND WALLER, To Mr. Killigrew.

11 The weighty bullion of one sterling line,
Drawn to French wire, would thro' whole pages shine.

WENTWORTH DILLON, An Essay on Translated Verse.

12 Learn to write well, or not to write at all.
JOHN DRYDEN AND JOHN SHEFFIELD, An Essay Upon Satire, l. 281.

13 People do not deserve to have good writing, they are so pleased with bad.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vi, p. 132.

It is very hard to go beyond your public. If they are satisfied with your poor performance, you will not easily make it better.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 304.

14 Good writing is a kind of skating which carries off the performer where he would not go.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 334.

15 If you wish to be a good writer, write. ("Ἄν θέλῃς γραφικὸς εἶναι, γράφε.")

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 1.

Write something great. (Scribe aliquid magnū.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 107, l. 2.

16 Let us beware of writing too well; it is the worst possible manner of writing.

ANATOLE FRANCE. (COURNOS, Modern Plutarch, p. 29.)

17 Knowledge is the foundation and source of good writing. (Scribendi recte sapere est et principium et fons.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 309.

Sound judgment is the ground of writing well: And when philosophy directs your choice, To proper subjects rightly understood, Words from your pen will naturally flow.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 342. (Dillon, tr.)

18 The Dean could write finely upon a broomstick.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Life of Swift. When someone remarked that Vanessa must be an extraordinary woman to inspire Dean Swift to write so finely upon her.

19 It is the glory and merit of some men to write well, and of others not to write at all.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 1.

Whatever hath been written shall remain,
Nor be erased nor written o'er again;
The unwritten only still belongs to thee:
Take heed, and ponder well what that shall
be.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 168. See also WORDS: THEIR FINALITY.

2
In this manner of writing [prose], knowing myself inferior to myself . . . I have the use, as I may account, but of my left hand.

MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Bk.
ii, Introduction.

Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 16.

3
The p'int of good writing is knowing when to stop.

L. M. MONTGOMERY, Anne's House of Dreams.
Ch. 24.

4
Good sense must be the certain standard still
To all that will pretend to writing well.

JOHN OLDEHAM, An Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.

Of all those arts in which the wise excel,
Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, Essay on Poetry, l. 1.

Such was the Muse whose rules and practice tell
"Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well."

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 164. Referring to Buckingham.

5
While writing the very toil gives pleasure, and the growing work glows with the writer's heart. (Scribentem juvat ipse labor minuitque laborem, Cumque suo crescens pectore fervet opus.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 9, l. 21.

A fever in these pages burns
Beneath the calm they feign;
A wounded human spirit turns
Here, on its bed of pain.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Stanzas in Memory of the Author of Obermann. St. 6.

The mind conceives with pain, but brings forth with delight. (L'esprit conçoit avec douleur; mais il enfante avec délices.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 343.

6
Whoever thinks a faultless piece to see,
Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor e'er shall
be.

In every work regard the writer's end,
Since none can compass more than they intend;

And if the means be just, the conduct true,
Applause, in spite of trivial faults, is due.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 53.

The faults of great authors are generally excellencies carried to excess.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Miscellanies, p. 149.

A man may be a very good author with some faults, but not with many faults.

VOLTAIRE, Letters on the English. No. 24.

7
Ah! friend! to dazzle let the vain design;
To raise the thought and touch the heart be thine!

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 249.

Those write because all write, and so have still Excuse for writing, and for writing ill.

POPE, Satires of Dr. Donne, Versified. No. ii,
l. 27.

8
'Tis not how well an author says,
But 'tis how much, that gathers praise.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. i, l. 100.

9
Let him be kept from paper, pen, and ink;
So may he cease to write, and learn to think.

MATTHEW PRIOR, To a Person Who Wrote Ill.

You, for example, clever to a fault,
The rough and ready man, who write apace,
Read somewhat seldomer, think perhaps even less.

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

Two sorts of writers possess genius: those who think, and those who cause others to think.

ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Literature: Poets. No. 16.

So in the way of writing without thinking,
Thou hast a strange alacrity in sinking.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, EARL OF DORSET, *Satire
on Edward Howard*.

You may know by my size that I have a kind of alacrity in sinking.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 5, l. 12.

10
This dull product of a scoffer's pen.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ii, l. 484.

VI—Writing: Easy Writing

11
Whate'er is well-conceived is clearly said,
And the words to say it flow with ease.
(Ce que l'on conçoit bien s'énonce clairement, Et les mots pour le dire arrivent aisément.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. i, l. 153.

12
True ease in writing comes from art, not chance,
As those move easiest who have learn'd to dance.

'T is not enough no harshness gives offence;
The sound must seem an echo to the sense.
Soft is the strain when zephyr gently blows,
And the smooth stream in smoother numbers flows;
But when loud surges lash the sounding shore,
The hoarse rough verse should like the torrent roar.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 162.

The Mob of Gentlemen who wrote with Ease.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 108.

1
I argue thus: the world agrees,
That he writes well, who writes with ease:
Then he, by sequel logical,
Writes best, who never thinks at all.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epistle to Fleetwood Shepherd. No. i, l. 38.

Oh that I had the art of easy writing
Which should be easy reading!

BYRON, Beppo. St. 51.

What is written without effort is in general read without pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 309.

What is easy is seldom excellent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 134.

Ready writing makes not good writing; but good writing brings on ready writing.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: De Stylo.

2
You write with ease to show your breeding,
But easy writing's curst hard reading.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Clio's Protest. (MOORE, Life of Sheridan. Vol. i, p. 55.)

VII—Writing: Careful Writing

3
Hasten slowly; without losing heart,
Twenty times upon the anvil place your work.
(Hâtez-vous lentement; et, sans perdre courage, Vingt fois sur le métier remettez votre ouvrage.)

BOILEAU, L'Art Poétique. Pt. i, l. 171.

4
I had not time to lick it into form, as a bear doth her young ones.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

Arts and sciences are not cast in a mould, but are found and perfected by degrees, by often handling and polishing, as bears leisurely lick their cubs into shape.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

He fashioned his poem after the manner of a she-bear, and gradually licked it into shape. (Carmen se more ursæ parere et lambendo demum effingere.)

SUETONIUS, Lives: Vergil. Sec. 23.

See also under BEAR.

5
Little do such men know the toil, the pains,
The daily, nightly racking of the brains,
To range the thoughts, the matter to digest,
To cull fit phrases, and reject the rest.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. ii, l. 11.

None but an author knows an author's cares,
Or fancy's fondness for the child she bears.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 516.

6
The men, who labour and digest things most,
Will be much apter to despond than boast;
For if your author be profoundly good,

'Twill cost you dear before he's understood.
WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 163.

7
Writing is more and more a terror to old scribes.

EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

The more a man writes, the more he can write.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on Dramatic Literature, p. 77.

8
Often must you turn your stylus to erase,
if you hope to write something worth a second reading. (Sæpe stilum veritas, iterum quæ digna legi sint Scripturus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 72.

Wordy, and too lazy to take the trouble to write well. (Garrulus atque piger scribendi ferre laborem, Scribendi recte.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 12.

9
That dry drudgery at the desk's dead wood.
CHARLES LAMB, Sonnet: Work.

A votary of the desk—a notched and cropt scrivener—one that sucks his substance, as certain sick people are said to do, through a quill.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

10
Much have I written, but what I thought defective I have myself given to the flames, for their revision. (Multa quidem scripsi:
sed, quæ vitiosa putavi, Emendaturis ignibus ipse dedi.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iv, eleg. 10, l. 61.

11
Too much polishing weakens rather than improves a work. (Nimia cura deterit magis quam emendat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 35.

12
Let our literary compositions be laid aside for some time, that we may after a reasonable period return to their perusal, and find them, as it were, altogether new to us.

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. x,
ch. 4, sec. 2.

Perhaps the greatest lesson which the lives of literary men teach us is told in a single word:
Wait!

LONGELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 8.

13 Write till your ink be dry, and with your tears

Moist it again, and frame some feeling line
That may discover such integrity.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 74.

14
He wrote drop by drop.

SYDNEY SMITH. Of Charles James Fox. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 231.)

He has produced a couplet. When our friend is delivered of a couplet, with infinite labor and pain, he takes to his bed, has straw laid down, the knocker tied up, and expects his friends to call and make inquiries.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 232.)

VIII—Writing: The Itch for Writing

1 Of writing many books there is no end.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 1.

2 And force them, though it was in spite
Of Nature and their stars, to write.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 647.

3 There are some who write and fling books broadcast on the world as if they were fritters.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 3.

4 Who often reads will sometimes wish to write.

GEORGE CRABBE, Tales: Edward Shore.

But years hath done this wrong,
To make me write too much, and live too long.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotas, l. 106.

5 This comes of drinking asses' milk and writing.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 395.

6 Th' unhappy man who once has trail'd a pen,
Lives not to please himself, but other men;
Is always drudging, wastes his life and blood,
Yet only eats and drinks what you think good.

DRYDEN, Prologue to Lee's Cæsar Borgia, l. 1.

For thee we dim the eyes, and stuff the head
With all such reading as was never read;
For thee explain a thing till all men doubt it,
And write about it, Goddess, and about it:
So spins the silk-worm small its slender store,
And labours till it clouds itself all o'er.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 249.

7 The fickle populace has changed its taste and burns with a craze for scribbling. (Mutavit mentem populus levis, et calet uno Scribendi studio.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 108.

8 The incurable itch of writing possesses many.
(Tenet insanabile multos scribendi cacoëthes.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 52.

The desire for writing grows with writing.
(Crescit scribendo scribendi studium.)

ERASMUS, Adagia.

When once the itch of litherature comes over a man, nothing can cure it but the scratching of a pen.

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 36.

If all the trees in all the woods were men,
And each and every blade of grass a pen;
If every leaf on every shrub and tree
Turned to a sheet of foolscap; every sea
Were changed to ink, and all the earth's living tribes

Had nothing else to do but act as scribes,
And for ten thousand ages, day and night,
The human race should write, and write, and
write,

Till all the pens and paper were used up,
And the huge inkstand was an empty cup,
Still would the scribblers clustered round its brink

Call for more pens, more paper, and more ink.

O. W. HOLMES, Cacoëthes Scribendi.

9 It is foolish weakness, when you jostle poets at every corner, to spare paper already doomed to perish. (Stulta est clementia, cum tot ubique Vatribus occurras, perituræ parcere chartæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 17.

10 There is no measure or limit to this fever for writing; every one must be an author;
some out of vanity to acquire celebrity and raise up a name, others for the sake of lucre and gain.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. No. 911.

Who shames a scribbler? break one cobweb thro'.
He spins the slight, self-pleasing thread anew:
Destroy his fib, or sophistry,—in vain!
The creature 's at his dirty work again,
Throned in the centre of his thin designs,
Proud of a vast extent of flimsy lines.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 89.

11 Why did I write? what sin to me unknown
Dipt me in ink, my parents', or my own?
As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 125.

Whether the darken'd room to muse invite,
Or whiten'd wall provoke the skewer to write;
In durance, exile, Bedlam, or the Mint,—
Like Lee or Budgell I will rhyme and print.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat.
1, l. 97.

12 Some write, confin'd by physic; some, by debt;

Some, for 'tis Sunday; some, because 'tis wet; . . .

Another writes because his father writ,
And proves himself a bastard by his wit.

YOUNG, Epistles to Mr. Pope. Epis. i, l. 75.

For who can write so fast as men run mad.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 286.

IX—Writing and Fame

13 I account the use that a man should seek of the publishing of his own writings before his death, to be but an untimely anticipation of that which is proper to follow a man, and not to go along with him.

FRANCIS BACON, An Advertisement Touching a Holy War: Epistle Dedicatory.

14 He who writes prose builds his temple to Fame in rubble; he who writes verse builds it in granite.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana: The Spirit of Conservatism.

<sup>1</sup> The book that he has made renders its author this service in return, that so long as the book survives, its author remains immortal and cannot die.

RICHARD DE BURY, Philobiblon. Ch. i, sec. 21.

<sup>2</sup> Thou too hast built what will outlast all marble and metal, and be a wonder-bringing City of the mind, a Temple and Seminary, and Prophetic Mount, whereto all kindreds of the earth will pilgrim.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 8.

<sup>3</sup> If you would not be forgotten, as soon as you are dead and rotten, either write things worth reading, or do things worth the writing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

<sup>4</sup> Wide as the light extends shall be the fame Of this great work.

(Τοῦ δ' ἤτοι κλέος ἔσται ὅσον τ' ἐπικίδναται ἡώς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 451. (Derby, tr.)

I have a great work in hand. (Habeo opus magnum in manibus.)

CICERO, Academicarum Quæstionum. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 2.

And now I have completed a work which neither the wrath of Jove, nor fire, nor sword, nor devouring age, will have power to destroy. (Jamque opus exegi, quod nec Jovis ira, nec ignis, Nec poterit ferrum, nec edax abolere vetustas.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 871.

O what an endless work have I in hand!

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto xii, st. 1.

<sup>5</sup> He that cometh in print because he would be known, is like the fool that cometh into the Market because he would be seen.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues: To the Gentlemen Readers.

<sup>6</sup> By labour and intense study (which I take to be my portion in this life) joined with the strong propensity of nature, I might perhaps leave something so written to after-times, as they should not willingly let it die.

JOHN MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Bk. ii, Introduction.

<sup>7</sup> Writing endures the years; it is through writing that you know Agamemnon, and all those who fought with or against him. (Scripta ferunt annos; scriptis Agamemnona nosti, Et quisquis contra vel simul arma tulit.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 8, l. 51.

<sup>8</sup> Yield ye, bards of Rome! yield ye, singers of Greece! (Cedite Romani scriptores, cedite Graii!)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 34, l. 65.

<sup>9</sup> Literary fame is the only fame of which a wise man ought to be ambitious, because it is the only lasting and living fame.

ROBERT SOUTHBY. (FORSTER, Life of Landor. Bk. vii, ch. 13.)

<sup>10</sup> I grant the man is vain who writes for praise. Praise no man e'er deserved, who sought no more.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 3.

X—Writing: The Writer

<sup>11</sup> The circumstance which gives authors an advantage above all these great masters, is this, that they can multiply their originals; or rather, can make copies of their works, to what number they please, which shall be as valuable as the originals themselves.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 166.

<sup>12</sup> Writers, like teeth, are divided into incisors and grinders.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies: The First Edinburgh Reviewers.

<sup>13</sup> There is probably no hell for authors in the next world—they suffer so much from critics and publishers in this.

C. N. BOVEE, Summaries of Thought: Authors.

<sup>14</sup> That unspeakable shoeblack-seraph Army of Authors.

CARLYLE, Essays: Boswell's Johnson.

He, with his copy-rights and copy-wrongs, in his squalid garret, in his rusty coat; ruling (for this is what he does), from his grave, after death, whole nations and generations who would, or would not, give him bread while living,—is a rather curious spectacle!

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

<sup>15</sup> There are genuine Men of Letters, and not genuine; as in every kind there is a genuine and spurious. . . . The Hero as Man of Letters will be found discharging a function for us which is ever honourable, ever the highest; and was once well known to be the highest. He is uttering forth, in such way as he has, the inspired soul of him; all that a man, in any case, can do.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

Men of Letters are a perpetual Priesthood, from age to age, teaching all men that a God is still present in their life. . . . In the true Literary Man there is thus ever, acknowledged or not by the world, a sacredness: he is the light of the world; the world's Priest;—guiding it, like a sacred Pillar of Fire, in its dark pilgrimage through the waste of Time.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

Literary men are . . . a perpetual priesthood.

CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.

1 Until you understand a writer's ignorance, presume yourself ignorant of his understanding.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12.

If you once understand an author's character, the comprehension of his writings becomes easy.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 5.

2 It is a hard and nice thing for a man to write of himself. It grates his own heart to say anything of disparagement, and the reader's ears to hear anything of praise from him.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

The author who speaks about his own books is almost as bad as the mother who talks about her own children.

DISRAELI, Speech, 19 Nov., 1870.

But every little busy scribbler now Swells with the praises which he gives himself; And, taking sanctuary in the crowd, Brags of his impudence, and scorns to mend.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 475. (Dillon, tr.)

3 A man of letters, and of manners too!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 782.

4 How strange that men,
Who guide the plough, should fail to guide
the pen.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii.

5 Choose an author as you choose a friend.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 96.

6 'Tis a vanity common to all writers, to overvalue their own productions.

DRYDEN, Examen Poeticum: Dedication.

7 The writer, like a priest, must be exempted from secular labor. His work needs a frolic health; he must be at the top of his condition.

EMERSON, Poetry and Imagination: Creation.

Talent alone cannot make a writer. There must be a man behind the book.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Goethe.

8 An affected modesty is very often the greatest vanity, and authors are sometimes prouder of their blushes than of the praises which occasioned them.

FARQUHAR, The Constant Couple: Preface.

Nothing gives an author so much pleasure as to find his works respectfully quoted by other learned authors.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

I never saw an author in my life, saving perhaps one, that did not purr as audibly as a full-grown domestic cat on having his fur smoothed the right way by a skilful hand.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3.

There is nothing more dreadful to an author than neglect, compared with which reproach, hatred and opposition are names of happiness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 2.

9 No author ever spar'd a brother.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Elephant and the Bookseller.

10 Whatever an author puts between the two covers of his book is public property; whatever of himself he does not put there is his private property, as much as if he had never written a word.

GAIL HAMILTON, Country Living and Country Thinking: Preface.

11 I don't want to be a doctor, and live by men's diseases; nor a minister to live by their sins; nor a lawyer to live by their quarrels. So I don't see there's anything left for me but to be an author.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, Remark to His Mother.

12 He that takes up conclusions on the trust of authors . . . loses his labour, and does not know anything, but only believeth.

THOMAS HOBBES, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 5.

13 The only happy author in this world is he who is below the care of reputation.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Tales of a Traveller: Poor-Devil Author.

14 The chief glory of every people arises from its authors.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language: Preface.

To commence author is to claim praise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 93.

Modern writers are the moons of literature; they shine with reflected light, with light borrowed from the ancients.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 333.)

15 I never desire to converse with a man who has written more than he has read.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Miscellanies. Vol. ii, p. 6.

16 He is the richest author that ever grazed the common of literature.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, of Dr. Thomas Campbell. (WHARTON, Life.)

17 There are two literary maladies—writer's cramp and swelled head. The worst of writer's cramp is that it is never cured; the worst of swelled head is that it never kills.

COULSON KERNAHAN, Lecture, Birmingham.

18 We arrive at what is permanent and universal in a foreign writer through his affinity to the writers of our own blood.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 127.

1 Skilled equally with voice and pen
To stir the hearts or mould the minds of men.
J. R. LOWELL, Epistle to George William Curtis.

2 But I became a writer all the same, and shall remain one until the end of the chapter, just as a cow goes on giving milk all her life, even though what appears to be her self-interest urges her to give gin.

H. L. MENCKEN, (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 32.)

3 Whate'er my fate is, 'tis my fate to write.
JOHN OLDHAM, A Letter from the Country to a Friend in Town.

4 His powers betray the author. (Prodent auctorem vires.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 13, l. 11.

5 A man of letters, of the kind that rich men hate. (Litteratum esse, quos odisse divites solent.)

PETRONIUS ARBITER, Satyricon. Sec. 83.

6 Authors, like coins, grow dear as they grow old;

It is the rust we value, not the gold.
Chaucer's worst ribaldry is learn'd by rote,
And beastly Skelton heads of houses quote;
One likes no language but the Faery Queen;
A Scot will fight for Christ's Kirk o' the Green;

And each true Briton is to Ben so civil,
He swears the Muses met him at the Devil.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 35. The last reference is to the Devil Tavern.

7 As though I lived to write, and wrote to live.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy: A Character, l. 16.

You must not suppose, because I am a man of letters, that I never tried to earn an honest living.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot: Preface.

8 Admitted into the company of paper-blurrers.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Apology for Poetry: Causes of Defect.

9 The punishment of writers of genius exalts the credit of their writings. (Punitis ingeniis, gliscit auctoritas.)

TACITUS, Annales. Bk. iv, sec. 35.

10 In every author let us distinguish the man from his works.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Poets.

11 An author! 'tis a venerable name!
How few deserve it, and what numbers claim!

YOUNG, Epistles to Mr. Pope. Epis. ii, l. 15.

Thus nature's refuse, and the dregs of men,
Compose the black militia of the pen.

YOUNG, Epistles to Mr. Pope. Epis. i, last lines.

Is now a scribbler, who was once a man.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 84.

12 The author of "Amelia," the most singular genius which their island ever produced, whose works it has long been the fashion to abuse in public and to read in secret.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 1.

13 To him no author was unknown,
Yet what he wrote was all his own. . . .
Horace's wit and Virgil's state
He did not steal, but emulate;
And when he would like them appear,
Their garb, but not their clothes, did wear.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On the Death of Mr. Abraham Cowley.

14 Thou last great prophet of tautology.
JOHN DRYDEN, Mac Flecknoe. Referring to Thomas Shadwell.

15 His writing has no enthusiasms, no aspiration, contented, self-respecting and keeping the middle of the road.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne.

16 While he walks like Jack the Giant Killer in a coat of darkness, he may do much mischief with little strength.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Falkland's Islands. Referring to "Junius."

17 Such stains there are—as when a Grace
Sprinkles another's laughing face
With nectar, and runs on.

W. S. LANDOR, Catullus.

18 His Nature's a glass of Champagne with the foam on 't,

As tender as Fletcher, as witty as Beaumont;
So his best things are done in the flash of the moment.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 717. Of N. P. Willis.

19 Cinna writes verses 'gainst me, it is said:
But he writes nothing who is never read.
(Versiculos in me narratur scribere Cinna;
Non scribit, cujus carmina nemo legit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 9.

Do you wonder, Theodorus, why it is that, despite your entreaties, I have never given you my books? I have an excellent reason: lest you should give me yours.

(Non donem tibi cur meos libellos
Oranti totiens et exigenti
Miraris, Theodore? Magna causa est:
Dones tu mihi ne tuos libellos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 73.

20 Poor Henry [James], he's spending eternity wandering round and round a stately park and the fence is just too high for him to peep over and they're having tea just too far for him to hear what the countess is saying.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Cakes and Ale, p. 152.

1 Only a little more
I have to write,

Then I'll give o'er
And bid the world Good-night.

ROBERT HERRICK, His Poetrie His Pillar.

XI—Writing: Handwriting

2 Every man, who has the use of his eyes and of his right hand, can write whatever hand he pleases.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

3 He can't write, nor rade writing from his cradle, plase your honour; but he can make his mark equal to another, sir.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Love and Law. Act iii, sc. 1.

4 Phœnicia first, if fame be truly heard,
Fixed in rude characters the fleeting word.
(Phœnices primi, famæ si creditur, ausi Mansuram rudibus vocem signare figuris.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 220. (King, tr.)

Cadmus brought the twenty-two or twenty-four Phœnician letters to Greece. They are called "the black daughters of Cadmus."

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education. The ancient tradition was that Cadmus brought sixteen letters from Phœnicia to Greece, to which Palamedes subsequently added four more, and Simonides, still later, four others.

Thence comes to us that ingenious art
Of painting words and speaking to the eyes;
And by the differing form of figures traced,
To give color and form to thought.
(C'est de lui que nous vient cet art ingenieux
De peindre la parole at de parler aux yeux;
Et par las traits divers de figures tracées,
Donner de la couleur et du corps aux pensées.)

BRÉBŒUF, Paraphrase of Lucan.

5 The swifter hand doth the swift words outrun:
Before the tongue hath spoke, the hand hath done.

(Currant verba licet, manus est velocior illis: Nondum lingua suum, dextra peregit opus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams: On a Shorthand Writer. Bk. xiv, epig. 208. (Wright, tr.)

6 I wish that I had never learned to write!
(Quam vellem me nescire literas!)

EMPEROR NERO, on being asked to sign his first writ for the execution of a malefactor.
(SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæsars: Nero. Sec. 10.)

7 Write it down in a good firm hand. (Scribas vide plane et probe.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 755. (Act iv, sc. 1.)

8 Men of quality are in the wrong to under-value, as they often do, the practise of a fair and quick hand in writing; for it is no immaterial accomplishment. (Non sest alienares, quæ fere ab honestis negligi solet, cura bene ac velociter scribendi.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 5.

I once did hold it, as our statists do,
A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much
How to forget that learning, but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 33.

9 If you give me six lines written by the hand of the most honest of men, I will find something in them which will hang him. (Qu'on me donne six lignes écrites de la main du plus honnête homme, j'y trouverai de quoi le faire pendre.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU. Fournier (L'Esprit dans l'Histoire, p. 159) denies that Richelieu ever said it.

10 Clerk: Sir, I thank God that I have been so well brought up that I can write my name.
Cade: Away with him, I say! hang him with his pen and ink-horn about his neck.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 112.

To be a well-favoured man is a gift of fortune:
but to write and read comes by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 15.

11 I think we do know the sweet Roman hand.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 30.

12 Who'er writ it, writes a hand like a foot.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

I—Wrong, in the Sense of Injury

See also Injury; Right and Wrong

13 Some kind of wrongs there are, which flesh and blood Cannot endure.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Little French Lawyer. Act i, sc. 1.

14 The wrong was his who wrongfully complain'd.

COWPER, Hope, l. 321.

15 My ear is pain'd,
My soul is sick with every day's report
Of wrong and outrage with which earth is fill'd.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 5.

16 Wrongs do not leave off there where they begin,

But still beget new mischiefs in their course.
SAMUEL DANIEL, The History of the Civil War.
Bk. iv, st. 10.

<sup>1</sup> You cannot do wrong without suffering wrong.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

<sup>2</sup> For every social wrong there must be a remedy. But the remedy can be nothing less than the abolition of the wrong.

HENRY GEORGE, Social Problems. Ch. 9.

<sup>3</sup> Wrong rules the land and waiting Justice sleeps.

J. G. HOLLAND, Wanted.

Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne.

<sup>4</sup> He wrought no wrong in deed or word to any man. (Oûre tivà péças éxalov ovre ti elvov.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 690.

<sup>5</sup> And bear unmov'd the wrongs of base mankind,

The last, and hardest, conquest of the mind.

<sup>6</sup> A passionate wrong cries ever till judgment comes.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Wild Swan.

<sup>7</sup> Wronged me! in the nicest point—
The honour of my house.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> By bearing old wrongs you provoke new ones.
(Veterem ferendo injuriam invites novam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 705.

<sup>9</sup> Wrong has no warrant.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>10</sup> He hath done me wrong.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 85.

Won't you come home, Bill Bailey,

Won't you come home? . . .

I'll do de cooking, darling,

I'll pay de rent;

I knows I've done you wrong.

HUGHIE CANNON, Bill Bailey. (1902)

<sup>11</sup> Wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 125.

Wrongs unredressed, or insults unavenged.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iii, l. 374.

<sup>12</sup> Higher than the perfect song
For which love longeth,

Is the tender fear of wrong,
That never wrongeth.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Improvisations. Pt. iv.

II—Wrong: Error

YEAR

See also Time

I—Year: Apothegms

<sup>19</sup> Six years—six little years—six drops of time.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Mycerinus. St. 11.

<sup>20</sup> Years have harder tasks
Than listening to a whisper or a sigh.

STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, The Golden Corpse.

<sup>21</sup> Lament who will, in fruitless tears,

The speed with which our moments fly;
I sigh not over vanished years,
But watch the years that hasten by.
BRYANT, The Lapse of Time.

<sup>22</sup> Lib'ral in all things else, yet Nature here
With stern severity deals out the year.
COWPER, Table Talk, l. 207.

<sup>23</sup> The wonderful year. (Annus mirabilis.)
JOHN DRYDEN. Title of historical poem, dealing with "the year of wonders," 1666.

1
The years teach much which the days never know.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

All sorts of things and weather
Must be taken in together,
To make up a year.

EMERSON, Fable.

2
The specious panorama of a year
But multiplies the image of a day,—
A belt of mirrors round a taper's flame;
And universal Nature, through her vast
And crowded whole, an infinite parrot,
Repeats one note.

EMERSON, Xenophanes.

3
A year is no contemptible portion of this mortal existence.

EDWARD GIBBON, Miscellaneous Works. Vol. i, p. 644.

4
Years know more than books.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The year doth nothing else but open and shut.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5
Years, as they come, bring blessings in their train;

Years, as they go, take blessings back again.
(Multa ferunt anni venientes commoda secum,

Multa recedentes adimunt.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 175. (Conington, tr.)

From each of us each passing year takes something. (Singula de nobis anni prædantur eantes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 55.

Years following years steal something every day.
At last they steal us from ourselves away.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, 2, 72. (Pope, tr.)

Welcome, thou kind deceiver!
Thou best of thieves! who, with an easy key,
Dost open life, and, unperceiv'd by us,
Ev'n steal us from ourselves.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act v, sc. 1.

6
Nothing is swifter than the years. (Nihil est annis velocius.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xx, l. 520.

The swift years slip and slide down the steep;
The slow years pass; neither will come again.

WILLIAM SHARP, The End of Aodh-of-the-Songs.

7
A thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night.

Old Testament: Psalms, xc, 4.

But to the dwellers in eternity
A thousand years shall as a moment be.

ABRAHAM COLES, The Microcosm and Other Poems, p. 289.

Our noisy years seem moments in the being

Of the eternal Silence.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. Sec. 9.

8
We spend our years as a tale that is told.
Old Testament: Psalms, xc, 9.

9
I will not let the years run over me like a Juggernaut car.

THOREAU, Journal, 25 June, 1840.

In masks outrageous and austere
The years go by in single file;
But none has merited my fear,
And none has quite escaped my smile.

ELINOR WYLIE, Let No Charitable Hope.

11
Years ago—years and years and donkey's ears, as the saying is.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, 34.

12
The years like great black oxen tread the world

And God the herdsman goads them on behind,
And I am broken by their passing feet.

W. B. YEATS, The Countess Cathleen. Closing lines.

Black Oxen.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON. Title of novel.

II—Year: New Year

13
Thou art my single day, God lends to leaven
What were all earth else, with a feel of heaven.

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes: Introduction, l. 39.

14
Even while we sing, he smiles his last,
And leaves our sphere behind.
The good Old Year is with the past,
O be the New as kind!

BRYANT, A Song for New-Year's Eve.

15
The merry year is born
Like the bright berry from the naked thorn.
HARTLEY COLERIDGE, New Year's Day.

16
A song for the Old, while its knell is tolled,
And its parting moments fly!
But a song and a cheer for the glad New Year,

While we watch the Old Year die!

Oh! its grief and pain ne'er can come again,
And its care lies buried deep;
But what joy untold doth the New Year hold,
And what hopes within it sleep!

GEORGE COOPER, The New Year.

17
Who comes dancing over the snow,
His soft little feet all bare and rosy?
Open the door, though the wild winds blow,
Take the child in and make him cosy.
Take him in and hold him dear,

He is the wonderful glad New Year.

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, The New Year.

1 New Year comes but once a twelvemonth.

W. E. HENLEY, In Hospital: Interlude.

2 For hark! the last chime of the dial has ceased,

And Old Time, who his leisure to cozen,
Has finish'd the Months, like the flasks at a feast,

Is preparing to tap a fresh dozen!

THOMAS HOOD, Anacreontic for the New Year. St. 1.

And ye, who have met with Adversity's blast,
And been bow'd to the earth by its fury;

To whom the Twelve Months, that have recently pass'd

Were as harsh as a prejudiced jury—

Still, fill to the Future! and join in our chime,
The regrets of remembrance to cozen,

And having obtained a New Trial of Time,
Shout in hopes of a kindlier dozen.

THOMAS HOOD, Anacreontic for the New Year. St. 3.

3 Sad, sad to think that the year is all but done.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Starlings.

4 Then sing, young hearts that are full of cheer,
With never a thought of sorrow;

The old goes out, but the glad young year
Comes merrily in to-morrow.

EMILY HUNTINGTON MILLER, New Year Song.

5 Gone! gone forever!—like a rushing wave
Another year has burst upon the shore
Of earthly being—and its last low tones,
Wandering in broken accents in the air,
Are dying to an echo.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Flight of Years.

6 Like yonder stars so bright and clear
That praise their Maker as they move,
And usher in the circling year.

SCHILLER, Song of the Bell. (Bowring, tr.)

7 "Orphan Hours, the Year is dead:
Come and sigh, come and weep."

"Merry Hours, smile instead,
For the Year is but asleep.

See, it smiles as it is sleeping,
Mocking your untimely weeping."

SHELLEY, Dirge for the Year.

The warm sun is failing, the bleak wind is wailing,
The bare boughs are sighing, the pale flowers are dying;

And the year

On the earth her deathbed, in a shroud of leaves dead,
Is lying.

Come, months, come away,
From November to May,
In your saddest array;

Follow the bier

Of the dead cold year,

And like dim shadows watch by her sepulchre.

SHELLEY, Autumn, A Dirge.

8 Full knee-deep lies the winter snow,
And the winter winds are wearily sighing:
Toll ye the church-bell sad and slow,
And tread softly and speak low,
For the old year lies a-dying. . . .

There's a new foot on the floor, my friend,

And a new face at the door, my friend,

A new face at the door.

TENNYSON, The Death of the Old Year.

Ring out, wild bells, to the wild sky,

The flying cloud, the frosty light:

The year is dying in the night;

Ring out, wild bells, and let him die.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cvi, st. 1.

Ring out the old, ring in the new,

Ring, happy bells, across the snow:

The year is going, let him go;

Ring out the false, ring in the true.

ALFRED TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cvi, st. 2.

12 And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 22.

13 O, call back yesterday, bid time return.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 69.

O God! Put back Thy universe and give me yesterday.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES, Silver King.

Yesterday will not be called again.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnifycence, l. 2057.

14 The tasks are done and the tears are shed.
Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover;
Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled,
Are healed with the healing that night has shed.

SARAH C. WOOLSEY, New Every Morning.

15 A man he seems of cheerful yesterdays
And confident to-morrows.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 557.

Cheerful Yesterdays.

I—Youth: Definitions

<sup>2</sup> A man that is young in years may be old in hours, if he have lost no time; but that happeneth rarely.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age.

Young men are fitter to invent than to judge; fitter for execution than for counsel; and fitter for new projects than for settled business.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age.

Young men, in the conduct and manage of actions, embrace more than they can hold, stir more than they can quiet, fly to the end without consideration of the means.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Youth and Age.

<sup>3</sup> Youth being indeed the philosopher's rasa tabula, is apt to receive any impressure.

RICHARD BRATHWAITE, English Gentleman, 3. (1630)

<sup>4</sup> Every street has two sides, the shady side and the sunny. When two men shake hands and part, mark which of the two takes the sunny side; he will be the younger man of the two.

BULWER-LYTON, What Will He Do With It? Bk. ii, ch. 15.

<sup>5</sup> Youth is to all the glad season of life; but often only by what it hopes, not by what it attains, or what it escapes.

CARLYLE, Essays: Schiller.

<sup>6</sup> The young leading the young, is like the blind leading the blind; they will both fall into the ditch.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Nov., 1747.

Young men are apt to think themselves wise enough, as drunken men are apt to think themselves sober enough.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

<sup>7</sup> The best recommendation that a young man can have is modesty, filial affection, and devotion to kindred. (Prima igitur commendatio prefiscitur a modestia cum pietate inparentes, in suos benivolentia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 46.

<sup>8</sup> Young heads are giddy, and young hearts are warm,

And make mistakes for manhood to reform.
Boys are, at best, but pretty buds unblown,

Whose scent and hues are rather guess'd than known;

Each dreams that each is just what he appears,

But learns his error in maturer years,
When disposition, like a sail unfurl'd,
Shows all its rents and patches to the world.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 444.

<sup>9</sup> Youth, what man's age is like to be, doth show;

We may our ends by our beginnings know.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On Prudence, l. 225.

<sup>10</sup> The Youth of a Nation are the trustees of Posterity.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. vi, ch. 13.

<sup>11</sup> "And youth is cruel, and has no remorse
And smiles at situations which it cannot see."
I smile, of course,
And go on drinking tea.

T. S. ELIOT, Portrait of a Lady.

<sup>12</sup> Say, was it never heard
That wisdom might in youth be gotten,
Or wit be ripe before 'twas rotten?

EMERSON, Fame.

<sup>13</sup> There is a feeling of Eternity in youth which makes us amend for everything. To be young is to be as one of the Immortals.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: The Feeling of Immortality in Youth.

<sup>14</sup> Youth is a continual intoxication; it is the fever of reason. (La jeunesse est une ivresse continuelle: c'est la fièvre de la raison.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 271.

<sup>15</sup> Youth sees too far to see how near it is
To seeing farther.

E. A. ROBINSON, Tristram.

<sup>16</sup> Our youth is like a rustic at the play
That cries aloud in simple-hearted fear,
Curses the villain, shudders at the fray,
And weeps before the maiden's wreathed bier

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Rustic at the Play.

<sup>17</sup> Youth is wholly experimental.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Letter to a Young Gentleman.

Youth is the time to go flashing from one end of the world to the other both in mind and body; to try the manners of different nations; to hear the chimes at midnight.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: Crabbed Age and Youth.

<sup>18</sup> Youth is not a time of life; it is a state of mind.

SAMUEL ULLMAN, From the Summit of Four Score Years.

II—Youth: Apothegms

1 Young fellows will be young fellows.
ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act ii, sc. 9.

2 Youth will be served, every dog hath his day, and mine has been a fine one.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 92, par. 1. (1851)

Young blood! Youth will be served!

STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, Young Blood. Used as a quotation from "D'Hermonville's Fabliaux," a fabrication of Mr. Benét.

We have an old proverb, youth will have his course.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 124. (1579)

Youth will have his swing.

SHACKERLEY MARMION, Fine Companion. Act i, sc. 7. (1633)

When all the world is young, lad,

And all the trees are green;

And every goose a swan, lad,

And every lass a queen;

Then hey, for boot and horse, lad,

And round the world away;

Young blood must have its course, lad,

And every dog his day.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies: Song.

3 What I promised thee was in my nonage.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i.

4 Our most important are our earliest years.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 354.

Almost everything that is great has been done by youth.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

5 A sensual and intemperate youth delivers a worn-out body to old age. (Libidinosa etenim et intemperans adolescentia effectum corpus tradit senectuti.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Sec. ix.

Youth riotously led breedeth a loathsome old age.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health: Dedication. (1588)

The excesses of our youth are drafts upon our old age, payable with interest about thirty years after date.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. Pt. i, No. 76.

The majority of men employ the first portion of their life in making the other portion wretched. (La plupart des hommes emploient la première partie de leur vie à rendre l'autre misérable.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De L'Homme.

Yet few without long discipline are sage;

And our youth only lays up sighs for age.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 193.

6 My youth may wear and waste, but it shall never rust in my possession.

WILLIAM CONGREV, The Way of the World. Act ii, sc. 1. See also under RUST.

7 Youth is a curse to mortals, when with youth a man hath not implanted righteousness.

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 184.

8 Girls we love for what they are;
Young men for what they promise to be.
(Man liebt an dem Mädchen was es ist, Und an dem Jüngling was er ankündigt.)

GOETHE, Die Wahrheit und Dichtung.

9 To maids and boys I sing. (Virginibus puerisque canto.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 4. The first two words used as the title of a book of essays by Robert Louis Stevenson.

Solemn and holy words should be read by boys and maids. (Venerandaque sanctaque verba A pueris debent, virginibusque legi.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 69.

He is wont to be read by boys and girls. (Solet hic pueris virginibusque legi.)

OVID, Tristia. Eleg. ii, l. 370.

10 I do feel

The powers of one-and-twenty, like a tide,
Flow in upon me.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

When the brisk minor pants for twenty-one.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 38.

Lightly I vaulted up four pair of stairs,
In the brave days when I was twenty-one.

W. M. THACKERAY, The Garret.

In my hot youth, when George the Third was king.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 212.

11 The flower of youth. (Flos juventutis.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxvii, ch. 12.

The flower of the young men. (Flos juvenum.)

LIVY, History. Bk. viii, ch. 8.

Age? Sixteen. The very flower of youth. (Anni? sedecim. Flos ipsus.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 318. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

Force of juvenus, hardy as lion.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 198. (c. 1430)

12 Youth comes but once in a lifetime.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. ii, ch. 10.

13 Youth condemns; maturity condones.

AMY LOWELL, Tendencies in Modern American Poetry, p. 60.

14 The atrocious crime of being a young man which the honorable gentlemen has with such spirit and decency charged upon me, I shall neither attempt to palliate nor deny; but content myself with wishing that I may be one of those whose follies may cease with their youth, and not of that number who are ignorant in spite of experience.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, 6 March, 1741, in reply to Walpole, the "honorable gentleman" referred to. Boswell, in his Life (1741), alleges that this speech was written by Dr. Johnson. If youth be a defect, it is one that we outgrow only too soon.

J. R. LOWELL, Address, Cambridge, Mass., 8 Nov., 1886.

1 I confess to pride in this coming generation. You are working out your own salvation; you are more in love with life; you play with fire openly, where we did in secret, and few of you are burned!

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Address: Whither Bound, at Milton Academy, May, 1926.

2 My salad days
When I was green in judgement: cold in blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i, sc. 5, l. 73.

How green you are and fresh in this old world.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 145.

The text is old, the orator too green.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 806.

"He is so jolly green," said Charley.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9.

Fresh as an angel o'er a new inn-door.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 57.

3 He wears the rose Of youth upon him.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 13, l. 20.

We have some salt of our youth in us.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 50.

'Tis now the summer of your youth.

Time has not cropt the roses from your cheek,
Though sorrow long has washed them.

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act iii, sc. 4.

4 For though the camomile, the more it is trodden on the faster it grows, yet youth, the more it is wasted the sooner it wears.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 440.
See also ADVERSITY: A BLESSING.

5 Is in the very May-morn of his youth,
Ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 2, l. 120.

The May of life blooms once and never again.
(Des Lebens Mai blüht einmal und nicht wieder.)

SCHILLER, Resignation. St. 2.

6 He that is more than a youth is not for me, and he that is less than man, I am not for him.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 40.

7 He has quitted the hobbledehoy stage; he is out of his teens. (Excessit ex ephebis.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 51. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Their hobbledehoy time, the years that one is neither a man nor a boy.

JOHN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, D 4. (1540)

The first seven years bring up as a child,
The next to learning, for waxing too wild,
The next keep under sir hobbard de hoy,
The next a man, no longer a boy.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Hundred Good Points of Husbandry. (1573)

I was between
A man and a boy, A hobble-de-hoy,
A fat, little, punchy concern of sixteen.

R. H. BARHAM, Aunt Fanny.

Being but a moonish youth.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 430.

Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy; as a squash is before 'tis a peas-cod, or a codling when 'tis almost an apple: 'tis with him in standing water, between boy and man. He is very well-favoured and he speaks very shrewishly; one would think his mother's milk were scarce out of him.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 165.

The imagination of a boy is healthy, and the mature imagination of a man is healthy; but there is a space of life between, in which the soul is in a ferment, the character undecided, the way of life uncertain, the ambition thick-sighted: thence proceeds mawkishness.

KEATS, Endymion: Preface.

8 The wildest colts make the best horses.

THEMISTOCLES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 2, sec. 5.)

For young hot colts being raged, do rage the more.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 70.

A man whose youth has no follies, will in his maturity have no power.

MORTIMER COLLINS, Thoughts in My Garden, ii, 108.

For God's sake give me the young man who has brains enough to make a fool of himself.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

And still my delight is in proper young men.

BURNS, The Jolly Beggars.

9 My prime of youth is but a frost of cares.

CHIDDOCK TICHBORNE, A Lament.

10 Let no man despise thy youth.

New Testament: I Timothy, iv, 12.

11 Everything loses charm when one's own youth does not lend the gilding.

WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 22 Sept., 1765.

III—Youth: Its Sweetness

12 O youth, whose hope is high,
Who dost to Truth aspire,
Whether thou live or die,
O look not back nor tire.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Song.

13 I felt so young, so strong, so sure of God.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 13.

- 1
O enviable, early days,
When dancing thoughtless pleasure's maze,
To care, to guilt unknown!
How ill exchang'd for riper times,
To feel the follies or the crimes,
Of others, or my own!
BURNS, Despondency. St. 5.
- O Life! how pleasant is thy morning,
Young Fancy's rays the hills adorning!
Cold-pausing Caution's lesson scorning,
We frisk away,
Like schoolboys at th' expected warning,
To joy an' play.
BURNS, Epistle to James Smith. St. 15.
- Oh, talk not to me of a name great in story;
The days of our youth are the days of our glory;
And the myrtle and ivy of sweet two-and-twenty
Are worth all your laurels, though ever so plenty.
BYRON, Stanzas Written on the Road Between Florence and Pisa.
- 2
In life's morning march, when my bosom was young,
THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Soldier's Dream, l. 14.
- There is no time like the old time, when you and I were young.
O. W. HOLMES, No Time Like the Old Time.
- 3
Nought cared this body for wind or weather
When Youth and I lived in 't together.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age, l. 16.
- 4
Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth; and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xi, 9.
- Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 1.
- 5
Ah, sweet is youth! ('Α νεότης μοι φίλον.)
EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 637.
- Ah youth! for ever dear, for ever kind!
HOMER, The Iliad. Bk. xix, l. 303. (Pope, tr.)
- 6
Youth! youth! how buoyant are thy hopes! they turn,
Like marigolds, toward the sunny side.
JEAN INGELow, The Four Bridges. St. 56.
- How beautiful is youth! how bright it gleams
With its illusions, aspirations, dreams!
Book of Beginnings, Story without End,
Each maid a heroine, and each man a friend! . . .
All possibilities are in its hands,
No danger daunts it, and no foe withstands;
In its sublime audacity of faith,
"Be thou removed!" it to the mountain saith,
And with ambitious feet, secure and proud,
Ascends the ladder leaning on the cloud!
LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 66.
- 7
And a verse of a Lapland song

- Is haunting my memory still:
"A boy's will is the wind's will,
And the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts."
LONGFELLOW, My Lost Youth. St. 1.
- 8
When nature pleased, for life itself was new,
And the heart promised what the fancy drew.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i, l. 19.
- 9
I'll hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutered like young mep,
I'll prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my dagger with the braver grace,
And speak between the change of man and boy,
With a reed voice; and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speak of frays,
Like a fine bragging youth.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 62.
- 10
I must laugh and dance and sing,
Youth is such a lovely thing.
ALINE THOMAS, A Song of Youth.
- 11
Bliss was it in that dawn to be alive,
But to be young was very Heaven!
WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. xi, l. 108.
- There was a time when meadow, grove, and stream,
The earth, and every common sight,
To me did seem
Apparelled in celestial light,
The glory and the freshness of a dream.
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 1.
- The Youth, who daily farther from the East
Must travel, still is Nature's Priest,
And by the vision splendid
Is on his way attended.
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality. St. 5.

IV—Youth: Its Fleetness

- 12
Unthinking, idle, wild, and young,
I laugh'd and danc'd and talk'd and sung.
PRINCESS AMELIA (Daughter of George III),
Youth.
- 13
Our youth we can have but to-day;
We may always find time to grow old.
BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Can Love Be Controlled by Advice?
- 14
'T is not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades so fast,
But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.
BYRON, Stanzas for Music.
- 15
Alas! the slippery nature of tender youth.

(Teneris heu lubrica moribus ætas!)

CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpina. Bk. iii, l. 227.

1 Youth should watch joys and shoot them as they fly.

DRYDEN, Aureng-Zebe. Act iii, sc. 1.

2 Let's now take our time
While we're in our prime,
And old, old age is afar off:
For the evil, evil days

Will come on apace,
Before we can be aware of.
ROBERT HERRICK, To Be Merry.

3 Youth flies. (Fugit juvenus.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. xvii, l. 21.

Youth now flees on feathered foot.
R. L. STEVENSON, To Will H. Low.

4 This be our solace: that it was not said
When we were young and warm and in our prime,

Upon our couch we lay as lie the dead,
Sleeping away the unreturning time.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Sonnet.

5 That Youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 96. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

6 O Youth with song and laughter,
Go not so lightly by.

Have pity—and remember

How soon thy roses die!

ARTHUR WALLACE PEACH, O Youth With Blossoms Laden.

7 Youth flies, as bloom forsakes the grove,
When icy winter blows:

And transient are the smiles of love,
As dew-drops on the rose.

T. L. PEACOCK, Genius of the Thames. St. 11.

8 The spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 26.

Clay lies still, but blood's a rover;
Breath's a ware that will not keep.

Up, lad: when the journey's over
There'll be time enough to sleep.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Reveillè.

9 Then come kiss me, Sweet-and-twenty,
Youth's a stuff will not endure.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 53.

10 There are gains for all our losses,
There are balms for all our pain;
But when youth, the dream, departs,
It takes something from our hearts,
And it never comes again.

R. H. STODDARD, The Flight of Youth.

11 In youth alone unhappy mortals live;
But ah! the mighty bliss is fugitive.

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 258. (Dryden, tr.)

12 Enjoy the season of thy prime; all things soon decline: one summer turns the kid into a shaggy goat. (Τῆς ὥρας ἀπόλαυε παρακμάζει ταχὺ πάντα· ἐν θέρος ἐξ ἐρίφου τρηχὺν ἔθηκε τράγον.)

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 51.)

Be advised, young men—whilst the morning shines, gather the flowers. (Dum aurora fulget, moniti adolescentes, flores colligite.)

UNKNOWN. A medieval aphorism.

14 Youth calls for Pleasure, Pleasure calls for Love.

MARK AKENSIDE, Love: An Elegy, l. 90.

Youth means love.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. i, l. 1056.

15 But they were young: Oh! what without our youth

Would love be? What would youth be without love?

BYRON, Beppo. St. 55.

Alas! they are so young, so beautiful.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 192.

And both were young, and one was beautiful.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 2.

16 Why should a man, whose blood is warm
within,

Sit like his grandsire cut in alabaster?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 83.

17 It is the season now to go
About the country high and low,
Among the lilacs hand in hand,
And two by two in fairy land.

The brooding boy and sighing maid,
Wholly fain and half afraid,
Now meet along the hazel'd brook
To pass and linger, pause and look.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods. No. 4.

A year ago and blithely paired
Their rough-and-tumble play they shared;
They kissed and quarrelled, laughed and cried
A year ago at Eastertide.

With bursting heart, with fiery face,
She strove against him in the race;
He unabashed her garter saw

That now would touch her skirts with awe.

2 They shall not grow old, as we that are left grow old:

Age shall not weary them nor the years condemn.

LAURENCE BINYON, For the Fallen.

O youth foregone, foregoing!

O dreams unseen, unsought!

God give you joy of knowing

What life your death has bought.

BRIAN HOOKER, A. D. 1919. Inscribed on tablet in Woolsey Hall, Yale University, commemorating over 200 Yale men who lost their lives in the World War.

3 What Youth deemed crystal, Age finds out was dew

Morn set a-sparkle, but which noon quick dried,

While Youth bent gazing at its red and blue,
Supposed perennial,—never dreamed the sun
Which kindled the display would quench it too.

ROBERT BROWNING, Jochanan Hakkadosh. St. 101.

4 Fair laughs the morn, and soft the Zephyr blows;

While proudly riding o'er the azure realm
In gallant trim the gilded vessel goes,

Youth on the prow, and Pleasure at the helm;

Regardless of the sweeping whirlwind's sway,
That, hush'd in grim repose, expects his evening-prey.

THOMAS GRAY, The Bard, l. 71.

5 O Memory, where is now my youth,
Who used to say that life was truth?
THOMAS HARDY, Memory and I.

6 Over the trackless past, somewhere,
Lie the lost days of our tropic youth,
Only regained by faith and prayer,
Only recalled by prayer and plaint,
Each lost day has its patron saint!
BRET HARTE, The Lost Galleon. St. 16.

7 O Youth, alas, why wilt thou not incline
And unto rulèd reason bowè thee,
Since Reason is the very straightè line
That leadeth folk into felicity?
THOMAS HOCCELEVE, La Male Règle. (c. 1430)

8 Youth enters the world with very happy prejudices in her own favour.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield, expunged passage. (See BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, 1779.)

Blind zeal can only do harm. (Blinder Eifer schadet nur.)

LICHTWER, Die Katzen und der Hausherr.

The zeal of fools offends at any time,
But most of all the zeal of fools in rhyme.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 406.

3 Our Hero, whose homeopathic sagacity
With an ocean of zeal mixed his drop of capacity.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 370.

4 His zeal
None seconded, as out of season judg'd,
Or singular and rash.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 846.

But zeal moved thee;
To please thy gods thou didst it.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 895.

5 Zeal then, not charity, became the guide,
And Hell was built on spite, and Heav'n on pride.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 261.

6 A zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.
New Testament: Romans, x, 2.

I have more zeal than wit.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 56.

7 We do that in our zeal our calmer moment would be afraid to answer.

SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 17.

8 But zeal is weak and ignorant, though wondrous proud,

Though very turbulent and very loud.

SWIFT, Ode: Dr. Wm. Sancroft.

9 Not too much zeal. (Pas trop de zèle.)

TALLEYRAND. (SAINTE-BEUVE, Critiques et Portraits, iii, 324.) Sometimes quoted, Surtout pas de zèle, "Above all, no zeal."

10 We are often moved with passion, and we think it to be zeal.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

11 Persecuting zeal . . . Hell's fiercest fiend!
JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iv, l. 66.

12 Press bravely onward! not in vain
Your generous trust in human-kind;
The good which bloodshed could not gain
Your peaceful zeal shall find.
J. G. WHITTIER, To the Reformers of England. St. 13.

13 Zaccheus, he
Did climb the tree,
His Lord to see.

UNKNOWN, The New England Primer.

ZEPHYR

14 Where the light wings of Zephyr, oppress'd with perfume,
Wax faint o'er the gardens of Gál in her bloom.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 1.

While the wanton Zephyr sings,
And in the vale perfumes his wings.

JOHN DYER, Grongar Hill.

15 Let Zephyr only breathe,
And with her tresses play.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Song: Phœbus, Arise, l. 35.

16 And on the balmy zephyrs tranquil rest
The silver clouds.

KEATS, Sonnet: Oh! How I Love.

17 Zephyr with Aurora playing,
As he met her once a-Maying,
There on beds of violets blue,
And fresh-blown roses wash'd in dew,
Fill'd her with thee, a daughter fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonair.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 19.

A bowl of wine is wondrous good cheer
To make one blithe, buxom, and debonair.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Jealous Lovers.

18 Soft o'er the shrouds aërial whispers breathe,
That seem'd but zephyrs to the train beneath.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 57.

The balmy zephyrs, silent since her death,
Lament the ceasing of a sweeter breath.

POPE, Winter, l. 49.

19 As gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagging his sweet head.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 171.
